Ms. Graham was nominated for this new position in the beginning of July—nearly 6 months ago—after a thorough FBI investigation. Her record was clean as a whistle. Only then were allegations concerning both her work and her character raised. The Commerce Committee did their own check on top of that performed by the FBI because they received anonymous calls and letters raising these allegations never heard before. Let me repeat, these were anonymous charges. The Commerce Committee found absolutely no substantiation for these charges—I repeat, after a full FBI check—the second one, since Ms. Graham had been investigated previously for the position she now holds—the Commerce Committee, presented with anonymous allegations, thorough rechecked Ms. Graham's record. The Commerce Committee, like the FBI, twice, found Ms. Graham eminently fit for the position of Commissioner on the Consumer Products Safety Board. The committee unanimously—let me repeat, unanimously—reported her nomination favorably to the Senate floor. That occurred in mid-November. The time spent investigating the validity of the anonymous charges was considerable. The Commerce Committee's decision was certainly no rush to judgment. Now, however, what do we have but some of these same old allegations surfacing again, this time in the request of a Member of the other House for an investigation by the GAO.

In response to this request by a Congressman—the second Congressman signing the request, I am told, has disassociated himself from it—and given our background of experience in working with Ms. Graham, the clearance by two FBI checks, and the further investigation by the Commerce Committee, Senators STAFFORD, PELL, and myself, on November 22 requested the GAO to do a preliminary investigation. They were to ascertain whether the questions posed by a Member of the House had any basis in fact. If they did, we requested an investigation be completed within 2 weeks so that the Senate could proceed to consider a nomination pending since July. Let me put this bluntly: The GAO has not complied with the request of the Senate. It replied that it was unable to do the expedited 72-hour investigation. And, do you know why? Because the very Congressman's office which requested the investigation, which made serious allegations of misconduct, was "unable for a week and a half to turn over to GAO the names of those making the charges." Wouldn't it be reasonable to expect that, if anyone thought that allegations were serious enough to request a GAO investigation, they would have had the fact of those allegations close at hand, available to be put in the hands of the investigators. But, no, this did not happen—perhaps with an eye to the hastening calendar in an attempt to kill a nomination. And, apparently, GAO has gone along with this.

Also, I am very distressed with the character of the investigation GAO has conducted. Let me explain. On November 25, my staff and that of Senators STAFFORD and PELL met with the GAO investigators. These investigators assured the staffs that they were well aware that a political appointee need not meet "specific production quotas" nor rigid clocked hours. They guaranteed that no such questions would be asked. Yet, listen to the list of questions which have been asked: "What time does she come in in the morning?" "Does she get her hair cut on her lunch hour?" "When she is away on her beeper, then you really don't know where she is?" Rather foolish, aren't they? And, certainly, they are exact questions GAO had admitted they knew were irrelevant and inappropriate to ask. So, instead we have had foolish and unnecessary questions asked for 3 weeks. Certainly this does not speak well of GAO's respect for a Senate investigation. We should not allow this disrespect for the Senate to win the day.

Let me also read you a firsthand report of someone interviewed in this investigation, and someone who can certainly speak for Ms. Graham's job performance. The report is contained in a letter, dated December 11, 1985, from Secretary of Education Bennett to the Honorable Charles A. Bowsher, Comptroller General of the United States. The letter reads:

DECEMBER 11, 1985.

Hon. CHARLES A. BOWSHER,
Comptroller General of the United States, General Accounting Office, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. BOWSHER: During the time I have known Anne Graham, Assistant Secretary for Legislation and Public Affairs, she has fulfilled her duties with ability and integrity and has advanced the goals of the Administration. I am confident that the current investigation of the General Accounting Office, fairly conducted, will confirm my judgment of Anne's work. I hope that the GAO will fulfill the request of Senators Hatch, Stafford and Pell for an expedited investigation so that her record can be promptly vindicated.

It is remarkable to me that such sweeping allegations against Anne have surfaced now for the very first time, more than four years after she came into this position, and while her nomination to serve as a Commissioner for the Consumer Product Safety Commission is pending before the United States Senate.

In a meeting yesterday with two of your investigators, I advised them that I had no evidence to support the anonymous allegations of misconduct which have been made against Anne. I was then posed certain very general questions: Had I ever criticized her work? (I have criticized each of those under my supervision at some time or another.) Did I no longer take her with me to Congressional meetings? (Anne's nomination to the Consumer Product Safety Commission has been pending since July 1, and I have increasingly relied upon a number of different employees for such meetings.) Other pointed questions, in my view, raised clearly unfounded questions of personal character. Frankly, this line of questioning seemed to me to bear little relationship to specific issues of misconduct in office. The tone of one investigator in particular was, in my view, discourteous and disrespectful, raising my concern as to what impression was being left with junior employees of the Department who were also interviewed. I must especially take exception to the peremptory statement of your investigators that they were questioning Ms. Graham's general competence for both the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Department of Education positions. Is such "questioning" really within the purview of a GAO investigation?

I want to go on record regarding the invaluable assistance Anne has provided me over the past year, particularly during my transition from the National Endowment for the Humanities to the Department of Education. Anne's assistance was not limited to specific legislative or public affairs matters, for I have relied on her experience and judgment in countless matters of great importance to me. Had Anne not been nominated by the President to be a Commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, I would have been grateful to have her remain in her present capacity.

If there is anything further that I can do to help set the record straight, please do not hesitate to let me know.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. BENNETT.

Lest there be any doubt, one GAO investigator has admitted in front of my colleague, Senator STAFFORD, that, indeed, these were the questions asked of the Secretary.

Colleagues, certainly Secretary Bennett is correct in his complaint to the Comptroller General. Such an investigation is not within the purview of the GAO. The FBI had already satisfactorily completed such an investigation—twice. The Commerce Committee had rechecked when anonymous allegations surfaced. Both found Ms. Graham entirely worthy. Now GAO enters and pursues an investigation not pertaining to its charge and ranging improperly afield.

I strongly resent that the GAO has been this negligent in responding to a request from a coequal body, the U.S. Senate. It is very hard not to believe that, unwillingly or not, the GAO is letting itself be used for political purposes.

Let us go back to what the GAO admits it has found. It says that a few people make allegations; but many other people deny the validity of these allegations. On top of that, two Secretaries of Education have strongly praised both Ms. Graham's character and her performance at work. That evaluation was contained in the letter from Secretary Bennett which I just read. A similar laudatory evaluation was given by former Secretary of Education Bell in a telephone conversation with the GAO and which Secretary Bell confirmed in a phone conversation with Senator STAFFORD.

So, what do we have? We have a few allegations, all unproven, as the GAO investigators admitted last Thursday. And these allegations are positively denied by many others who have worked with Ms. Graham. Furthermore, two Secretaries of Education, on top of the FBI, and the Senate Commerce Committee, give her a clean and excellent rating. Whom should we trust? My colleagues, let me tell you, I'd put my trust in the FBI, the Senate Commerce Committee, and two Secretaries of Education.

How many of us would be confirmed for a position if unsubstantiated and positively contradicted allegations were to hold the day? How many of us can be sure that we would be free from someone spreading nasty rumors about us—absolutely none of us, I would venture to guess. This is certainly not a very good commentary on our system of government when unsubstantiated allegations can rule the day.

It is also not a good commentary on our system of government by law when one political body can misuse a supposedly independent agency to invade and impede the constitutional responsibilities of the President to nominate and the Senate to confirm appointees. This is particularly the case when the agency is exercising powers far beyond those it has by law.

This nominee has been found eminently qualified by all those legitimately charged with the task of making that judgment. Those of us who have worked with Ms. Graham for 5 years have every reason to agree with that evaluation. Let us get on with the business of the Senate, let us confirm this worthy nominee. I am pleased that many of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are in agreement. This is not a partisan issue. This is an issue of fairness to one individual caught in the midst of a personal vendetta and this an issue of protecting the constitutional prerogatives of this Chamber.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the full committee for yielding to me in connection with the nomination of Anne Graham. I simply wish to convey to my colleagues that during the past 5 years that I have served as chairman of the Education, Arts, and Humanities Subcommittee the committee staff has had fairly frequent contact with Anne Graham in connection with the business of the committee, that is educational matters at the Department of Education where she has been serving, and that generally—and I would say in every instance—the contacts between the committee staff and Anne Graham have been of a favorable nature. The work that has been done and the impression of her carrying out her duties at the Department has been very favorable.

Furthermore, it has been my privilege to know both of the Secretaries of Education who have served since 1980—Terrence Bell, the first Secretary, with whom I was on close and friendly terms; and, more recently, Secretary Bennett, who succeeded Secretary Bell, whom I am getting to know, and while we have had a few disagreements, I also find myself admiring the way he has carried out the Department.

In any event, I know both of the Secretaries quite well, well enough to be the recipient of their candid views on matters. Both of them have stated, not only to me, but to anyone who cares to interrogate them on the subject, that Anne Graham has carried out her duties to not only their satisfaction, but, in their opinion, in a very very good way while serving in the Department of Education.

It is also my understanding that Mr. DANFORTH is not here, but that, as chairman of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, which reported her to the Senate favorably for confirmation to be a Commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission for a term of 7 years, beginning last October 27, he feels she is well qualified to serve in that position.

So on the basis of her record at the Department of Education, as it is known to me with respect to educational matters, and on the basis of the statements given to the committee by two Secretaries of Education who served in that capacity during her tenure at the Department of Education, I urge the Senate to confirm the nomination.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, it is a pleasure for me to join my distinguished colleagues, the chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee [Mr. HATCH] and the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities [Mr. STAFFORD] in supporting the nomination of Ms. Anne Graham to the Consumer Products Safety Commission.

For over 4 years we have worked closely with Ms. Graham in her capacity as Assistant Secretary of Education for Legislation and Public Affairs. Throughout that period, my office and my concerns were always delat with fairly and equitably. Ms. Graham consistently performed the duties of her office well, and in a most responsible and responsive manner. Our experience in working with her was an excellent one.

I am fully confident that Ms. Graham will bring to the Consumer Products Safety Commission the same kind of competence, dedication, and zeal for quality in public service that she brought to the Department of Education. I urge that her nomination be approved.

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I wish to speak briefly on the pending business, the nomination of Anne Graham to be a Commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

On September 10, 1985, I chaired a Commerce Committee hearing on Ms. Graham's nomination. On November 14, the Commerce Committee unanimously reported Ms. Graham's nomination.

Based on her experience at the Department of Education, I expect Ms. Graham will be a valuable addition to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. As the Department's chief congressional liaison, she has demonstrated a high degree of sensitivity to the need for a close and efficient working relationship with Congress. In addition, she has remained constantly attune to the needs of the public and particularly State and local officials. I have no doubt that this appreciation for congressional and public views will stay with her in her new post. As she acknowledged during her confirmation hearing, a strong and flexible liaison effort among Federal, State, and local consumer officials best serves the Consumer Product Safety Commission in fulfilling its compliance, information, and education programs.

Anne Graham also understands the occasional difficulty in balancing the needs of manufacturers and consumers. She has indicated she will remain flexible in her dealings with industries subject to CPSC regulation and where feasible will work with manufacturers to develop voluntary product safety standards. But, in those instances where voluntary standards are inefficient Ms. Graham has stated she will have no hesitation about supporting Commission efforts to mandate product safety standards.

Mr. President, in a recent letter regarding Anne Graham, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett stated:

I want to go on record regarding the invaluable assistance Anne has provided me over the past year, particularly during my transition from the National Endowment for the Humanities to the Department of Education. Anne's assistance was not limited to specific legislative or public affairs matters, for I have relied on her experience and judgment in countless matters of great importance to me. Had Anne not been nominated by the President to be a Commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, I would have been grateful to have her remain in her present capacity.

Mr. President, Anne Graham will bring this experience and judgment to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting her nomination.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I rise to speak on this nomination.

I placed a hold on this nomination some time ago, and I wish to describe for my colleague the circumstances which led to that hold and to my opposition to proceeding on the nomination. I also wish to outline the reasons why I am now ending my opposition to his nomination.

As my colleagues are aware, certain allegations were made against this nominee during a hearing before a committee of the other body. Two Members of the other body, whom I regard highly and whose judgment I respect greatly, were concerned about the serious charges made against this nominee. Because of their concern, those two Members formally requested that the General Accounting Office conduct an investigation to determine whether there was any validity to the allegations. The GAO investigation is now underway.

Neither of those Members of the other body personally requested that I oppose this nomination or put a hold on this nomination. Upon learning of their actions and their concerns, I simply decided that the Senate should take a closer look at this nominee's qualifications and the charges that were made against her. I did not think the Senate should act on the nomination while such serious questions persisted.

Let me say that in normal circumstances I think allegations of the kind that were made against this nominee might not in and of themselves justify holding up a nomination even for a short time. However, if I may say this without a tone of partisanship, we have had a number of "klunkers" sent to the Senate by this administration. These have been a number of embarrassments because nominations have been rushed through without much consideration. Several times the Senate has come to believe that we should have taken a closer look at a nominee.

In light of the record of less-than-stellar appointments by this administration, I felt a stricter standard of scrutiny was justified for this nomination, as well as because of the allegations that had been made against her and the GAO investigation that is being conducted.

Several things have happened since I placed my hold on this nomination, however, that have caused me now to change my position. First the two Members of the other body who requested the General Accounting Office investigation have both said that their evaluation of the evidence against this nominee is such that they would not recommend her nomination be held up or opposed. Second, the General Accounting Office, despite urging on my part, and on the part of several of my colleagues to speed up their investigation, has not yet been able to substantiate the charges against the nominee. It is my understanding that GAO has encountered some difficulties in collecting information in an expeditious manner.

In an ideal world I would prefer that the Senate wait for the results of the General Accounting Office investigation before acting on the nomination. I remain concerned that the GAO may eventually substantiate the allegations against the nominee after the Senate has given its approval to her. Nevertheless, it is now clear that the GAO investigation will not be concluded before the Senate adjourns for the year. In light of the exceptionally strong support that the nominee has received from my colleagues, Senator STAFFORD, Senator HATCH, and Senator PELL, I think that when all the circumstances are taken into account, it is acceptable for us to go forward and end the delay over the nomination.

So I will no longer oppose this nomination.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAMM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Chair put the question on the nomination of Anne Graham?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the nomination of Anne Graham.

Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified that the Senate has given its consent to this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the next nomination.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE JUDICIARY

NOMINATION OF JAMES L. BUCKLEY TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CIRCUIT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of the nomination of James L. Buckley of Connecticut to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia Circuit.

The nomination will be stated.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James L. Buckley, of Connecticut, to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia Circuit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my strong support for James Buckley to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia.

Senator Buckley was born in New York City in 1923. He attended Yale College and served in the U.S. Navy as a commissioned officer from 1943 to 1946. He graduated from Yale Law School in 1949.

Following his formal education, Senator Buckley has compiled an impressive record in law, business and Government service. His Government service is particularly noteworthy in that he was elected and served as a U.S. Senator from New York from 1971 to 1977. From 1981 to 1982 he served as the Undersecretary of State for Security Assistance and as a Counselor. From 1982 to the present he has served as the president of Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty in Munich, Germany. He has served with distinction in all these positions.

Senator Buckley appeared before the Judiciary Committee on October 30, 1985, where he answered all questions in a direct and forthright manner.

Senator Buckley is an individual who has demonstrated honor, dedication, and integrity. I urge my fellow colleagues to vote in favor of James Buckley to be a U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the nomination of James Buckley to be U.S. circuit court judge for the District of Columbia. This nomination has posed a number of questions which involve the different roles a U.S. Senator is called upon to play. While I am confident of my decision to oppose this nomination, I would not be very candid with this body if I did not express some discomfort in that I consider Mr. Buckley to be extremely well-qualified for many other governmental positions, and in fact on two different occasions over the last 5 years I have supported his nomination to two other positions he has held in the present administration.

Mr. President, the solemn duty imposed upon U.S. Senators by our Constitution to the process of advise and consent is a responsibility which I and all others in this body take most seriously. For this reason the political considerations should have only slight if any bearing on this process. The fact that Mr. Buckley was my political opponent in the 1980 election for the U.S. Senate has had no effect on my decision to oppose this particular nomination.

To those who may feel that I am either seeking political retribution or letting Mr. Buckley, as some have suggested, off the hook too easily, I can only respond that my earlier support for Mr. Buckley, and my actions relative to other nominations do not substantiate these conclusions.

I have opposed very few Presidential nominees in the last 5 years. For positions in the executive branch I generally believe that the executive should be free to choose his or her administration free from the second-guessing based upon ideological or political differences. For these posts, these administration posts, Cabinet posts and the like, I looked in most instances to qualifications, potential conflicts and other such similar matters.

In the case of a lifetime appointment to a judicial postion, second only in importance to the U.S. Supreme Court, I believe that Senators have a higher responsibility, and that philosophical commitment does have a bearing. This court, this circuit court, and those whom we approve to sit on it will influence the policies of this Nation for decades to come. Quite frankly, I would have problems with anyone nominated to this court solely on the basis of ideology, whether conservative or liberal. Appellate judges interpret laws and the Constitution. They must be flexible to some degree in their approach to controversy so that their philosophies do not overwhelm their legal training and experience.

Based upon a review of Mr. Buckley's published record I am convinced that this nomination is being advanced almost exclusively for reasons of Mr. Buckley's ideological views. Whatever other qualifications and background as excellent as it is, Mr. Buckley is not a legal scholar who happens to hold strong conservative views.

Rather, this is a very ideologically conservative person who happens to be a lawyer. I am convinced further that he adheres to his principles with such rigidity and firmness that he would not be able in the future to exercise the judicial temperament to interpret our laws in relation to the changing mores of our society.

The court for which Mr. Buckley has been nominated has been given original jurisdiction in our judicial system for certain major Federal concerns such as the enforcement of the Voting Rights Act. During his service in this body, Mr. Buckley established a very consistent record of opposition to civil rights legislation and voted against extension, strengthening or even the preservation of the voting rights legislation at every available opportunity. I respect his purety of thought. I respect his position. But to place individuals to sit on this court which has original jurisdiction over these matters for years to come I think is going a step too far.

Based upon this record, I feel that the strength of his convictions, coupled with the lack of previous judicial record to evaluate, forces me to question his ability to undertake the unique mandate of this court.

Mr. President, the question may be asked as to whether I would oppose a nominee with credentials identical to Mr. Buckley except for philosophy. In the final analysis, Mr. President, no two nominees are alike, and my constitutents will obviously judge ultimately my philosophical consistency. I have acted with respect to Mr. Buckley's nomination in a manner which allows me to express my opposition. I have not chosen to delay this matter indefinitely and impose my will upon the U.S. Senate. I recognize that Senators have different tests which they apply to nominations. I hope that my colleagues will give very careful consideration to these remarks. If they share my views of our advise and consent responsibility, I trust they will join me in voting against this nomination to the Circuit Court of the District of Columia.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert two additional matters into the RECORD at this point, if I may.

One is a statement that would come from the second circuit in New York. Mr. Buckley is not being selected or nominated for that particular court. His nomination was moved from the second circuit to the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia. But I think it is relevant to point out that the American Bar Association's ABA Committe on the Federal Judiciary in considering Mr. Buckley for that position which arguably is a far less significant court than the district court in the District of Columbia, given the mandate of jurisdiction, rated Mr. Buckley the lowest passing grade, a C. The New York City Bar resolved tht Mr. Buckley be not approved for the position as he failed to prove possessing a sufficient background and experience for the position.

I think it is worthwhile to further note, Mr. President, that when Mr. Buckley's nomination was sent to the Senate for the D.C. District Court, the D.C. Bar, which has no organized subdivision for passing judgment on appointments to the Federal benches—they usually rely on the ABA for such evaluation—on December 14 wrote to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, asking for 30 days' delay due to the fact that the nomination was suddenly shifted from the second circuit to the D.C. circuit.

Again, I do not want to place undue influence or to suggest that these committees should have an overwhelming amount of influence over the Judiciary Committee or the U.S. Senate as a whole, but I do think they are relevant. They should certainly be a part of this record.

Last, Mr. President, if I could, I would like to insert into the RECORD at this juncture the various statutes, and they are numerous. They cover some three pages, the various statutes that require that this circuit court be the court of jurisdiction. As I mentioned in my statement, Mr. President, they cover the Voting Rights Act, various civil rights acts, various issues involving environmental issues, surface mining, Outer Continental Shelf, and the like. I think it is extremely worthwhile for that to be part of the record.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that those materials be included in the RECORD at this juncture.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BAR,
Washington, DC, November 14, 1985.

Hon. STROM THURMOND,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN THURMOND: At its regularly scheduled meeting on November 12, 1985, the District of Columbia Bar Board of Governors discussed the status of the nomination of James L. Buckley to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The consensus of the Board reflected grave concern about the process by which this nomination has come to be before your Committee. Because the nomination was shifted at the last minute from the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the American Bar Association apparently did not conduct its usual inquiry of the lawyers and, as importantly, the Judiciary in the District of Columbia area regarding this nominee. The Board of Governors delegated to the Executive Committee of the Bar the forwarding of a resolution reflective of that concern, including a request that specific action be taken by your Judiciary Committee. The Executive Committee met immediately following the Board meeting on November 12, 1985 and passed the resolution which is attached.

I hope that it is clear from this Bar's previous correspondence to and the testimony before your Committee that our concern is with the integrity of the process. As you know, the District of Columbia, whose Bar numbers 44,000 lawyers, is without the great protection of senatorial privilege. Thus, reliance is made upon Senators from all states to guarantee that citizens of this jurisdiction and its Judiciary receive no less in fairness of process than the other citizens of this nation.

We thank you for your consideration of this most important matter.

Sincerely,

FREDERICK B. ABRAMSON,
President.

RESOLUTION OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BAR (UNIFIED) CONCERNING THE JUDICIAL NOMINATION PROCESS INVOLVING JAMES L. BUCKLEY TO BE A CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CIRCUIT

Whereas, the District of Columbia Bar, through its Board of Governors, respects the customary process by which judges are nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate to serve on the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit;

Whereas, the District of Columbia Bar is troubled by the process by which the nomination of James L. Buckley to that Court was evaluated and then submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary of the United States Senate;

Whereas, the District of Columbia Bar understands that the evaluation of James L. Buckley for that Court was undertaken and his nomination submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee without the customary inquiry and investigation undertaken of a nominee to a federal court in this jurisdiction; namely, that the American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary ("the ABA Committee"), as part of its full and complete investigation of the nominee, did not follow its customary practice of contacting members of the Bar of the jurisdiction in which the nominee will serve, and of contacting the Bar leadership and members of the Judiciary in that jurisdiction;

Whereas, although the ABA Committee reviewed James L. Buckley's candidacy, it reviewed him as a nominee for the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and not as a nominee for the District of Columbia Circuit for which he is now being considered;

Whereas, the District of Columbia cannot call upon senatorial privilege to defer the confirmation of nominees to federal courts in this jurisdiction until full screening has been completed and material problems resolved;

Whereas, the District of Columbia Bar, therefore, has come to depend on the ABA Committee's evaluation of judicial candidates as its primary means of commenting on a proposed nomination;

Whereas, in the absence of a thorough ABA Committee investigation, or similar investigation, which includes the opportunity for comment by the Bar and the Judiciary in the District of Columbia, the 44,000 lawyers of the District of Columbia Bar and the citizens of the District of Columbia are denied an important means to screen a nomination to a court within the jurisdiction;

Now, Therefore, be it resolved That the District of Columbia Bar requests that the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate or the Senate itself, as appropriate, in order to preserve the integrity of the judicial nomination process:

1. Delay action for thirty (30) days on the nomination of James L. Buckley to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit; and

2. During that period, (a) request that, with respect to the nomination, the ABA Committee conduct its customary investigation of a potential nominee to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit by contacting its normal and usual sources of information, including the leadership of the District of Columbia Bar (Unified), the Judiciary in the District of Columbia, the organized voluntary bar associations of the District of Columbia and individual lawyers who practice in the District of Columbia, or (b) itself undertake a thorough investigation of James L. Buckley, including the making of the contacts and the obtaining of the information that the ABA Committee normally would make and obtain as indicated above.

NEW YORK CITY BAR ASSOCIATION RELEASES JUDICIARY COMMITTEE EVALUATIONS OF JUDGE FRANCIS X. ALTIMARI AND FORMER SENATOR JAMES L. BUCKLEY IN CONNECTION WITH THEIR PROPOSED NOMINATIONS AS JUDGES OF THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

New York, New York, September 20, 1985 . . . The Chair of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, Justin N. Feldman, today reported that at a meeting of the Committee held on Thursday evening, September 19, 1985, to evaluate the qualifications of Judge Francis X. Altimari and former Senator James L. Buckley for appointment to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the Committee adopted the following resolutions;

With respect to Judge Altimari:

Resolved, That Francis X. Altimari be approved for the position of Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit; with respect to Mr. Buckley:

Resolved, That James L. Buckley be not approved for the position of Judge of the United States Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, by reason of his failure affirmatively to demonstrate that he possesses the professional background and experience required for the position he seeks. Although Mr. Buckley has supplied certain of the requested biographical information, his refusal to submit to an interview has deprived the Committee of the opportunity to explore whether his experience, dedication, and other qualities would demonstrate his fitness for that position.

Mr. Feldman noted that the Judiciary Committee had completed its evaluations pursuant to the Association's By-Laws and in response to the request of the American Bar Association's Committee on the Federal Judiciary.

The Association's By-Laws provide that:

The Committee shall endeavor to secure the nomination, election, certification, or appointment of qualified candidates, to prevent the nomination, election, certification, or appointment of unqualified candidates, and to prevent political considerations from outweighing fitness in the selection of candidates for . . . the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. . . .

In accordance with its usual practice, the Committee is reporting its conclusions to the Committee on the Federal Judiciary of the American Bar Association, and to President Ronald Reagan, Attorney General Edwin Meese III, Senator Strom Thurmond and Senator Joseph R. Biden, respectively the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, and to New York's Senators Alfonse M. D'Amato and Daniel P. Moynihan.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, let me say in conclusion, if I may, to my colleagues, as I know there are others who may want to speak on this nomination, admittedly as I said in my statement this is somewhat awkward for a former opponent to be in opposition to this nomination. I stress once again that on previous occasions Mr. Buckley has been nominated for other positions. I have not only voted for his nomination in those cases, but I did so with some pleasure. I happen to have a great deal of respect for this individual. Too often those words are said on this floor as usually a forewarning of some devastating attack on an individual. That is not my purpose at all.

I am as deeply concerned about the lack of adequate legal background that this administration seems to be pursuing in suggesting nominations for our Federal courts. Again, it is not a question of Mr. Buckley's not being qualified for anything, but to place this individual on the second most important court in our land, with the unique jurisdictional responsibilities of this court, coupled with Mr. Buckley's strong ideological views, which in many ways, while I disagree with him, I respect his consistency.

I must tell my colleagues in the Chamber that during the 1980 election effort one of the things that I grew to respect about my opponent in that race was that he did not shift around from day to day, given shifts in public opinion and mood. You could count on him every single day regardless of where the winds were blowing to take his position and take it firmly and to argue it intelligently. I respect that. Too few people in our political environment today do not adhere to that same set of principles and explain their political convictions.

But it is that same sense of conviction, that same purpose of conviction which I respect so much in the political arena or in this Chamber, that concerns me about serving in the judiciary. There I think more temperance is needed, more temperance is involved and must be involved, particularly when you consider the jurisdiction that this court covers.

With those thoughts in mind, Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Connecticut is certainly my friend.

I want to say that Mr. Buckley is well qualified for this position. Mr. Robert Fisk, chairman of the Standing Committee on the Judiciary of the American Bar Association, was contacted concerning Senator Buckley's ABA investigation. Mr. Fisk stated that the ABA Standing Committee looks at the qualifications of the individual for the position to which nominated. The individual circuit for which the individual was nominated has no effect on the committee's deliberations.

The ABA committee was aware that Senator Buckley had been nominated for the D.C. Circuit and found him qualified for that position.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. THURMOND. I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we are today considering the nomination of a former Member of this body, Senator James L. Buckley, for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Former Senator Buckley is uniquely qualified for the post for which the President has wisely nominated him. In recent years, the District of Columbia Circuit has come to play a vital role in governmental affairs. This circuit is the appropriate venue for many challenges to Federal Government activities pertaining to both foreign and domestic policy.

By virtue of his experience in this body as well as his service for 4 years in various influential posts in the executive branch, including Under Secretary for Security Assistance at the Department of State and president of Radio Free Europe, he has acquired and demonstrated a sensitivity and understanding of the types of issues likely to be adjudicated before the District of Columbia Circuit. The District of Columbia Circuit has become a primary judicial body for reviewing Federal Government actions. Few individuals have had the diversity of legislative and executive experience that uniquely qualify former Senator Buckley to participate in judicial oversight of governmental decisions.

Former Senator Buckley's legislative experience will undoubtedly serve the Nation well on the court of appeals for another reason. Senator Buckley will grasp that legislatures have historically been as protective of minority interests and rights as have courts. Exemplary of this principle is the constellation of Federal statutes protecting minority interests enacted over the past few decades. The Civil Rights Act of 1964, the 1965 Voting Rights Act, the 1968 Fair Housing Act, the Age Discrimination Act of 1967, the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, the Higher Education Amendments of 1972, and the Civil Rights Attorneys' Fees Awards Act of 1976 are among the many legislative enactments whose beneficiaries are not majoritarian interests. Former Senator Buckley served in Congress from 1971-77 when many of those laws were enacted or amended. This will provide him with a personal insight into and respect for the legislative process with regard to these and other vital statutes.

For just a moment, I would like to add just a comment about the general subject of nominations by President Reagan. In connection with this nomination, we have heard many comments about the degree to which President Reagan is reshaping the judiciary. In fact, President Reagan has not had a disproportionate impact on the Federal bench. In 5 years, President Lyndon Johnson appointed 54 percent of the Federal judiciary. In the same period, President Reagan has appointed 30 percent. To give some other comparisons, President Carter appointed nearly 40 percent in 4 years—in other words, they had more impact in less time than President Reagan.

President Kennedy, too, appointed 31 percent of the Federal judiciary in 3 years. President Nixon appointed 45 percent in his term of office. These statistics illustrate that the orderly processes of judicial selection have not given President Reagan a disproportionate role in appointing Federal judges.

In conclusion, I commend President Reagan for appointing individuals of great merit to serve on the Federal bench. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor is an example of his insightful selection of judges. Former Senator Buckley falls into the same category.

I can name countless others because I believe he has done a very good job and the Justice Department as well. They range across the spectrum ideologically, politically, and otherwise. Senator Buckley, I think, falls in the same category.

I would not get too caught up in any bar association recommendations. I have seen some of the top minds in this world excluded by the bar and some who have not been very top have been given high ratings. So I do not think they should count too much. I think they are important in the process, but I do not think any bar, New York City Bar or the ABA, should make the decisions here. That is what we are here for.

I think anybody in this body who has served with the distinction Senator Buckley has and has served in the executive branch with the same distinction has a right to serve in the judiciary branch. I think he will do a good job.

I hope all our colleagues will support our former colleague and let him know that we expect him to do a good job, and get him on this bench, where we can replace a very good judge and keep this process moving.

I thank my colleague from South Carolina for his leadership in this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have already been ordered.

Who yields time?

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I yield such time as may be required by the able Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL], a member of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I rise in support of this nomination.

I did not have the privilege of serving with Senator Buckley when he was a Member of this body but I have observed his career over the years and find him to be outstanding in a number of different ways. As everybody knows, he was a graduate of Yale University and of Yale Law School. He is a member of the U.S. Naval Reserve, Under Secretary of State for Security Assistance and counselor to that office. Of course, he was U.S. Senator from New York from 1971 until 1977. He has also been president of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty since 1982.

Senator Buckley has served with distinction, with integrity, with dedication in every position he has held. He is well qualified by education, experience, and temperament for the position he has been nominated to. I am proud to be here today to support his nomination and look forward to the wisdom and insight he will bring to the Federal bench.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I yield such time as may be required to the able senior Senator from New York [Mr. MOYNIHAN].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I thank our distinguished chairman and President pro tempore.

Mr. President, I rise to support the nomination of the Honorable James L. Buckley for the distinguished position of circuit court judge for the District of Columbia. I shall speak not to his career, which is well known to this body and thoroughly set forth in hearings of the Judiciary Committee, where I had the honor to introduce him. If the Senate would not think this a diversion, I would like to speak to the personal qualities of a man against whom I ran for the seat in the U.S. Senate in 1976.

Mr. Buckley was born in New York City and, although he is now a resident of Connecticut, that is a somewhat porous border we have there, and people go back and forth with great advantage to both places.

He had earlier, in 1970, been elected to the Senate as an advocate of views which were thought perhaps unusual at the time, but which we have since seen rise to great levels of public acceptance and endorsement, even, in the decade that began 10 years later, in 1980. In 1976, it fell to me as a Democrat to run against him. Two things come to mind in terms of that campaign. The first is that it would have been the easiest of things for Senator Buckley, as he then was, to question my credentials by introducing what one might call procedural objections to my candidacy, to give the public, the electorate, some thought about what might be the scrupulousness of the person who was his opponent.

Until a bare 5 months before I became a candidate, I had been, a member of the Cabinet of President Ford, a Republican President. I had been that as a Democrat, in a Republican administration. I do not think anybody in this body would hold that against me. But even so, with perfect accuracy, one might have said, "Who is this person who has left President Ford's Cabinet not 5 months ago suddenly presenting himself as a Democrat?"

Certainly, I was then employed teaching in another State. I was nothing if not a New Yorker, a resident of New York. The home we owned, and still do, is in New York. My wife and I were registered in New York, and I had had a series of Presidential commissions which declare me to be Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, as Presidential commissions do. Still, one could have said, "What is this fellow from another State, albeit a bordering State, doing in this campaign?" There could have been a number of automatic responses from a number of persons, but no such response came from Jim Buckley.

It was not his view that such matters were relevant. He knew perfectly well I had served as a Democrat at the request of President Ford, and that this was a respectable thing for an American to do. He knew perfectly well that New York was my home; and that if I was working somewhere else, it was because that is where I could make a living.

But much more important, Mr. President—and I think important to the concerns of the Senate today—is that he and I were persons of pronounced differences of views on a wide range of issues: his being a deeply felt conservative philosophy, as it was generally described in those days and perhaps still is, and mine being more of a New York Democrat with the associations that come from being born and coming of age in the era of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

Well, it would be possible for Jim Buckley to have directed against me quite vehement, quite personal, and quite wounding charges of ideological unsoundness. He could have taken his view as one which was truth and suggested that opposing views were untruths.

He could have taken the view of the fanatic, defined by the political satirist Mr. Dooley as "a man who believes that God would agree with him if He knew the facts of the case."

There is a lot of that in our age, and there is a lot of that in this Chamber; yet none of that in Jim Buckley. He understands opinion. He understands disagreement, and he respects disagreement. He is interested in clarifying differences of opinion but not in misrepresenting or denigrating or smearing those who disagree with him. This is an honorable man. This is a man who understands, if I may say once again, the importance of principle. And while he may cleave with great conviction to one side, he is one of those whose conviction is that the other side has rights, too. I do not know what more important personal attribute a Senator might have.

In closing, Mr. President, may I say that he lost that election. It was not an easy thing. I cannot imagine a more painful thing for most of us. He, obviously, loved this place and served with distinction. He was admired here and was able to do many things that mattered to him, even though he was in the minority. I know in what high regard he was held in the Committee on Environment and Public Works, where I in effect succeeded him.

We were practically contemporaries. If he went to Yale and I went to City College, that was the fortunes of the time, and I may have had the better education. But what did he do to the man who succeeded him? Did he break off communications? Did he let this personal setback become a personal matter between the two of us? He did not. One of his first acts upon leaving the Senate—the next day after I had, in effect, come into the Senate—was to send me a copy of his book, "If Men Were Angels." I believe it is a line from the Federalist Papers; it is the position of Senator Buckley that men are not, and in that matter he cleaves closely to the views of the Founding Fathers. And that among other things, shows that he is a man capable of using precedent to the advantage of contemporaries, and that, too, is a quality of judicial temperament which I commend to this body.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I thank the distinguished chairman for giving me time to address the body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighteen minutes for the Senator from Connecticut, 9 minutes for the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DODD. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut such time as he may desire.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank my good colleague from Connecticut.

Mr. President, let me state at the outset that political philosophy is not an issue here. That has already been determined rather conclusively with Mr. Buckley's sound defeat at the polls in New York State in 1976 and again his sound defeat at the polls in Connecticut in 1980. So those issues were resolved outside this Chamber, as indeed they should, and they are not a matter for concern vis-a-vis this nomination.

Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the nomination of James L. Buckley to be a circuit judge for the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

The basis of my opposition is twofold: First, I have serious reservations about Mr. Buckley's legal experience, which in my view, is far from adequate for a lifetime appointment to the Federal bench. Second, I am troubled by Mr. Buckley's response to questions posed to him by the Senate Judiciary Committee, which call into question his objectivity and his judicial temperment regarding certain philosophical issues.

Appellate judges are entrusted by our judicial system with the responsibility of interpreting the U.S. Constitution. This is a job that requires wholly independent thinking tempered by constitutional scholarship. It is in this application of founding principles to the questions of today that judges of the appellate bench are most often tested. This is not the exercise of the quiet, book-lined and paneled study that some may think. It is the most strenuous of processes, the subject of intense debate and the object of intense pressure from very powerful political forces.

We in the Senate with the responsibility of advice and consent can obviate this pressure on the Federal bench in limited fashion. Most importantly, we can approve for appointment those men and women of inner conviction and tested ability in the trenches of the legal system; the trial lawyers of the Nation's courts, judges of lower jurisdictions and even proven arbiters and scholars from the Nation's political and economic community.

Mr. President, on all these scores, Mr. Buckley falls short. Not by a small amount, but by an embarrasing and woefully inadequate amount. Mr. Buckley has never tried a case in court, except, and I quote the nominee himself, "other than representing a few obstreperous Yale students in the New Haven city court."

A man we consider today for perhaps the most active Federal appellate bench in the Nation has never appeared in Federal court, has never argued a case before a jury and indeed, answered "not applicable" when he was asked about the number of cases he tried to verdict or judgement.

Mr. President, the job of the Senate in these matters is not to count the number of jury trials or days in court and approve judges based on the bottom line. The judgment of the Senate concerning a lifetime appointment to the appellate bench must be applied with an understanding of a nominee's principles and probable judicial temperament.

Again I remind my colleagues of the great pressure on the Federal courts to bring their view of the Constitution and the role of the judiciary in line with the passing political majority. This pressure is wrong and, unfortunately, it has the support of the nominee before us today.

Mr. Buckley told the Judiciary Committee he is concerned about judicial activism. He said, "abrupt changes in the interpretation of constitutional provisions or statutes, and the imposition of novel remedies have the effect of depriving the law of that element of certainty and predictability that should be one of its most important functions."

Mr. President, the approval of Mr. Buckley will inject elements of "certainty and predictability" to the D.C. circuit court of appeals, but it will do so at the expense of insight and experience. We can predict what his rulings will be in cases involving a woman's right to choose an abortion. His ideology is one of strong opposition to this right. And we can be certain from his testimony that he will not recuse himself from such cases. There is no need to recount to my colleagues Mr. Buckley's rigid opposition to civil rights and voting rights legislation. His résumé of political activity is full.

But, Mr. President, his résumé of legal activity is empty and for that reason I urge this nomination be rejected. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wonder if the distinguished Senator from Connecticut is through.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that?

Mr. DODD. I do.

Mr. THURMOND. Are there any other speakers?

Mr. DODD. There may be one other Member on this side I am aware of who may wish to address this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time will be charged against both sides.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I know of no further requests on this side.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I will make a brief response.

After Senator Buckley graduated from Yale Law School, he became a member of the bar and has been a member of the bar for 35 years. During this time, he practiced law for a number of years.

He has been connected with business organizations. He has served as U.S. Senator, and he has served in the U.S. Department of State.

He also served his country in uniform in the U.S. Naval Reserve for 3 years.

Mr. Buckley is a well-rounded man. He is a student. He will make an excellent member of the circuit court of appeals, to which he has been appointed.

Mr. Buckley has the highest regard for individualism and individual rights, and I am sure he will stand for the civil rights and humanitarian rights of people everywhere. We are very proud to recommend him to the Senate.

The Senate Judiciary Committee reported his nomination without any objection. He has been appointed by the President of the United States, he has been approved by the Judiciary Committee, and now we ask the Senate to approve him and send this fine man to the circuit court of appeals, where we feel he will make an outstanding record.

Mr. President, if there are no further speakers, I suggest that we yield back the remainder of our time and vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield back his time?

Mr. DODD. I yield back my time.

Mr. THURMOND. I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time have been yielded back, the question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of James L. Buckley, of Connecticut, to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia Circuit? On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. EAST] and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI] are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. MATHIAS] is absent on official business.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN] is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Florida [Mr. CHILES] is absent because of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 84, nays 11, as follows:

BRADFORD MORSE

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, in my tenure as U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations, I was privileged to work with distinguished and learned diplomats from every part of the world. Among the finest of those was our administrator of the United Nations Development Fund, Bradford Morse. In 13 years at the United Nations, Brad Morse compiled what is probably that organization's most impressive record of achievement. The successes he engineered, particularly in his post at the development fund, are too numerous to list. Suffice it to say that the positive influence of his leadership has been felt in over 150 nations, and in New York, Brad is recognized for helping erase the United Nations' problems with indebtedness.

Mr. President, this year marks the 40th annivesary of the entry into force of the U.N. charter. In that organization's history, many have been quick to criticize its operation, its intent, and indeed its very existence. The career of Bradford Morse, happily, reminds us of the effectiveness and importance of the United Nations in so many areas.

I was especially pleased to read a story about Brad Morse's many accomplishments and his plans for a much-deserved retirement in Tuesday's New York Times. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD, for Bradford Morse is a man of tremendous ability and exceptionally fine character. He is a credit to his profession and to his country, and he will be greatly missed.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Nov. 19, 1985]

AMERICAN RETIRING AT U.N.: 13 SATISFYING YEARS

(By Elaine Sciolino)

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Bradford Morse, the highest-ranking American official employed by the United Nations, says that when he retires next year he will be leaving behind one of the most successful agencies in the United Nations system.

"You name it, we did it," Mr. Morse, the head of the United Nations Development Program, which helps finance and administer development projects in more than 150 nations, said in an interview.

From projects in Colombia that have trained 2 million people in 300 different vocations, to investigations into the migration patterns of maize-eating red locusts in Africa, his program's achievements can be described in one word, said Mr. Morse: "Unbelievable."

The high point of his 13-year career at the United Nations was the building of hundreds of miles of secondary roads in Senegal, Mauritania, Mali, Burkina Faso and Gambia, with a locally available material, lignite. "It saves thousands of lives because we were able to get food supplies to people in remote areas during the recent drought," he said.

His "bluest days" came when it seemed impossible for Rwanda to produce a natural pesticide from a homegrown flower petal, a project that eventually succeeded.

Earlier today, in a news conference, Mr. Morse said with pride, "I have been able over these years to persuade the world that the human dimension of development is the critical dimension."

During his tenure at the agency, he has been credited with helping to eliminate the organization's financial deficits, and in recent years, he focused the agency's attention on the problems of debt and obstacles to economic growth in the so-called least-developed countries.

"I leave at a time when the United Nations Development Program—and I can say it with some degree of modest satisfaction—is in excellent shape compared to what it was a few years back when I first took over what was then a bankrupt organization," he said.

Mr. Morse also announced that contributing countries had pledged a record $736 million to the agency's projects for next year, $36 million over the agency's goal.

Mr. Morse, who also heads the United Nations Office for Emergency Operations in Africa, which coordinates relief for famine-stricken nations in Africa, expressed disappointment that donor nations did not pledge more money for nonfood items related to health, water, agricultural development and logistics.

"We would have liked to see a lot more money provided by the donor countries for nonfood needs," he said. "The emergency is not over by any means."

Despite the fact that harvests are better, he said, money will be much more critical next year as many countries begin to tackle the problems of internal economic development. "We have now pretty much overcome the immediate relief aspect of the emergency," he said, but added, "The real problem in Africa has been and continues to be a crisis of development."

Mr. Morse, a former Republican Congressman from Massachusetts who is 64 years old, cited personal reasons for his decision to retire before his mandate was over at the end of 1987.

"It is an appropriate time for change," he said. "I'm not as young as when I started. I have a young daughter that I hardly know and want to get to know."

Upon his retirement, Mr. Morse will become president of the Salzburg Seminar, an American-funded organization based in Cambridge, Mass., that brings together politicians, academics and businessmen from countries in the West, the Soviet bloc and developing countries.

Mr. Morse said he presumed the United States would try to keep his position at the United Nations for an American.

Mr. Morse refused to speculate on who might be a possible successor, but said it should be "a woman or a man who has a very deep concern about the state of the world and who has confidence that something can be done to overcome the imbalances that exist."●

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MATTINGLY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, the Senate is in executive session. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

NOMINATION OF J. STEVEN GRILES TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 582, the nomination of J. Steven Griles, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the nomination?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I will not object—this nomination has been cleared on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nomination will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

J. Steven Griles, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the nomination.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I strongly support the nomination of J. Steven Griles to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior. This is an outstanding nomination by the President which will bring a man of demonstrated abilities to one of the most difficult and thankless positions in the Department. Mr. Griles has complied with all requirements of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. He has appeared before the committee in hearings on December 4, 1985, and responded fully and forthrightly to all questions asked of him. The committee considered his nomination in an open business meeting on December 11, and ordered the nomination favorably reported to the Senate.

Mr. President there has been an enormous amount of controversy surrounding the activities of the Office of Surface Mining and the Minerals Management Service. Mr. Griles has, I believe, done an outstanding job during his service at the Department to improve the activities of those two agencies. He has worked with the Congress and has always been responsive to questions and concerns. Under his leadership, the Congress has received several option analyses to assist us rather than just a take it or leave it approach. I deeply regret that some wish to vent their frustrations at the almost impossible task of managing OSM and MMS on Mr. Griles. He is far and away our best hope of seeing improvements.

Mr. President, there has been considerable discussion, debate, allegations, innuendo, and outright accusations directed at Mr. Steven Griles relative to his activities during his brief tenure as Deputy Director of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement [OSMRE] in the Interior Department. While there is no question that there are serious problems with respect to the Office of Surface Mining and its implementation of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, I am convinced that Mr. Griles did not create these problems.

Anyone who takes the time to consider that the 1977 act is 87 pages of the most detailed, comprehensive and complex provisions to pass the Congress in recent memory; not to mention the fact that there are over 500 pages of rules currently in the Code of Federal Regulations that have been promulgated to implement the act; not to mention the fact that the act has been, and continues to be litigated, often resulting in regulations being modified and reissued; not to mention the fact that more rulemaking is in the offing; not to mention that there have been several changes in the leadership and staffing of OSM since its inception in 1978.

Consider, also, that for those of us in Congress and the executive branch who labored with the drafting of this act over several years it is still difficult to comprehend most of its provisions. I can't fathom what the various coal producing States must have thought when this law began to be implemented within their boundaries in the early days following its enactment, let alone the small coal operators who had to comply with its provisions. More importantly, the Federal inspectors who were hired to enforce the law at that time were too few and many of them inexperienced. At its peak size, the Office of Surface Mining employed approximately 220 inspectors, the majority of which were located in Appalachia. At the same time, the agency was charged with inspecting approximately 15,000 mines.

The Office of Surface Mining has never had sufficient inspection and enforcement personnel and resources to meet its statutory mandate to conduct an annual, fixed number of inspectors of each mine site. What does this mean? It means that some abuses were occurring unobserved by OSM. Was this the fault of the Director of OSM in charge at that time or was it the fault of Congress for not providing the manpower and money to effectively implement the law? Did those problems go away with the subsequent appointment of a new Director? The answer is that some were rectified but others were not. Those that were not were inherited by subsequent Directors. The Energy and Natural Resources Committee expects to confirm yet another Director of OSM early next session. Will he be blamed for the problems of the past? I certainly hope not.

As I pointed out earlier, considerable criticism was lodged against Mr. Griles during this confirmation hearing before my committee with respect to problems allegedly created by him during his tenure with OSM as Deputy Director. These critics dwelled only on the perceived negatives of Mr. Griles' tenure at OSM and conveniently omitted any of the positives so as to suggest that his entire tenure was one of undermining or circumventing the effective implementation of the 1977 act. In an effort to bring some balance to an otherwise negative hearing report, I asked Mr. Griles to provide for the record a list of positive or significant accomplishments that were achieved during his tenure at OSM.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the question I put to Mr. Griles and his response.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Q. During your testimony, your role at the Office of Surface Mining (OSM) was called into question. Didn't OSM have a number of significant accomplishments during your tenure as Deputy Director and since that time? What were some of these accomplishments and what role have you played?

A. I believe that OSM has had several notable accomplishments since 1981. Major improvements have been made in the State and Federal regulatory programs, regulatory reform, enforcement, the AML program, and the administration of the agency.

STATE AND FEDERAL REGULATORY PROGRAMS

In early 1981, more than three years after the creation of OSM, only 12 percent of the coal mines in the country were subject to the full requirements of the Surface Mining Act's permanent program. 88 percent were still under the weaker interim program standards. By the end of my tenure at OSM in 1983, all coal mines in the major coal producing States were subject to the more stringent requirements of the law by virtue of approval of State programs for those States.

In a number of instances, the State programs were approved subject to conditions. Since 1981, the States have met 272 of the 296 conditions imposed, thus assuring that national standards are incorporated in State programs and imposed on all mining operations.

Another important accomplishment is the approval of seven cooperative agreements for the regulation and control of surface coal mining by States on Federal lands within those States' borders. No cooperative agreements existed prior to 1981. These agreements minimize duplication of State and Federal regulatory efforts and provide uniformity in the areas of intermingled State, Federal and private land ownership.

Another significant accomplishment was the implementation of Federal programs for nine States which did not choose to implement State programs, but which do have coal reserves. This major policy decision and accomplishment assures the public that all coal mining is controlled under SMCRA and provides full knowledge to the private sector of the regulatory requirements for coal mining. OSM has also promulgated a Federal program for Tennessee and taken direct responsibility for enforcement of part of the Oklahoma State program. These actions have proved that this Administration will require primacy States to enforce the law.

REGULATORY REFORM

In 1981, a regulatory rewrite was undertaken, partly as a result of rulings in litigation over OSM's 1979 regulations. Under these earlier rulings, a substantial number of regulations had been remanded by Judge Flannery, and many others were voluntarily withdrawn. The regulatory gaps which resulted had to be filled. In other instances, the 1979 rules were too rigid and burdensome and did not recognize important differences among the various regions and States where coal is mined.

The success of this effort is evident in that the more than two-thirds of the rule changes adopted in 1983 form a vital part of OSM's regulatory program and remain in place today. Many of these gave the States more involvement and flexibility in designing and administering their regulatory programs, thus carrying out Congress' stated aim to establish a national program that could be tailored to particular local conditions. Other changes curbed program abuses such as those associated with the two-acre exemption. These, too, remain in effect today. In addition, a number of standards adopted by OSM were more workable than their predecessors, benefiting OSM, the States, coal operators and the environment.

ENFORCEMENT

When I arrived at OSM in 1981, I found numerous problems. Enforcement records were in shambles. For example, no policy existed for assessing, processing or collecting the "megabuck" enforcement cases. All of the "megabuck" violations were issued between 1977 and 1980; they now total as much as one-third of the total outstanding debt of OSM. In addition, the "megabuck" enforcement cases and other violations resulting in huge civil penalties owed to the agency were written in confusing and inconsistent ways, and the records were disorganized and located haphazardly in regional offices and the Washington office.

Since that time, substantial progress has been made in the management of OSM's enforcement responsibilities. In 1982, OSM adopted a rule authorizing the agency to issue an immediate cessation order to coal mine operations mining without a permit. These operations are better known as "wildcat" mines. Prior to adoption of that rule, OSM had to go through the long administrative process of issuing a notice of violation before issuing a cessation order.

In 1982, I established a task force and hired a criminal investigator to address wildcat mining. Through that effort, we provided expert advice and personnel to key Kentucky State officials. Our efforts led to the indictment of 12 illegal operators and the confiscation of more than $900,000 in equipment from illegal operators.

Also in 1982, I assisted in drafting a rule to limit the scope of the two-acre exemption so as to curb that abuse. That rule was successfully defended in litigation which resulted in a landmark Court of Appeals decision preserving OSM's entire regulatory scheme controlling abuses of the two-acre exemption. In 1985, although I was not then directly responsible for OSM, I recommended to the Secretary settlement of the two-acre exemption litigation. That agreement established a rational method for correcting the environmental degradation caused by two-acre abuses, so that we were able to avoid the possible necessity of opening up SMCRA to amendment.

In 1984, although, again, I was not directly responsible for OSM, I recommended to the Secretary settlement of the "Parker" and "Gasch" "megabucks" cases. As a result of those settlements, it is my understanding that OSM has prioritized its enforcement efforts by first pursuing those who are responsible for correcting unabated cessation orders. These gross abusers and all operators who owe civil penalty or abandoned mine land fees are being placed on a computerized list, which OSM will use to prevent those persons from obtaining surface mining permits until they have corrected previous violations and paid the fees or penalties. In addition, OSM is also pursuing injunctive actions and some criminal prosecutions against those who appear to have adequate resources to correct violations. Moreover, OSM is promulgating several crucial enforcement-related rules, including rules concerning permit conditions, individual civil penalties, and the definition of "ownership and control." Additionally, OSM entered into a Memorandum of Understanding with the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) under which TVA has agreed not to purchase coal from mine operators who fail to abate violations.

ABANDONED MINE LANDS (AML)

In order to begin immediate correction of the past abuses of surface mining, we established a process in 1981 to shorten the time for approval of State AML programs. Prior to that time, the AML program was virtually nonexistent. Since that time, OSM has awarded almost $750 million in AML grants to the States. 85 percent of all emergency AML projects have been started since 1980.

Another accomplishment was the development and approval of the Centralia mine fire project. That project has resulted in 175 homeowners being relocated. 167 more have gone through closing procedures which will assure their personal safety and, hopefully, a better future.

ADMINISTRATION

In 1982, OSM entered into what I believe to be the first contract in the Federal Government under the Debt Collection Act for debt collection by a private contractor. This contract was intended to supplement OSM's workforce with private sector experts and to provide information on companies to maximize our ability to collect overdue AML funds.

In 1981, the Secretary authorized the establishment of a network of 13 State liaison officers and two technical centers to replace cumbersome regional operations. Since each State primacy program is unique and requires specialized knowledge and understanding of local and regional conditions, this realignment allowed OSM to have top agency officials and staff in each major coal-producing State—not only to provide State assistance, but also to assure proper enforcement of the Act.

In 1982, OSM assumed control over its own accounting systems and operations. Prior to that time, another Federal agency had provided those services. During 1981, I discovered that the accounting information being generated was inaccurate and outdated. The new system corrected these problems. In 1984, OSM implemented the Treasury electronic funds transfer system for letter of credit payments, reducing State needs for cash on hand. OSM now also operates this service for two other Bureaus with grant programs.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, all is not well with the enforcement of the 1977 act but I believe that progress is being made. I recognize and abhor the fact that there continue to be some coal operators who continually and flagrantly violate the law. It is my hope that these habitual violators can be identified and dealt with expeditiously and with the full force and effect of the law. I am confident that Secretary Hodel is committed to that end and I am equally confident that Mr. Griles is as well. Therefore, Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the confirmation of his nomination.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of J. Steven Griles, whom the President has nominated to be Assistant Secretary of Interior for Land and Minerals Management.

I have known Steve since 1979 when I began my service in the Senate.

He is an outstanding Virginian who brings to the position a wealth of experience in both State and Federal Government.

After graduating from the University of Richmond, Steve began his career in Virginia's Department of Conservation and Economic Development where he supervised the successful implementation of 14 major State programs.

In 1981 with my strong support, Steve came to Washington where he seved as Deputy Director of the Office of Surface Mining for 2 years.

In 1983 he was promoted to Deputy Assistant Secretary of Interior for Land and Minerals Management.

Steve has been Acting Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals Management for the past year, the position for which he has been nominated by the President.

Mr. President, Steve Griles is a man of unquestioned integrity, super judgment, and exceptional knowledge.

I know he will do a good job for the American people, and I urge the Senate to confirm his nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of J. Steven Griles, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior?

The nomination was confirmed.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmation of the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ARMSTRONG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have just talked to the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and he has asked that we withhold any action on the short-term continuing resolution for a couple of hours, and I am certainly prepared to do that. I think the Government is functioning fairly well. I believe that by 5 or 6 o'clock we will have resolved that short-term continuing resolution, to carry us until either tomorrow night or Thursday evening.

It is also my hope that the House will pass the farm bill after they have disposed of the tax reform bill one way or the other and that we will be able to take action on the farm bill conference report tomorrow; also, that there will be a later conference today on the continuing resolution, and that we will complete it tomorrow.

I am advised by the Senator from New Mexico, Senator DOMENICI, that the reconciliation bill could be completed by late this evening and there is hope we could act on that tomorrow.

That leaves the farm credit matter which I had hoped to have disposed of by now, but there is still some minor disagreement over one or two provisions.

What I do not want to do, if at all possible, is to bring up the House bill and then have a free-for-all on the floor and reargue the entire matter on farm credit. So hopefully we can reach some agreement. There will be an amendment by Senators HELMS and ZORINSKY and an amendment by Senators BENTSEN and GRASSLEY. We will have a unanimous-consent agreement that we will propound later on this afternoon.

As to the nomination of Mr. Scanlon, I understand there are discussions going on between Senators PACKWOOD and DANFORTH. Perhaps that matter can be resolved by late this evening or tomorrow morning.

We are still hopeful that we can act on the Angola resolution, a resolution on the effective date of the tax bill in the event one should pass the House of Representatives, a resolution on Liberia, the so-called Medvid resolution, and maybe others that are in process that we do not know about.

RECESS UNTIL 4:15 P.M.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, since we do not have anything else to do, I move the Senate stand in recess until 4:15 p.m. today.

The motion was agreed to, and at 3:22 p.m., the Senate recessed until 4:15 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. ANDREWS].

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

(Mr. COHEN and Mr. HECHT occupied the chair during the quorum call.)

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1986

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, we are in the situation of trying to extend the activities of the Government for a brief term, until midnight Thursday night as one continuing resolution has been passed by the House. We are also in the process of trying to get a reconvening of the regular conference dealing with the big continuing resolution which was defeated in the House of Representatives last night.

The House of Representatives has appointed conferees, and in this instance they have reduced the number of conferees from 47, the number that came to the first conference.

I have cleared with the Senator from Mississippi, the ranking Democrat of the Appropriations Committee, a list of conferees to meet with the House, hopefully tomorrow morning, in order to resolve some of the differences that the House has identified to cause defeat of the continuing resolution last night.

That is basically the situation we are in. I will soon propound a unanimous-consent request to respond to the House to their call for a conference, along with a list of the conferees that will represent the Senate.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HATFIELD. I am happy to yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, this is not my issue and I am not here objecting to it. However, I see no other members on my party on the floor. I do see one other Senator.

Mr. HATFIELD. And he is a member of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I am advised by staff that the question of the conferees has not as yet been resolved. I know the staff has indicated to me that they were trying to resolve who those conferees were. I would appreciate my colleague's withholding action temporarily until I can obtain the answers.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I will be very happy to acquiesce to the request of the Senator from Ohio. Just to make the record clear, I would not want any reflection upon the Senator from Mississippi, the ranking member of our committee, that somehow he has not cleared or has not handled this case properly.

Let me assure the Senator concerning the Democratic member of our committee whom we all revere, Senator STENNIS, that there should be no implication by the Senator's remarks that he has not performed his duties fully and completely and with integrity.

Mr. President, let me say again that the Senator from Mississippi, the ranking Democrat of our committee, has cleared this proposed list of conferees.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I fully understand. I am not on the floor to in any way question the representations concerning the Senator from Mississippi. I do not know anything at all about the facts. The staff came to my desk and indicated there was some problem. I am merely attempting to suggest to the manager of the bill that in making his unanimous-consent request that he withhold temporarily until the Senator from Ohio can see to it that Senator BYRD, Senator STENNIS, or someone familiar with the facts in this issue can come to the floor.

That is the reason I am on the floor making this statement. I am not questioning the chairman's representations, Senator STENNIS' representations, or those of anyone else.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed as if in legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on House Joint Resolution 465.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the resolution (H.J. Res. 465) entitled "Joint resolution making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes", and ask a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. WHITTEN, Mr. BOLAND, Mr. NATCHER, Mr. SMITH of Iowa, Mr. ADDABBO, Mr. YATES, Mr. OBEY, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. CHAPPELL, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. DIXON, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. CONTE, Mr. MCDADE, Mr. MYERS of Indiana, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. KEMP, Mr. REGULA, Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska, and Mr. SKEEN be the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I observe that I wish we could proceed as orderly on the floor as the desk proceeds.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate further insist on its amendments to House Joint Resolution 465, agree to the conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and that the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate. This has been cleared on both sides.

The motion was agreed to, and the Chair (Mr. HECHT) appointed Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. WEICKER, Mr. MCCLURE, Mr. GARN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. STENNIS, Mr. BYRD, Mr. PROXMIRE, Mr. JOHNSTON, Mr. BURDICK, and Mr. LAUTENBERG conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have had inquiries on both sides of the aisle as to the program for the remainder of the evening. I wish I could indicate that we could leave here very quickly, and I think we can, if we could bring up the farm credit legislation. I think it is worked out with all the people who have an interest in it. I am not certain that there would be a rollcall on that measure. There could be, if someone demanded a rollcall. Then the short extension of the continuing resolution could be disposed of.

So far as this Senator is concerned, that is all we need to do, if it can be worked out. It might require debate.

We have asked the principals in the farm credit matter to come to the floor; and if we cannot get a unanimous-consent agreement, I think we can start on the bill itself, and it could be completed within 10 minutes.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the distinguished majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. DOLE. I yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I think the leader is aware of the fact that the House of Representatives in the continuing resolution has indicated its intent to terminate the activities of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation.

There is a rumor around this body, and I do not know where else, that we are not moving in connection with the continuing resolution because a meeting is being held either at this moment or shortly by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation in order to authorize two projects which would amount to something around $700 million.

I rise to inquire of the majority leader whether or not (a) he is familiar with that; and, (b) whether or not he could not move promptly with the continuing resolution so that we could cut off this expenditure of $680 million, or whatever the amount is, before that occurs.

The leader is aware of the fact that the White House has indicated it wants to terminate the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, and now the rumor suggests that the White House is blinking its eyes and agreeing to these two particular projects.

I do not think the Senate should be a party to it, and knowing of the leader's role on this whole issue in the past, and I am not at all suggesting he is a party to it, I wish to know whether we cannot move with dispatch and dispose of the continuing resolution and the Synthetic Fuels Corporation and save $700 million.

Mr. DOLE. I have not been a party to any discussion in that area.

But I think as soon as the chairman of the Appropriations Committee can work out a few details he is prepared to move on the short extension, as I understand it, and has been for some time. We are almost prepared to do that, as I understand it.

I am just indicating that if we can do that and the farm credit legislation, and anything else that might be done very quickly, and the wrap-up, that does not require extended debate or rollcall, we could do that this evening. I am also advised that the farm bill will not be taken up until tomorrow. The conference in the House of Representatives will be held tomorrow morning, and if there cannot be a conference on the continuing resolution until tomorrow morning there is no need to hang around here tonight unless people just do not have anything else to do.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the majority leader be willing to consider and accept a sense-of-the-Senate resolution that might be brought up promptly saying in so many words that the Synthetic Fuels Corporation should not be finalizing or acting in connection with any pending matters in view of the fact that the House of Representatives has already indicated its intent to terminate, the Senate has indicated its willingness to go along with respect to termination, there is an agreement in the conference committee on that issue, and the White House has indicated they are opposed to it.

I think sitting by and letting $684 million go out the back door while we are meeting really would be a reflection upon our own efforts in this respect. We are all working hard to balance budgets and save dollars, and I would be willing to have the majority leader or someone else indicate by a sense-of-the-Senate resolution that no hurry-up meeting should occur at 7 p.m. at night at the Synthetic Fuels Corporation in order to expend the taxpayers' dollars, or absent that I would hope that he might see fit to pick up the telephone and say to those who might be involved that this would be a rather negative reflection upon the Senate and Congress.

Mr. DOLE. I do not intend to move to it at this time. We have not even advised all the principals yet. So I will suggest the absence of a quorum here just momentarily. I want Members to know that I am being asked why are we here. I am not certain there is any good reason. We are here because for some reason we cannot get an agreement on farm credit, and I guess there is still some problem with the continuing resolution.

I am going to suggest the absence of a quorum and see if we can resolve those two matters. Then I would hope we could dispose of both by 7:30 p.m.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRIBLE). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed as if in legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Again, I say I am not trying to evade the question.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I understand.

Mr. DOLE. I think it might be better addressed to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I just saw him leave for a moment. I think he is in the cloakroom.

Mr. DOLE. He is not hiding.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I know he would not do that.

Mr. DOLE. Let me suggest, first, if we can, we would like to move to farm credit. We again advise the principals we are prepared to do that. I would hope that we would be permitted to proceed on that matter as soon as the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ZORINSKY] and the Senator from North Carolina, [Mr. HELMS], and appropriate staff and other Senators are present. Senator BENTSEN has an interest in that, as does Senator GRASSLEY.

So, we tried to indicate to all the parties who have expressed interest that we would be taking it up shortly.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I certainly do not have any intention of standing in the way of orderly proceeding of the Senate, but I am very anxious to try to cut this matter off at the pass, if anyone has such a devious—and that is what it would be, a devious idea.

I certainly will yield the floor, but I would hope that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee might return to the Chamber so we might inquire of him as to why we are delaying action in connection with this continuing resolution.

May I ask the majority leader, would he be willing to have some understanding that just as soon as the chairman of the Appropriations Committee is ready to proceed, we would set aside the farm credit bill in order to take up this measure?

Mr. DOLE. Excuse me.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I was asking whether or not he would be willing to work out an arrangement where once we get on to the farm credit bill—it is the farm credit bill—that it would be set aside just as promptly as the chairman of the Appropriations Committee is ready to proceed. In fact, if the majority leader would not find it impertinent, I wish to suggest the absence of a quorum in order that I may inquire of Senator HATFIELD as to whether or not he is ready to proceed at this moment.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS—1986

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate turn to the consideration of House Joint Resolution 491, making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 491) making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, this is a simple extension of the expiration date of the last continuing resolution, Public Law 99-179, until midnight, Thursday, December 19, to allow time for the House and Senate to draft a new continuing resolution for the full year. Our first attempt was defeated last night.

This joint resolution also includes language adopted by the House prohibiting the Synfuels Corporation from expending funds in this or any other act up to midnight Thursday or to award financial assistance or payments with respect to projects or modules under the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation Act of 1980.

Mr. President, this is a matter that I would like to have had done much earlier today but, in order to try to get a clearance on both sides of the aisle, it has taken up time. And I am afraid, even at this moment, we do not have clearance on the other side of the aisle. So I just wish to make it very clear and make the record that the Appropriations Committee has been ready to act, with the support of Senator STENNIS, the ranking Democrat of the committee, and myself, as chairman of the committee, for many hours.

I only apologize at this time to the Membership that we have not been able to get it to the floor until this hour of 7:07 p.m. As soon as we get a further clearance on the Democratic side of the aisle—we are now cleared on this side—we will be ready to act on the continuing resolution.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I have a parliamentary inquiry of the Chair. Assuming the Senate concludes its action on this joint resolution, which is a continuing resolution through Thursday, how long would it take for the enrolling clerk to conclude his responsibilities and get this down to the White House?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This being a joint resolution that originated in the House of Representatives, the joint resolution will be returned to the Enrolling Clerk of the House of Representatives and it is his responsibility to move forward from that point.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Chair.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I move the adoption of the continuing resolution. I have just been informed by the Democratic leader, the Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, that it is now cleared on the Democrat side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on the third reading and passage of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 491) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

FARM CREDIT AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1985

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 1884.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 1884) entitled "An Act to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1971, to restructure and reform the Farm Credit System, and for other purposes", do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Farm Credit Amendments Act of 1985".

TITLE I—PROVISIONS TO STRENGTHEN THE OPERATION OF FARM CREDIT SYSTEM LENDING INSTITUTIONS

CAPITAL AND FINANCING

SEC. 101. Part A of title IV of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 is amended by—

(1) amending section 4.0 to read as follows:

"SEC. 4.0. REVOLVING FUNDS; INVESTMENTS.—The revolving fund established by Public Law 87-343, 75 Stat. 758, as amended, and the revolving fund established by Public Law 87-494, 76 Stat. 109, as amended, and continued by Public Law 96-592, shall be merged and shall be available to the Farm Credit Administration for the purchase, on behalf of the United States, of capital stock of the Capital Corporation. The Farm Credit Administration may make such purchases of stock as the Farm Credit Administration determines, in its discretion, are necessary to achieve the purposes of this Act.";

(2) striking out section 4.1;

(3) in section 4.3—

(A) redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c); and

(B) by striking out the matter preceding subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 4.3. CAPITAL ADEQUACY OF BANKS AND ASSOCIATIONS.—(a) The Farm Credit Administration shall cause System institutions to achieve and maintain adequate capital by establishing minimum levels of capital for such System institutions and by using such other methods as the Farm Credit Administration deems appropriate. The Farm Credit Administration may establish such minimum level of capital for a System institution as the Farm Credit Administration, in its discretion, deems to be necessary or appropriate in light of the particular circumstances of the System institution.

"(b)(1) Failure of a System institution to maintain capital at or above its minimum level as established under subsection (a) may be deemed by the Farm Credit Administration, in its discretion, to constitute an unsafe and unsound practice within the meaning of this Act.

"(2)(A) In addition to, or in lieu of, any other action authorized by law, including paragraph (1), the Farm Credit Administration may issue a directive to a System institution that fails to maintain capital at or above its required level as established under subsection (a). Such directive may require the System institution to submit and adhere to a plan acceptable to the Farm Credit Administration describing the means and timing by which the System institution shall achieve its required capital level, but may not require merger or consolidation without a majority vote of the voting stockholders or the contributors to the guaranty fund of the institution.

"(B) Any directive issued under this paragraph, including plans submitted pursuant thereto, shall be enforceable under the provisions of section 5.31 of this Act to the same extent as an effective and outstanding order issued under section 5.25 of this Act that has become final.

"(3) The Farm Credit Administration may consider such System institution's progress in adhering to any plan required under paragraph (2) whenever such System institution, or an affiliate thereof, seeks the requisite approval of the Farm Credit Administration for any proposal that would divert earnings, diminish capital, or otherwise impede such System institution's progress in achieving its minimum capital level. The Farm Credit Administration may deny such approval where it determines that such proposal would adversely affect the ability of the System institution to comply with such plan."; and

(4) in section 4.4—

(A) redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(B) inserting, after subsection (b), the following:

"(c) For purposes of this part, the term 'bank' shall include the Capital Corporation.".

APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER

SEC. 102. Section 4.12 of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 is amended by striking out subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) The Farm Credit Administration may appoint a conservator or receiver for any System institution on the determination by the Farm Credit Administration that one or more of the following exists, or is occurring, with respect to the institution: (1) insolvency, in that the assets of the institution are less than its obligations to its creditors and others, including its members; (2) substantial dissipation of assets or earnings due to any violation of law, rules, or regulations, or to any unsafe or unsound practice; (3) an unsafe or unsound condition to transact business; (4) willful violation of a cease and desist order that has become final; (5) concealment of books, papers, records, or assets of the institution or refusal to submit books, papers, records, or other material relating to the affairs of the institution for inspection to any examiner or to any lawful agent of the Farm Credit Administration. The Farm Credit Administration shall have exclusive power and jurisdiction to appoint a conservator or receiver. If the Farm Credit Administration determines that a ground for the appointment of a conservator or receiver as herein provided exists, the Farm Credit Administration may appoint ex parte and without notice a conservator or receiver for the institution. In the event of such appointment, the institution, within thirty days thereafter, may bring an action in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the home office of such institution is located, or in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, for an order requiring the Farm Credit Administration to remove such conservator or receiver, and the court, shall on the merits, dismiss such action or direct the Farm Credit Administration to remove such conservator or receiver. On the commencement of such an action, the court having jurisdiction of any other action or enforcement proceeding authorized under this Act to which the institution is a party shall stay such action or proceeding during the pendency of the action for removal of the conservator or receiver.".

"(9) authorize, through its board of directors, the issuance and sale of obligations, including notes, bonds, debentures, capital notes, and voting or nonvoting securities, to the Secretary of the Treasury or the Farm Credit Administration, under such terms and conditions as shall be determined;

"(10) obtain insurance against loss;

"(11) modify or consent to modification with respect to the rate of interest, time of payment of any installment of principal or interest, security, or any other term of any contract or agreement to which it is a party or in which it has an interest under this Act;

"(12) borrow from any commercial bank on its own individual responsibility on such terms and conditions as it may determine with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration;

"(13) join with Farm Credit System banks in the issuance of System-wide notes, bonds, debentures, and other similar obligations under section 4.2(d) of this Act, or assume liability with respect to outstanding System-wide obligations. If it satisfies the requirements applicable to banks under section 4.3(c) of this Act, it shall be jointly and severally liable with the System banks for the payment of principal and interest on such obligations, and pay on such obligations any sums as may be called on by the Farm Credit Administration to make payments of principal or interest that any bank or banks primarily liable therefor are unable to make;

"(14) require other institutions of the Farm Credit System, through purchase of stock in, or obligations of, the Capital Corporation, to make funds available to the Capital Corporation to enable it to make financial assistance available to institutions of the Farm Credit System as provided in paragraph (15). The Capital Corporation may also assess at such times and under such circumstances as it deems appropriate, System Institutions for the purpose of covering its operating expenses not to include interest costs. The guidelines to be used by the Capital Corporation in obtaining funds from other institutions of the Farm Credit System for the purpose of aggregating resources to assist System institutions, to the extent practicable, shall give priority to obtaining funds through the use of transactions that require the Capital Corporation, on reasonable terms, to repay the contributed funds from surpluses accumulated by the Capital Corporation, and otherwise shall be in conformity with regulations issued by the Farm Credit Administration;

"(15) administer financial assistance under regulations of the Farm Credit Administration which shall—

"(A) include standards to ensure that, consistent with sound business practices and subject to the criteria established under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the available capital and reserves of System institutions are committed to providing financial assistance to those institutions of the Farm Credit System eligible therefor. The term 'available capital and reserves', as used in this subparagraph, shall not include capital stock, participation certificates and allocated equities held by borrowers that are not associations chartered under this Act;

"(B) establish criteria pursuant to which the Capital Corporation shall require other institutions of the Farm Credit System, through the purchase of stock in, or obligations of, the Capital Corporation to make funds available to the Capital Corporation under paragraph (14). Such criteria shall—

"(i) provide for an equitable sharing of the burden of such assessments or purchases, taking into account (I) the relative financial strength and ability to pay of the contributing institutions; (II) the effect, including the effect on loan interest rates, on current borrowers and members of each System institution of the loss of the use of the accumulated net worth of their institution; and (III) the effect on lending rates of financial assistance already provided to other System institutions; and

"(ii) be designed to ensure that (I) the capital strength, earning capacity, loanable funds and overall financial viability of each System institution providing funds to the Capital Corporation are maintained at such a level that credit shall continue to be available to eligible borrowers on reasonable and competitive terms taking into account the relative rates and terms available to them prior to investments in the Capital Corporation, (II) each bank shall continue to have access to funds in the public financial markets, and (III) each bank is able to maintain adequate financial resources to satisfy its liability on its own obligations and on that portion of systemwide notes, bonds, debentures, or other obligations for which it is primarily liable; and

"(C) establish criteria to be used in determining eligibility of System institutions for financial assistance from the Capital Corporation and the types and amounts of financial assistance that can be obtained from the Corporation. Such regulations shall provide that an institution shall be eligible to receive financial assistance when its financial condition has deteriorated to a point where its continued operation is jeopardized and the provision of such financial assistance is necessary to ensure that farm credit services will continue to be available to borrowers in the institution's territory;

"(16) purchase at fair market value from any other System institution, on the request of such institution, loans (or interests in loans) that have been placed in nonaccrual status and assets (or interests in assets) in the account for acquired properties;

"(17) require System institutions to sell to the Capital Corporation loans, assets, and interests described in paragraph (16) as a condition to receiving financial assistance from the Capital Corporation;

"(18) exercise all the rights and privileges of any System institution with respect to any loan which it has acquired or in which it has participated, including the adjustment of interest rates, compromise of indebtedness, waiver of default, and other such rights and privileges;

"(19) assume debt or other liabilities from System institutions in connection with the acquisition of loans or interests therein or other assets from such institutions;

"(20) refinance, reamortize, guarantee, or compromise indebtedness, and otherwise provide debt adjustment assistance, with respect to any loan to a borrower of a System institution purchased under paragraph (16) or participated in by the Capital Corporation, and, after a determination by the Capital Corporation that the borrower could not reasonably be anticipated to meet loan servicing charges under a refinanced, reamortized, or otherwise restructured loan under reasonable terms and conditions acceptable to the Capital Corporation, liquidate any such loan;

"(21) purchase from associations undergoing liquidation all assets which are performing loans not voluntarily purchased by other associations;

"(22) adopt a salary scale for officers and employees of the Capital Corporation, in accordance with the directives of the board of directors; and

"(23) deposit its securities and its current funds with any member of the Federal Reserve System or any insured State nonmember bank as defined in section 2 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and pay fees therefor and receive interest thereon as may be agreed.

The Capital Corporation shall have such other incidental powers as are necessary to carry out its powers, duties, and functions in accordance with this Act.

"(b) The powers of the Capital Corporation set forth in subsection (a) of this section, to the extent they authorize the financial assistance of any type to borrowers and System institutions, shall be limited after December 31, 1990, as provided in this subsection. The powers of the Capital Corporation to directly or indirectly increase the level of such financial assistance to a borrower or institution or to provide directly or indirectly any such financial assistance to a borrower or institution not receiving such assistance on December 31, 1990, shall terminate on that date. All other powers, including those necessary for management and orderly liquidation of commitments made and obligations incurred in providing such assistance to borrowers and institutions on or before December 31, 1990, shall remain in effect thereafter.

"(c) Officers or employees of the Capital Corporation, like other Farm Credit System employees, shall not be considered officers or employees of the Federal Government. Funds held by the Capital Corporation shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys.

"SEC. 4.28H. SUCCESSION OF THE CORPORATION.—On the issuance by the Farm Credit Administration of the new charter for the Capital Corporation under this part, the Capital Corporation shall succeed to the assets of and be liable for and assume all debts, obligations, contracts, and other liabilities of the Farm Credit System Capital Corporation chartered under part D of this title (referred to in this section as 'the predecessor corporation'), matured or unmatured, accrued, absolute, contingent or otherwise, and whether or not reflected or reserved against on balance sheets, books of account, or records of the predecessor corporation. The stock of the predecessor corporation shall be converted into stock of the Capital Corporation. The existing contractual obligations, security instruments, and title instruments of the predecessor corporation shall, by operation of law and without any further action by the Farm Credit Administration, the predecessor corporation, or any court, become and be converted into obligations, entitlements, and instruments of the Capital Corporation chartered under this part. To the extent that, on the extinguishing of liabilities assumed by the Capital Corporation under this section, and full performance or other final disposition of contract obligations under contracts assumed by the Capital Corporation under this section, there remain surplus funds attributable to such obligations or contracts, the Capital Corporation shall distribute such surplus funds among the System institutions that contributed funds to the predecessor corporation on the basis of the relative amount of funds so contributed by each institution.

"SEC. 4.28I. LIMITATION OF POWERS.—(a) The powers of the Capital Corporation under this part shall be exercised only for the purposes specified in this part and shall not be exercised in a manner that would result in the Capital Corporation supplanting the Farm Credit System institutions operating under titles I through III of this Act as the primary providers of credit and other financial services to farmers, ranchers, and their cooperatives.

"(b) Sales by the Capital Corporation of real property formerly securing a liquidated loan shall be conducted pursuant to guidelines adopted by the Capital Corporation that are compatible with the following criteria:

"(1) Notice of pending sales shall be made public.

"(2) Previous owners shall be advised of the pending sale and shall not be precluded from purchasing their former property.

"(3) The sale of real property acquired by the Corporation in large tracts shall be discouraged.

"SEC. 4.28J. AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.—(a) On certification by the Farm Credit Administration that (1) the Farm Credit System is in need of financial assistance to address financial stress of System institutions, (2) the System has committed its available capital surplus and reserves to address such financial stress of System institutions, (3) officers of System institutions have frozen their salaries and benefits, such freeze to remain in effect until the earlier of five years after the freeze begins or such time as the Secretary no longer holds any obligations issued by the Capital Corporation, and (4) the System has used such capital surplus and reserves to the extent that further contributions from, or losses incurred by, System institutions likely will preclude such institutions from making credit available to eligible borrowers on reasonable terms, the Secretary of the Treasury, in the Secretary's discretion, may purchase any obligations issued by the Capital Corporation under this part, as heretofore, now, or hereafter in force; and for such purpose the Secretary of the Treasury may use as a public-debt transaction the proceeds of the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as now or hereafter in force, are extended to include such purchases. The authorities provided to the Secretary of the Treasury by the preceding sentence shall be effective only to such extent or in such amounts as provided in advance in appropriation Acts. The Secretary of the Treasury, at any time, may sell, on such terms and conditions and at such price or prices as the Secretary shall determine, any of the obligations acquired by the Secretary under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such obligations under this section shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. Each purchase of obligations by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be on terms and conditions as shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the objectives that System institutions retain the ability to make credit available to eligible borrowers on reasonable terms and that banks of the System continue to have access to funds in the public financial markets.

"(b) The Farm Credit Administration promptly shall submit a copy of any certification made under subsection (a) to Congress, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall, not later than forty-five days after such certification is made, make known to the Congress and the Farm Credit Administration the Secretary's decision as to exercising the authority under subsection (a) and the reasons and documentation therefor, if that decision is not to purchase obligations of the Capital Corporation.

"SEC. 4.28K. INITIAL CAPITALIZATION.—The Farm Credit Administration shall provide for the initial capitalization of the Capital Corporation by requiring, in accordance with section 4.28G, institutions of the System to contribute capital to the Capital Corporation in such amounts and under such terms and conditions as the Farm Credit Administration, in consultation with System institutions, may prescribe.".

CONFORMING AMENDMENT

SEC. 104. Title IV of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 is further amended by inserting before section 4.2 the following:

"SEC. 4.1. REQUIREMENTS TO PURCHASE STOCK AND PAY ASSESSMENTS AND CONTRIBUTE CAPITAL TO CAPITAL CORPORATION.—The Federal land banks, the Federal intermediate credit banks, the banks for cooperatives, the Federal land bank associations, and the production credit associations shall purchase stock in, or obligations of, the Capital Corporation, pay assessments, make capital contributions, and take such other related actions as required by the Capital Corporation in the exercise of its powers under this Act. Any payment for retirement of stock so purchased, or repayment of obligations so purchased, by the Capital Corporation shall be distributed among all holders of such stock or obligations on the basis of the book value of the stock or obligations held by each such holder at the time of the distribution.".

CENTRAL RESERVE

SEC. 105. Part A of title IV of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2151 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 4.9 the following:

"SEC. 4.9A. CENTRAL RESERVE FOR FARM CREDIT SYSTEM.—(a) The Farm Credit Administration may, effective January 1, 1991, establish and maintain a central reserve for the Farm Credit System.

"(b) Such central reserve shall be held in the form of Treasury securities and demand deposits.

"(c) The Farm Credit Administration may use the reserve to make temporary deposits and temporary investments in financially troubled banks or associations of the Farm Credit System.

"(d)(1) The Farm Credit Administration may order payments into such central reserve of one-tenth of 1 percent of the proceeds of each individual, consolidated, or System-wide note, bond, debenture, or other obligation issued by the Farm Credit System, or any part thereof, under this Act.

"(2) Such payments under paragraph (1) may be ordered during any period when such central reserve contains the unobligated sum the Farm Credit Administration deems inadequate to achieve the purposes of such central reserve, but not more than a sum equal to 3 percent of the total of loans outstanding on December 31 of the last preceding calendar year from institutions in the Farm Credit System to persons other than other such institutions.

"(e) The Farm Credit Administration shall require a bank or association to repay in whole or in part a temporary deposit or retire in whole or in part a temporary investment, made in such bank or association under this section, at such time as in the opinion of the Farm Credit Administration such bank or association has resources available therefor and the need for such temporary deposit or temporary investment is reduced or no longer exists.

"(f) The Farm Credit Administration shall issue rules and regulations implementing this section.".

TITLE II—REGULATION OF THE FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

RESTRUCTURE OF THE FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

The Chairman shall be the spokesman for the Board and the Farm Credit Administration and shall represent the Board and the Farm Credit Administration in their official relations within the Government. Under policies adopted by the Board, the Chairman shall consult on a regular basis with the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with the exercise by the System of the powers conferred under section 4.2 of this Act, with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in connection with the effect of System lending activities on national monetary policy, and with the Secretary of Agriculture in connection with the effect of System policies on farmers and the agricultural economy.

"(b) In carrying out responsibilities under this Act, the Chairman of the Board shall be governed by general policies adopted by the Board and by such regulatory decisions, findings, and determinations as the Board may by law be authorized to make and, as to third persons, all acts of the Chairman of the Board shall be conclusively presumed to be in compliance with such general policies and regulatory decisions, findings, and determinations.

Except as provided in section 518 of title 28 of the United States Code, relating to litigation before the Supreme Court, attorneys designated by the Chairman shall represent the Farm Credit Administration in any civil proceeding or civil action brought in connection with the administration of conservatorships and receiverships. Attorneys designated by the Chairman may represent the Farm Credit Administration in any other civil proceedings or civil action when so authorized by the Attorney General under provisions of title 28.

EXAMINATIONS.—(a) Each institution of the System shall be examined by Farm Credit Administration examiners at such times as the Chairman of the Board may determine, but in no event less than once each year. Such examinations shall include, but are not limited to, an analysis of credit and collateral quality and capitalization of the institution, and appraisals of the effectiveness of the institution's management and application of policies governing the carrying out of this Act and regulations of the Farm Credit Administration and servicing all eligible borrowers. At the direction of the Chairman of the Board, Farm Credit Administration examiners also shall make examinations of the condition of any organization, other than national banks, to, for, or with which any institution of the System contemplates making a loan or discounting paper. For the purposes of this Act, examiners of the Farm Credit Administration shall be subject to the same requirements, responsibilities, and penalties as are applicable to examiners under the National Bank Act, the Federal Reserve Act, and Federal Deposit Insurance Act, and other provisions of law and shall have the same powers and privileges as are vested in such examiners by law.

"(b) Each institution of the System shall make and publish an annual report of condition as prescribed by the Farm Credit Administration. Each such report shall contain financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and contain such additional information as the Farm Credit Administration by regulation may require. "(c) The Farm Credit Administration may publish the report of examination of any System institution that does not, before the end of the 120th day after the date of notification of the recommendations and suggestions of the Farm Credit Administration, based on such examination, comply with such recommendations and suggestions to the satisfaction of the Farm Credit Administration. The Farm Credit Administration shall give notice of intention to publish in the event of such noncompliance at least 90 days before such publication. Such notice of intention may be given any time after such notification of recommendations and suggestions.".

ENFORCEMENT POWERS

SEC. 204. Title V of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 is amended by inserting after section 5.24, as so redesignated by section 203(b), the following:

"PART C—ENFORCEMENT POWERS OF FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 5.25. CEASE AND DESIST PROCEEDINGS.—(a) If, in the opinion of the Farm Credit Administration, any institution in the Farm Credit System, or any director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such an institution is engaging or has engaged, or the Farm Credit Administration has reasonable cause to believe that the institution or any director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution is about to engage, in an unsafe or unsound practice in conducting the business of such institution, or is violating or has violated, or the Farm Credit Administration has reasonable cause to believe that the institution or any director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution is about to violate, a law, rule, or regulation, or any condition imposed in writing by the Farm Credit Administration in connection with the granting of any application or other request by the institution or any written agreement entered into with the Farm Credit Administration, the Farm Credit Administration may issue and serve upon the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person a notice of charges in respect thereof. The notice shall contain a statement of the facts constituting the alleged violation or violations or the unsafe or unsound practice or practices, and shall fix a time and place at which a hearing will be held to determine whether an order to cease and desist therefrom should issue against the institution or the director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution. Such hearing shall be fixed for a date not earlier than thirty days nor later than sixty days after service of such notice unless an earlier or a later date is set by the Farm Credit Administration at the request of any party so served. Unless the party or parties so served shall appear at the hearing personally or by a duly authorized representative, they shall be deemed to have consented to the issuance of the cease and desist order. In the event of such consent, or if upon the record made at any such hearing, the Farm Credit Administration shall find that any violation or unsafe or unsound practice specified in the notice of charges has been established, the Farm Credit Administration may issue and serve upon the institution or the director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution an order to cease and desist from any such violation or practice. Such order may, by provisions that may be mandatory or otherwise, require the institution or its directors, officers, employees, agents, and other persons participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution to cease and desist from the same, and, further, to take affirmative action to correct the conditions resulting from any such violation or practice.

"(b) A cease and desist order shall become effective at the expiration of thirty days after the service of such order upon the institution or other person concerned (except in the case of a cease and desist order issued upon consent, which shall become effective at the time specified therein), and shall remain effective and enforceable as provided therein except to such extent as it is stayed, modified, terminated, or set aside by action of the Farm Credit Administration or a reviewing court.

"SEC. 5.26. TEMPORARY CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS.—(a) Whenever the Farm Credit Administration shall determine that the violation or threatened violation or the unsafe or unsound practice or practices, specified in the notice of charges served upon the institution or any director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution under section 5.25, or the continuation thereof, is likely to cause insolvency or substantial dissipation of assets or earnings of the institution, or is likely to seriously weaken the condition of the institution or otherwise seriously prejudice the interests of the investors in Farm Credit System obligations or shareholders in the institution prior to the completion of the proceedings conducted under section 5.25, the Farm Credit Administration may issue a temporary order requiring the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person to cease and desist from any such violation or practice and to take affirmative action to prevent such insolvency, dissipation, condition, or prejudice pending completion of such proceedings. Such order shall become effective upon service upon the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution and, unless set aside, limited, or suspended by a court in proceedings authorized by subsection (b), shall remain effective and enforceable pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to such notice and until such time as the Farm Credit Administration shall dismiss the charges specified in such notice, or if a cease and desist order is issued against the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person, until effective date of such order.

"(b) Within ten days after the institution concerned or any director, officer, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution has been served with a temporary cease and desist order, the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person may apply to the United States district court for the judicial district in which the home office of the institution is located, or the United States district court for the District of Columbia, for an injunction setting aside, limiting, or suspending the enforcement, operation, or effectiveness of such order pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to the notice of charges served upon the institution or such director, officer, employee, agent, or other person under section 5.25, and such court shall have jurisdiction to issue such injunction.

"SEC. 5.27. ENFORCEMENT OF TEMPORARY CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS.—In the case of violation or threatened violation of, or failure to obey, a temporary cease and desist order issued under section 5.26, the Farm Credit Administration may apply to the United States district court, or the United States court of any territory, within the jurisdiction of which the home office of the institution is located, for an injunction to enforce such order, and, if the court shall determine that there has been such violation or threatened violation or failure to obey, it shall be the duty of the court to issue such injunction.

"SEC. 5.28. SUSPENSION OR REMOVAL OF DIRECTOR OR OFFICER.—Whenever, in the opinion of the Farm Credit Administration, any director or officer of any institution in the Farm Credit System has committed any violation of law, rule, or regulation or of a cease and desist order that has become final, or has engaged or participated in any unsafe or unsound practice in connection with the institution, or has committed or engaged in any act, omission, or practice which constitutes a breach of a fiduciary duty as such director or officer, and the Farm Credit Administration determines that the institution has suffered or will probably suffer substantial financial loss or other damage or that the interests of its shareholders or investors in Farm Credit System obligations could be seriously prejudiced by reason of such violation or practice or breach of fiduciary duty, or that the director or officer has received financial gain by reason of such violation or practice or breach of fiduciary duty, and that such violation or practice or breach of fiduciary duty is one involving personal dishonesty on the part of such director or officer, or one that demonstrates a willful or continuing disregard for the safety or soundness of the System institution, the Farm Credit Administration may serve upon such director or officer a written notice of its intention to remove him from office.

"(b) Whenever, in the opinion of the Farm Credit Administration, any director or officer of an institution in the Farm Credit System, by conduct or practice with respect to another institution in the Farm Credit System or other business institution that resulted in substantial financial loss or other damage, has evidenced either his personal dishonesty or a willful or continuing disregard for its safety and soundness and, in addition, has evidenced his unfitness to continue as a director or officer, and whenever, in the opinion of the Farm Credit Administration, any other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of an institution in the Farm Credit System, by the conduct or practice with respect to such institution or other institution in the Farm Credit System or other business institution that resulted in substantial financial loss or other damage, has evidenced either personal dishonesty or a willful or continuing disregard for its safety and soundness and, in addition, has evidenced his unfitness to participate in the conduct of the affairs of such institution, the Farm Credit Administration may serve upon such director, officer, or other person a written notice of its intention to remove that director, officer, or other person from office or to prohibit his further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution.

"(c) In respect to any director or officer of an institution in the Farm Credit System or any other person referred to in subsection (a) or (b) of this section, the Farm Credit Administration may, if it deems it necessary for the protection of the institution or the interests of its shareholders and the investors in the Farm Credit System obligations, by written notice to such effect served upon such director, officer, or other person, suspend such director, officer, or other person from office or prohibit such director, officer, or other person from further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution. Such suspension or prohibition shall become effective upon service of such notice and, unless stayed by a court in proceedings authorized by subsection (e) of this section, shall remain in effect pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to the notice served under subsection (a) or (b) and until such time as the Farm Credit Administration shall dismiss the charges specified in such notice, or, if an order of removal or prohibition is issued against the director or officer or other person, until the effective date of any such order. Copies of any such notice shall also be served upon the institution of which the person is a director or officer or in the conduct of whose affairs the person has participated.

"(d) A notice of intention to remove a director, officer, or other person from office or to prohibit such director's, officer's, or other person's participation in the conduct of the affairs of an institution in the Farm Credit System, shall contain a statement of the facts constituting grounds therefor, and shall fix a time and place at which a hearing will be held thereon. Such hearing shall be fixed for a date not earlier than thirty days nor later than sixty days after the date of service of such notice, unless an earlier or a later date is set by the Farm Credit Administration at the request of (1) such director or officer or other person, and for good cause shown, or (2) the Attorney General of the United States. Unless such director, officer, or other person shall appear at the hearing in person or by a duly authorized representative, such director, officer, or other person shall be deemed to have consented to the issuance of an order of such removal or prohibition. In the event of such consent, or if upon the record made at any such hearing the Farm Credit Administration shall find that any of the grounds specified in such notice have been established, the Farm Credit Administration may issue such orders of suspension or removal from office, or prohibition from participation in the conduct of the affairs of the institution, as it may deem appropriate. A copy of an order issued under this subsection shall be served upon the institution concerned. Any such order shall become effective at the expiration of thirty days after service upon such institution and the director, officer, or other person concerned (except in the case of an order issued upon consent, which shall become effective at the time specified therein). Such order shall remain effective and enforceable except to such extent as it is stayed, modified, terminated, or set aside by action of the agency or a reviewing court.

"(e) Within ten days after any director, officer, or other person has been suspended from office or prohibited from participation in the conduct of the affairs of a System institution under subsection (d)(3) of this section, such director, officer, or other person may apply to the United States district court for the judicial district in which the home office of the institution is located, or the United States district court for the District of Columbia, for a stay of either such suspension or prohibition, or both, pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to the notice served upon such director, officer, or other person under subsection (a) or (b), and such court shall have jurisdiction to stay either such suspension or prohibition, or both.

"SEC. 5.29. SUSPENSION OR REMOVAL OF DIRECTOR OR OFFICER CHARGED WITH FELONY.—(a) Whenever any director or officer of an institution in the Farm Credit System, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such institution, is charged in any information, indictment, or complaint authorized by a United States attorney, with the commission of or participation in a crime involving dishonesty or breach of trust that is punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year under State or Federal law, the Farm Credit Administration may, if continued service or participation by the individual may pose a threat to the interest of the institution's shareholders or the investors in the Farm Credit System obligations or may threaten to impair public confidence in the institution or Farm Credit System, by written notice served upon such director, officer, or other person, suspend such director, officer, or other person from office or prohibit such director, officer, or other person from further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution. A copy of such notice shall also be served upon the institution. Such suspension or prohibition shall remain in effect until such information, indictment, or complaint is finally disposed of or until terminated by the Farm Credit Administration. In the event that a judgment of conviction with respect to such crime is entered against such director, officer, or other person, and at such time as such judgment is not subject to further appellate review, the Farm Credit Administration may, if continued service or participation by the individual may pose a threat to the interests of the institution's shareholders or the investors in Farm Credit System obligations or may threaten to impair public confidence in the institution or the Farm Credit System, issue and serve upon such director, officer, or other person an order removing such director, officer, or other person from office or prohibiting such director, officer, or other person from further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution except with the consent of the Farm Credit Administration. A copy of such order shall also be served upon such institution, whereupon such director or officer shall cease to be a director or officer of such institution. A finding of not guilty or other disposition of the charge shall not preclude the Farm Credit Administration from thereafter instituting proceedings to remove such director, officer, or other person from office or to prohibit further participation in Farm Credit System affairs under section 5.28. Any notice of suspension or order of removal issued under this paragraph shall remain effective and outstanding until the completion of any hearing or appeal authorized under subsection (b) unless terminated by the Farm Credit Administration.

"(b) Within thirty days from service of any notice of suspension or order of removal issued under subsection (a), the director, officer, or other person concerned may request in writing an opportunity to appear before the Farm Credit Administration to show that the continued service to or participation in the conduct of the affairs of the institution by such individual does not, or is not likely to, pose a threat to the interest in Farm Credit System obligations. Upon receipt of any such request, the Farm Credit Administration shall fix a time (not more than thirty days after receipt of such request, unless extended at the request of the concerned director, officer, or other person) and place at which the director, officer, or other person may appear, personally or through counsel, before the Chairman of the Farm Credit Administration or designated employees of the Farm Credit Administration to submit written materials (or, at the discretion of the Farm Credit Administration, oral testimony) and oral argument. Within sixty days of such hearing, the Farm Credit Administration shall notify the director, officer, or other person whether the suspension or prohibition from participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution will be continued, terminated, or otherwise modified, or whether the order removing such director, officer, or other person from office or prohibiting such individual from further participation in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution will be rescinded or otherwise modified. Such notification shall contain a statement of the basis for the Farm Credit Administration's decision, if adverse to the director, officer or other person. The Farm Credit Administration may prescribe such rules as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this subsection.

"SEC. 5.30. HEARINGS AND JUDICIAL REVIEW.—(a) Any hearing provided for in this part (other than the hearing provided for in section 5.29) shall be held in the Federal judicial district or in the territory in which the home office of the institution is located unless the party afforded the hearing consents to another place, and shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of chapter 5 of title 5 of the United States Code. Such hearing shall be private, unless the Farm Credit Administration, in its discretion, after fully considering the views of the party afforded the hearing, determines that a public hearing is necessary to protect the public interest. After such hearing, and within ninety days after the Farm Credit Administration has notified the parties that the case has been submitted to it for final decision, it shall render its decision (which shall include findings of fact upon which its decision is predicated) and shall issue and serve upon each party to the proceeding an order or orders consistent with the provisions of this part. Judicial review of any such order shall be exclusively as provided in this subsection (g). Unless a petition for review is timely filed in a court of appeals of the United States, as hereinafter provided in subsection (b), and thereafter until the record in the proceeding has been filed as so provided, the Farm Credit Administration may at any time, upon such notice and in such manner as it shall deem proper, modify, terminate, or set aside any such order. Upon such filing of the record, the Farm Credit Administration may modify, terminate, or set aside any such order with permission of the court.

"(b) Any party to the proceeding, or any person required by an order issued under this part to cease and desist from any of the violations or practices stated therein, may obtain a review of any order served under subsection (a) (other than an order issued with the consent of the System institution or the director or officer or other person concerned, or an order issued under section 5.29) by the filing in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the home office of the institution is located, or in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, within thirty days after the date of service of such order, a written petition praying that the order of the Farm Credit Administration be modified, terminated, or set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Farm Credit Administration, and thereupon the Farm Credit Administration shall file in the court the record in the proceeding, as provided in section 2112 of title 28 of the United States Code. Upon the filing of such petition, such court shall have jurisdiction, which upon the filing of the record shall except as provided in the last sentence of subsection (a) be exclusive, to affirm, modify, terminate, or set aside, in whole or in part, the order of the Farm Credit Administration. Review of such proceedings shall be had as provided in chapter 7 of title 5 of the United States Code. The judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court upon certiorari, as provided in section 1254 of title 28 of the United States Code.

"(c) The commencement of proceedings for judicial review under subsection (b) shall not, unless specifically ordered by the court, operate as a stay of any order issued by the Farm Credit Administration.

"SEC. 5.31. JURISDICTION AND ENFORCEMENT.—The Farm Credit Administration may in its discretion apply to the United States district court, or the United States court of any territory, within the jurisdiction of which the home office of the institution is located, for the enforcement of any effective and outstanding notice or order issued under this part, and such courts shall have jurisdiction and power to order and require compliance herewith; but except as otherwise provided in this part no court shall have jurisdiction to affect by injunction or otherwise the issuance or enforcement of any notice or order under this part, or to review, modify, suspend, terminate, or set aside any such notice or order.

"SEC. 5.32. PENALTY.—(a) Any institution in the System that violates or any officer, director, employee, agent, or other person participating in the conduct of the affairs of such an institution who violates the terms of any order that has become final and was issued under section 5.25 or 5.26 of this Act, shall forfeit and pay a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 per day for each day during which such violation continues, but the Farm Credit Administration may, in its discretion, compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty that is subject to imposition or has been imposed under such authority. The penalty may be assessed and collected by the Farm Credit Administration by written notice.

"(b) In determining the amount of the penalty, the Farm Credit Administration shall take into account the appropriateness of the penalty with respect to the size of financial resources and good faith of the System institution or person charged, the gravity of the violation, the history of previous violations, and such other matters as justice may require.

"(c) The System institution or person assessed shall be afforded an opportunity for a hearing by the Farm Credit Administration, upon request made within ten days after issuance of the notice of assessment. In such hearing all issues shall be determined on the record pursuant to section 554 of title 5 of the United States Code. The Farm Credit Administration determination shall be made by final order which may be reviewed only as provided in subsection (d). If no hearing is requested as herein provided, the assessment shall constitute a final and unappealable order.

"(d) Any System institution or person against whom an order imposing a civil money penalty has been entered after a Farm Credit Administration hearing under this section may obtain review by the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the home office of the System institution is located, or the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, by filing a notice of appeal in such court within twenty days after the service of such order, and simultaneously sending a copy of such notice by registered or certified mail to the Farm Credit Administration. The Farm Credit Administration shall promptly certify and file in such Court the record upon which the penalty was imposed, as provided in section 2112 of title 28 of the United States Code. The findings of the Farm Credit Administration shall be set aside if found to be unsupported by substantial evidence as provided by section 706(2)(E) of title 5 of the United States Code.

"(e) If any System institution or person fails to pay an assessment after it has become a final and unappealable order, or after the court of appeals has entered final judgment in favor of the Farm Credit Administration, the Farm Credit Administration shall refer the matter to the Attorney General, who shall recover the amount assessed by action in the appropriate United States district court. In such action, the validity and appropriateness of the final order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(f) The Farm Credit Administration shall promulgate regulations establishing procedures necessary to implement sections 5.31 and 5.32.

"(g) All penalties collected under authority of this section shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

"SEC. 5.33. FURTHER PENALTIES.—Any director or officer, or former director or officer of a System institution, or any other person, against whom there is outstanding and effective any notice or order (which is an order which has become final) served upon such director, officer, or other person under section 5.28 or 5.29 of this Act, and who (1) participates in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of the institution involved, or directly or indirectly solicits or procures, or transfers or attempts to transfer, or votes or attempts to vote, any proxies, consents, or authorizations in respect of any voting rights in such institution, or (2) without the prior written approval of the Farm Credit Administration, votes for a director, serves or acts as a director, officer, or employee of any System institution, shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"SEC. 5.34. REPLACEMENT OF SUSPENDED OR REMOVED DIRECTORS.—If at any time, because of the suspension or removal of one or more directors pursuant to section 5.28 or 5.29 of this Act, there shall be on the board of directors of a System institution less than a quorum of directors not so suspended, the Chairman shall appoint persons to serve temporarily as directors in their place and stead so as to establish a quorum until such time as those who have been removed are reinstated or their respective successors are duly elected and take office.

"SEC. 5.35. DEFINITIONS.—As used in this part—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from North Carolina to concur in the House amendment with a further Senate amendment (No. 1420).

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, on December 3, 1985, the Senate passed S. 1884, a bill to restructure and reform the Farm Credit System, by a vote of 57 to 34.

S. 1884 is intended to accomplish three key objectives. First, it tightens and reforms the regulation of the Farm Credit System to assure that it will operate under the same general rules of the road as other lending entities. Second, it enables the Farm Credit System to help itself by establishing a Capital Corporation to move System capital and reserves to those districts in greatest need. Third, it authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, at the Secretary's sole discretion, to purchase securities from the Capital Corporation to infuse capital into the Farm Credit System—but not unless and until the strengthened regulatory mechanisms and available capital of the System are utilized.

The House has now amended and passed S. 1884. The House's version is substantially similar to the bill passed by the Senate. I recommend that we pass the House bill with an amendment.

This amendment protests interests raised by Senators either in the drafting of S. 1884 or through the adoption of amendments on the Senate floor. All the amendments to S. 1884 that were adopted by the Senate are either included in the House bill or are contained in the amendment I am offering today.

The amendment that I propose would accomplish the following:

First, the amendment would restructure the board of directors for the new capital corporation. Three board members would be elected by the farm credit banks that own stock in the corporation, with each bank having one vote. The three elected members would be selected, one from those districts contributing capital, one from those districts receiving capital, and the last without regard to these restrictions. Two board members would be appointed by the chairman of the FCA Board. In the event the Secretary of the Treasury infuses funds into the capital corporation, the board of the corporation would be expanded by two members: The Secretary of Agriculture would first appoint an additional member to the board and the six directors together would then select a seventh board member, who would be independent of both the System and the Government.

Second, the amendment conforms the appropriations language to that proposed by Senator DOMENICI.

Third, we add a provision, drawn generally from the Senate bill, to ensure that the tax status of bonds issued collectively by the farm credit system banks will not change if the capital corporation participates in these bond issues.

Fourth, we have included Senator BOREN's amendment on mergers, to ensure that the House amendment addresses this issue in the same fashion as the Senate bill.

Fifth, we have restated current law, as did the Senate bill, concerning FCA's power to regulate fund transfers by adding one word inadvertently omitted in the House amendment and have inserted a clarification on the establishment and operation of institutional credit review committees.

Sixth, we have included another Boren amendment authorizing FCA to approve FCS salary scales. The House bill already includes a freeze on FCS officer compensation which is triggered in the event the Secretary of the Treasury is asked to infuse funds.

Seventh, we have included Senator GARN's technical amendment limiting the scope of FCA's examination powers as they concern federally regulated financial institutions.

Eighth, we have included language from the Senate bill proposed by Senator GRASSLEY concerning reviews of non-accrual loans to determine whether they may be restructured.

Ninth, we have included language providing that the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration serves at the pleasure of the President during the transition period in which the Governor exercises the authority of the Farm Credit Administration Board and the Chairman of such Board.

Tenth, we have inserted language from the Senate bill dealing with the selection of the seventh director on district boards. This provision authorizes district borrowers to elect the seventh director, this director was formerly appointed by FCA.

Finally, I should note that we checked to ensure that the House language fully addresses the issues raised in the other amendments offered by Senators DOMENICI, HARKIN, HAWKINS, and MELCHER.

Time is running short. The Farm Credit System and our Nation's farmers need this bill before we go home. I urge my colleagues to adopt this amendment and pass the House amendment to S. 1884.

Mr. ZORINSKY. Mr. President, I join the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee in urging the Senate to approve the pending measure—S. 1884. I was pleased to join Senator HELMS in introducing S. 1884 on November 23. That legislation, although modified by the House, remains similar to the measure that we introduced and that the Senate approved about 1 week ago.

I want to emphasize the necessity for enacting this legislation this session of Congress. We are quickly approaching what will almost certainly be one of the most difficult lending seasons ever for agriculture. The financial condition of the agricultural economy and of agriculture's most important lender, the Farm Credit System, can be described as severely stressed.

This legislation will help ensure that the System will remain viable and continue to serve American agriculture. Congressional approval of this measure will send a clear message to the financial markets that the Federal Government will not allow the Farm Credit System to default on its bonds. This, in itself, will reduce the risk premium investors have been demanding from the System. A reduction in the System's cost of funds will have a positive effect on the cost of credit for farmers—saving them millions of dollars in interest expenses.

Today, the Senate will be considering several amendments designed to incorporate into the House-passed version of S. 1884, certain proposals that were adopted when the Senate first acted on this measure. I hope these amendments are acceptable to the House leadership and the House approves the bill before adjourning.

The amendments being offered today include the following:

An amendment providing that the Board of Directors of the Capital Corporation shall have five members, three elected by System banks—with equitable representation from banks that will be receiving assistance as well as representation from contributing banks—and two appointed by the Farm Credit Administration, until Federal financial assistance is made available. At such time, the Board will be expanded to seven members. Of the two additional members, one will be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture and the other will be selected by the other six members of the Board. The seventh Director cannot be a Government employee or associated with any System institution.

An amendment that would provide an exception to the overchartering provision of the House-passed measure. The exception would allow overchartering of territories served by associations with the concurrence of the board of directors of the association that has declined to merge. In addition, if an association chooses not to merge, it will not be discriminated against—with regard to interet rates charged by a district farm credit bank.

An amendment retaining the Farm Credit Administration's authority to approve the salary scale for employees of System institutions, except for associations, and the compensation of the chief executive officer.

An amendment that makes it clear that the board of directors of each Farm Credit System institution shall establish one or more credit review committees that will include farmer-board representation. The purpose of this is to provide borrowers with an opportunity for administratively feasible review of adverse credit decisions by a committee that will include participation by persons who were not involved in the original adverse credit decision.

An amendment that requires the Farm Credit System to review each loan in nonaccrual status to determine whether such loan can be restructured based on changed circumstances resulting from enactment of this legislation.

In addition, there will be several technical and conforming amendments that will:

Make it clear that the Farm Credit Administration may not examine any federally regulated financial institution;

Make is clear that systemwide bonds, notes, debentures, or other obligations joined in by the Capital Corporation shall have the same tax status as provided in the Farm Credit Act with respect to obligations issued by the banks; and Provide for the at-large election of the seventh director of district farm credit boards by the borrower-stockholders.

Provide that the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration will serve at the pleasure of the President during the transition to the new regulatory structure.

The amendments I have outlined will significantly strengthen the legislation. It is important to note that about 1 million Farm Credit System borrowers are looking to Congress to take action to address the System's problems.

The pending measure will restructure the Farm Credit Administration into a stronger, more effective arm's-length regulator. The bill will better enable the System to use its resources to resolve its problems, and it provides a mechanism by which Federal financial assistance can be made available in a responsible manner.

The legislation will provide significant assistance—in the form of lower than what could otherwise be expected interest rates—to Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association borrowers. In addition, the measure will provide assurances and similar interest rate benefits to the farm and rural utility cooperatives, and agricultural exporters that rely on the Farm Credit System's banks for cooperatives for their credit needs.

Because it is important that this measure be enacted as soon as possible, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the amendments I have outlined and refrain from offering amendments that could jeopardize this essential legislation.

REFORMING THE FEDERAL FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to add my support to the amendment of the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Senator HELMS, and its distinguished ranking member, Senator ZORINSKY, to the pending legislation to reform the Federal Farm Credit System. I am hopeful that passage of this measure will be equally swift in the House of Representatives, and that the President will add his signature soon after the bill reaches his desk.

In brief, Mr. President, this legislation makes three critical changes in the Farm Credit System. It restructures the Farm Credit Administration, converting it to an effective arms-length regulator. A three-member Board of Directors, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, will have strengthened management and oversight responsibilities.

Second, the bill facilitates much-needed self-help measures by member institutions of the System, enabling them to respond to the capital shortages of some members by redistributing the reserves and capital surpluses of others. This was the original intent of earlier reform legislation which made the System's districts and member banks interdependent and responsible for coordinating support for their securities in the financial markets. This key role will now be carried out through a temporary capital corporation, which will transfer reserves and, if necessary, distribute Federal assistance among System members.

The third element of this package is the contingency for providing Federal financial assistance, as needed, to assure the continued viability of the Farm Credit System as the linchpin for lending to U.S. agriculture. The level of such aid is left deliberately undefined, both because it may not be required and because the amount is not as important as the firm commitment that the Government will stand behind the System.

But first, Mr. President, the System must fully commit its resources in an effort to end erosion in the quality of its member bank portfolios, declining liquidity of its reserves, and the rising cost of new borrowing. These steps will not be easy, particularly at first. And they will need conviction on the part of those who want to see a revitalized system that the only way to long-term stability is through serious retrenchment and joint sacrifice.

One feature which I had a hand in shaping is in the composition of membership on the Capital Corporation Board of Directors. During the period in which the Corporation will essentially be working with the System's own assets, System Directors will have a 3-to-2 majority on the board over appointees of the Farm Credit Administration. If and when Federal funds are introduced, however, the Secretary of Agriculture will appoint one new member, and the six Directors will then select a seventh member from outside the System, the FCA, and the Government.

This method may not be perfect, Mr. President, but it will give the Capital Corporation some additional independence in carrying out its responsibility of managing Federal funds. It will also make the Board more of a buffer between the System and the FCA, avoiding some confrontation during the next crucial years of adjustment and reform.

I hope the House of Representatives will act quickly on this legislation, and that we can send a strong signal to farmers and investors that this vital element of the agricultural lending system will remain healthy. I commend my colleagues who have worked so hard on this bill and hope that, in conjunction with the 1985 farm bill, to be acted on by both Houses tomorrow, Congress will restore some hope in the future of American farm families during the coming new year.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, the bill now before the Senate is an improvement in many respects over the bill which originally passed the Senate. A number of needed improvements were made in the House Agriculture Committee. However, this is still a bad bill. It will not necessarily provide any financial assistance to the Farm Credit System. It will not provide any protection to the districts which have been prudent, fortunate, good managers, or for some other reason are not in financial trouble. It will drain them as dry as the bankrupt districts—in effect, rewarding those troubled districts.

Aside from the fact that this is a bad bill, there are a number of concerns which have not yet been resolved. A great deal of time and effort has been spent in seeking a resolution of certain concerns with regard to the membership of the board of the new Capital Corporation.

Mr. President, I regret that there appears to have been a misunderstanding with regard to this bill and to this package of Senate amendments. That is quite understandable considering the extreme pressures that are being placed on the Senate Agriculture Committee at this time as they race to complete a farm bill. Many of the committee staff members and other staff members involved in the farm bill were up all night last night drafting the conference report.

An attempt was made to avoid conference on this farm credit bill. A compromise was worked out between the House and Senate leadership on the bill. This would allow the Senate to pass the bill in a form acceptable to the House so that it could be enacted into law before Christmas. The compromise involved taking the House bill language, adding on the amendments adopted on the Senate floor, and adding on a new Senate amendment regarding the number of seats on the Board of the Capital Corporation.

It was my understanding, and the understanding of the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Congressman KIKA DE LA GARZA of Texas, that amendments offered by Congressman STENHOLM of Texas and passed as part of the House bill would be included in the package. The sole exception would be deletion of the word "contributing" as it relates to qualifications for voting for the Capital Corporation Board members, so that all banks could vote.

The proposed amendment which I received on Saturday went beyond the scope of that agreement in several ways. It took out an additional House provision. That provision required the Capital Corporation board members to come from contributing districts. I was told by Chairman DE LA GARZA that he was deeply concerned about that language assuring contributing districts some voice in these proceedings, and I share those concerns.

I discussed that with Chairman DE LA GARZA and with Congressman STENHOLM. We all felt that an equitable compromise should recognize that both contributing and receiving districts have concerns, that these concerns may be opposite, and that both should have a voice on the board. We discussed a compromise that would split the three elected board members one and one between contributing and receiving districts, with the third elected at large. We agreed to that compromise. This 1-1-1 split was a significant compromise from the House bill language which specified that all three elected members would come from contributing districts. I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the House on this issue be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE,
Washington, DC, December 17, 1985.

Hon. ROBERT DOLE,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DOLE: We understand that today the Senate will consider legislation to address the problems facing the Farm Credit System. We applaud your efforts in this regard.

On December 6, the House of Representatives approved, by an overwhelming margin, an amended version of S. 1884. This legislation was approved by the House after the Committee on Agriculture held a complete series of subccmmittee and full committee hearings and markup sessions that allowed for the development of a balanced, equitable measure to restore financial strength to the Farm Credit System.

As amended by the House, Section 4.28C of S. 1884 would establish a five member board of directors to govern the newly formed Farm Credit System Capital Corporation. The House amendment provided that there be representation on the board from farm credit districts that contribute financial assistance to the Capital Corporation. In our view, net contributing farm credit districts, those which contribute more funds to the Capital Corporation than they receive, should be assured of representation on the board. We would like to reiterate our support for the House position on this issue.

Providing board representation to contributing districts is critical to the success of this legislation. We hope that the Senate will give close consideration to the concerns expressed by the House of Representatives in this regard.

Thanking you for your concern, we remain

Sincerely,

E. (KIKA) DE LA GARZA,
Chairman.
CHARLES W. STENHOLM,
Member of Congress.

Mr. BENTSEN. However, Mr. President, to make the compromise workable it is necessary to define "contributing" in such a way that the healthy districts would be represented on the Board. It is only fair that those who are going to pay most of the assessments should have a voice on the Board. If this were being done in the private sector those districts making the largest financial contributions would control the entire board. Those are also the districts that are not having problems and that are not pulling down the Farm Credit System.

This afternoon we tried and failed to reach a compromise on this definition. The amendment which I have would take care of those concerns.

I saw the effective effects of the majority leader and the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee when this bill passed the Senate on December 3. I saw all amendments tabled that were not accepted by the leadership. I believe that they can do that again, and I will not waste the Senate's time with a losing amendment.

I understand that language has been included in the proposed leadership amendment which will address somewhat the concerns which Texas and other healthy districts have. I appreciate that gesture.

However, this language is not adequate by itself to ensure that those who pay the most will have an adequate voice on the board of the Capital Corporation. Such arrangements can be made informally within the Farm Credit System itself, and I would hope that such arrangements would be made. They would do much to restore peace and harmony to the System.

The amendment which I had worked on would not just take care of a concern of Texas, Springfield, and other contributing districts. The amendment would have guaranteed that the bill would receive expeditious consideration in the House. There are a number of changes in the House bill made by the leadership amendment, and those will have to be reviewed before it can be accepted.

It is my understanding that the leadership is following this unusual procedure to allow the bill to be enacted before Christmas. Many of my colleagues feel strongly that this bill must be passed immediately. I do not share those concerns. But it is obvious the supporters of this bill have the majority of votes necessary for passage.

This bill will provide a lot of regulation and very little actual help. It will effectively eliminate the concept of local control on which the Farm Credit System was founded. It will wind up giving political appointees control of the System. And it will not even guarantee the stockholders who will pay the most for the Capital Corporation a voice in its management. I will vote against its passage; it is bad legislation.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to support this farm credit legislation.

The Farm Credit System is the Nation's largest farm lender, with about $74 billion in outstanding loans. But today the System is in trouble. Some $9.8 billion worth of loans are listed as nonperforming and in recent months we have seen an increase in System borrowing costs and borrower flight from the System. Serious efforts must be made to ensure that the Farm Credit System remains secure and to bolster public confidence in it so bondholders will be willing to purchase the System's debt at a reasonable price.

As my colleagues know, I did not vote for S. 1884 which passed the Senate on December 3. I was concerned that that bill did not provide sufficient protection for the healthy banks, such as those in the Sacramento district serving my State, from having their resources drained to shore up troubled banks elsewhere in the Nation.

I was also concerned about the effects financing the Capital Corporation would have on interest rates charged at the healthier banks. Moreover, the earlier bill threatened local control which has been the essence of the Farm Credit System. By giving the administration a majority of the appointments to new Capital Corporation, the original legislation severely limited input from local banks, their farmer-borrowers and stockholders. And it gave too much power to the Capital Corporation to draw on the resources of local banks.

The bill before us today is a substantial improvement over the earlier bill and addresses many of my concerns. It includes criteria to ensure that healthy banks do not have their resources drained without limit and it restores some measure of local control, ensuring that the local banks have more input regarding mergers and acquisitions.

Further, by providing that three members of the Capital Corporation board are elected by the Farm Credit System, and only two by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, majority control is given to the Farm Credit System, at least until Treasury money is infused into the System.

With these improvements, the legislation now has my support. I urge my colleagues to approve this bill to provide much needed financial assistance to the Farm Credit System.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, today, the Senate will finish work on and send to the House for final passage a package of legislative reform designed to assist the Farm Credit System in dealing with the difficult financial problems it now faces.

As I stated during debate on this matter on December 3, this legislation is now appropriate both in terms of timing and structure.

While this assistance is predominantly in the form of regulatory changes, it also sets forth a contingency plan for more direct Federal assistance. This approach should return confidence to the System's borrower/stockholders and to the financial markets as well, where instability has resulted in increased costs to the System.

I applaud the Congress' willingness to address this important problem in a gradual and determined way, while at the same time acting to deal with the causes of the System's weaknesses before more serious and permanent erosion of the System's balance sheet could occur.

By setting forth additional regulatory authorities for the Farm Credit Administration, the System's regulator, we help ensure a stronger future for the System itself. In addition, knowing that the current state of our farm economy may demand more direct financial assistance, this legislation authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to provide assistance when he determines, in cooperation with the Farm Credit Administration and Congress, that it is in fact needed.

Of course, this piece of legislation alone will address only one of the many factors contributing to the financial deterioration of our rural lenders. If a long-term answer to the situation is to be truly effective, it must be coupled with continued efforts to improve the condition of our overall farm economy. This can only be accomplished by a combination of efforts, including export promotion, immediate progress toward a balanced Federal budget, and a more economically sound farm bill.

Again, Mr. President, I support this specific action because it attempts to address a difficult problem in a responsible and gradual way, by encouraging the Farm Credit System to utilize its own resources, by strengthening regulatory oversight powers and finally by providing a blueprint for Federal financial assistance. While this alone may not be enough, it is certainly a foundation, a beginning, if a reluctant one, which will send a firm message to the public that the Congress is not willing to allow the Nation's largest banking system to falter. I encourage my colleagues to vote in support of final passage of this measure.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. President, I did not support this legislation when it was first considered by the Senate because I found it lacking. At that time, several amendments were offered which would have improved the legislation, but each of them was tabled. The Senate version did not provide direct assistance to farmers. It did not give priority to former landowners to rebuy the land they had lost. It did not provide for local control of the System and centralized the power in Washington.

The House greatly improved on that measure by requiring that three of the five Capital Corporation Board members be elected by farmers, as opposed to the Senate version which had two of the five elected by farmers. Furthermore, the House required that the original owner of an acquired property have first right of refusal when that property is resold. These changes are significant and I now feel comfortable in supporting this legislation.

Above all, this legislation keeps the Farm Credit System afloat and ensures that the System will be operating next spring when our farmers will be putting the crop in the ground. Many of our farmers are at the brink of disaster and this bill will enable the Farm Credit System to save some of our best farmers.

Mr. President, I support this legislation. I am concerned that it is not enough and that we will need to address the farm credit issue again next year, however. I want my colleagues to be prepared for that.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I will not kid anybody; I wish this Farm Credit System Conference Report more adequately addressed the acute financial needs facing the Farm Credit System. But given the circumstances and environment under which this legislation is being considered, it is obvious to this Senator that broader changes in this proposal are not possible. I, therefore, plan to support this conference report and urge my colleagues to do so.

The reason for this fast track legislation, I think, is obvious. Unless dramatic action is taken soon to shore up the troubled Farm Credit System, thousands of farmers will drown in a pool of red ink and the taxpayers will be forced to pick up the tab for billions of dollars in losses. This conference report contains some important features which I believe will allow the Farm Credit System to regain its formerly sound financial footing.

Mr. President, I wholeheartedly concur with the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Senator HELMS, that the Farm Credit System must use its own reserves before any Federal appropriation can be expected. This measure provides the tools for the System to do that, specifically that earnings from one part of the System can be used by another district within the System. I know that Senators from various States do not want their farm borrowers to be forced to share their earnings with Kentucky Farm Credit System borrowers, but I submit Mr. President, that is the nature of a cooperative venture. All Farm Credit System borrowers have benefited from low interest rates in the good times and I do not think it is unfair for borrowers to share in the not so good times.

I think that another outstanding feature of this proposal is the strengthening of the Farm Credit Administration's oversight powers. For too long, individual PCA's and FLB's have been encouraged to loan money to farmers with little regard for repayment ability. The overriding concern seemed to have been "Do you have enough collateral?" I am not criticizing the loan policies of local Farm Credit System officers, Mr. President, I am just saying that such policies should have undergone a little closer scrutiny. I know first hand that the officers of the Fourth Farm Credit District Bank in Louisville are anxious and willing to entertain closer inspection of lending policies within their district. I view this as positive proof that the System recognizes the need for some internal reforms and I applaud the willingness of the officers of the Fourth Farm Credit System Bank to accept the changes that are inevitable.

Finally, Mr. President, I am pleased that the administration is willing to tacitly recognize the serious financial problems of the Farm Credit System. Though the funding of the Capital Corporation is discretionary, this legislation provides the tools to make the Capital Corporation an important, functioning entity. I hope we never have to use it, but I see the day just on the horizon where the Secretary of the Treasury will announce that he is coming to the Hill to seek an appropriation to fund the Capital Corporation. I am glad, Mr. President, the mechanism is in place if and when we need it.

In conclusion, I support this measure Mr. President. My only hope is that it is not too little, too late.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I seek clarification by the chairman of one provision in the House passed version of S. 1884. My question pertains to section 201 as it amends section 5.17(a)(2) of the Farm Credit Act. As I understand this portion of the bill, it comes into play when one or more association in a district has rejected a proposed district-wide merger of PCA's or FLBA's in that district. Mr. Chairman, this is an issue of particular and immediate concern to farmers in my State. I have made a good faith effort with concerned PCA and FLBA borrower members in Idaho to work out an equitable arrangement between the new merged Interstate PCA and the Eastern Idaho PCA, which voted not to merge.

In our district there was one PCA that rejected the merger. If enacted, this provision which would prevent the new merged association from overchartering this one association. This is part of an amendment which I cosponsored. My concern now is whether there is anything about the provision that would invalidate the merger which was approved by all the other associations now that the territory of their merged association cannot include the territory of this one association that did not vote to merge.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Idaho for inquiring. We certainly do not intend to invalidate the disclosures upon which the merger votes were based on the actions of the farmer/stockholders who have approved their association's participation in these district-wide mergers. Under this provision, the Farm Credit Administration would be precluded merely from issuing to the merged association, a charter which would include the territory served by those associations which did not approve the merger unless subsequently agreed to by the Board of Directors of such association or associations. It must not be read to also invalidate a merger that was approved by the other associations whose territories comprise the balance of the district.

MR. DOLE. Mr. President, we have completed action on that measure. Is that correct?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

MR. DOLE. Mr. President, I want to thank my colleagues, the distinguished Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS], and the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ZORIN-

SKY]. I also want to thank the staff, the administration, Senator GRASSLEY, Senator BENTSEN, Senator HAWKINS, and there have been a number of Senators involved throughout this process.

My view is that we have taken the first step to assist the rural American farmers and rural America insofar as the Farm Credit System is concerned.

We will follow this up tomorrow by passing the farm bill conference report. That will be the second step. Maybe we have to take another step next year. But at least we are taking steps, and moving in the right direction.

Much of the credit goes to the distinguished chairman of the committee, Senator HELMS, and to the distinguished ranking member, Senator ZORINSKY, to the members of the staff, Frank Naylor, of the Department, and all others who participated in the farm credit debate.

I think the RECORD should reflect that we have acted, that we have taken the House bill, and amended it.

I hope now that we can move on to the farm bill conference tomorrow.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I certainly want to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished majority leader. However, I have one person to add to the list, and that is the majority leader himself.

He has been most patient, diligent, and he has been extremely helpful. Also I want to pay my respects to Senator ZORINSKY. I have never worked with anyone who is more cooperative, helpful, and understanding in the production of legislation. I want to thank Senator ZORINSKY for that.

Mr. President, I wish I had the words to thank the staff for the enormous amount of work they have done. I do not think Members of the Senate really understand the sacrifice that the staff makes. They have worked all night for the past 3 nights on the farm bill, and the farm credit bill.

They are dedicated young people, and I am very, very proud of them.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. ZORINSKY. Mr. President, I would like to add my comments to those of the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and in addition to say that it has been a fascinating experience, an educational experience, working with the chairman, his staff, and our staff on the minority side.

I would like to thank very, very much the Democratic leader, Senator BYRD, for his support, his help, and for this continued diligence in helping move the bill forward, and for his ever-present parliamentary recommendations to me on behalf of the minority on this side of the aisle.

He has been exemplary and outstanding. I cannot find enough adjectives to use for Senator BYRD's support of this very emotional issue, and one which was highly controversial.

Also, I would like to thank Senator DOLE, the majority leader, for all of his devotion to this duty. There were many occasions when, if I were a betting person, I would have had to look elsewhere for a farm bill, but with his perseverance and continued dedication to the bill, quite obviously we were able to reach that end of the tunnel. I am pleased that the Senate has completed action on the Farm Credit System bill and is to consider the conference report in the 1985 farm bill tomorrow.

I thank him for his support, and cooperation also.

Also I thank the staffs for their work day in and day out. When we became tired, left, and adjourned the conferences, they were still there to pick up the pieces, and put things back together even though we tore them asunder for the evening.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield?

Mr. ZORINSKY. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator has already used far more adjectives than I know. I am very grateful for his kind words. He is overly charitable toward me.

Mr. ZORINSKY. I thank the minority leader.

I yield the floor.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. KENNEDY:

S. 1954. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to authorize temporary family housing for certain dependents of deceased members of the Armed Forces; and to amend title 37, United States Code, to authorize temporary payment of a basic allowance for quarters for certain dependents of deceased members of the armed services.

TEMPORARY MILITARY HOUSING FOR DEPENDENTS OF GANDER, NEWFOUNDLAND CRASH VICTIMS

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the recent airline disaster in Gander, Newfoundland, which claimed the lives of 248 American service personnel is a tragedy for the families of those killed and for our country. Our prayers are with the anguished survivors who mourn the loss of their loved ones.

The bill I am introducing will assure that unnecessary financial hardship will not be added to the emotional stress of these families by allowing them to remain temporarily in military quarters without charge. This legislation is urgently needed because existing law requires that a reasonable value be charged for housing civilian employees in the United States. The Office of Management and Budget circular which implements the law allows dependents of deceased service members to remain in Government quarters for up to 60 days and pay either the fair market rental or an amount equivalent to the service members' housing allowance. This policy imposes a financial hardship on the dependents when housing allowances terminate on the death of the military member.

Dependents of military personnel living in the community at the time of the death of the personnel are also faced with financial hardship. In most instances they must continue to make rental or mortgage payments, even though they no longer receive the deceased military member's income.

This legislation will allow dependents of deceased service members to remain in government quarters without charge for 60 days. It will also provide a housing allowance to dependents of deceased military members who are not residing in government housing for a period not to exceed 60 days. This proposal offers dependents an opportunity to find other housing without imposing the additional financial burden and stress of a housing rental or mortgage payment during the period immediately following loss of the military breadwinner.

Any additional cost resulting from the enactment of this proposal will be negligible and will be absorbed in applicable appropriations.

This bill is a small, but significant way to ease the tremendous burdens of the service families who lost loved ones in the Gander crash. I urge my colleagues to adopt this measure quickly.●

By Mr. DODD:

S. 1955. A bill to authorize the importation of lottery materials for use in State lotteries; to the Committee on Finance.

IMPORTATION OF LOTTERY MATERIALS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, lotteries conducted by State governments are increasingly important source of State revenues. In 1984 22 States and the District of Columbia—including my own State of Connecticut—generated over $8 billion in revenues in this manner. Spurred by shrinking tax bases and shares of Federal funds, several other States have authorized lotteries, although they have not yet commenced operations. Modern computer operations and security techniques ensure avoidance of the scandals that plagued lotteries in the 19th century.

Indeed, the growth in State lotteries is directly attributable to the enactment in 1974 of Public Law No. 93-583, which became 18 U.S.C. 1307. That law created an exception to 18 U.S.C. 1301, which bans the importation or transportation in interstate commerce of equipment, tickets, and other materials for use in a lottery. Under section 1307, the ban on imports does not apply to equipment, tickets, or materials concerning a lottery which is conducted by that State acting under the authority of State law, or which is designed to be used within a foreign country in a lottery which is authorized by the law of that foreign country.

Unfortunately, the drafters of Public Law No. 93-583 did not fully accomplish their intended amendment of Federal law to allow the free operation of State lotteries. The exception to ban on imports of lottery materials in the criminal laws, by oversight was not incorporated in the customs laws. Specifically, section 305 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1305) enumerates lottery tickets among the immoral articles which it prohibits from importation into the United States. The Customs Service has ruled that the 1974 amendments to the Criminal Code did not extend to title 19; therefore, the import ban remains in effect despite the intent of Congress.

This inadvertent drafting error should be corrected to free the procurement operations of State lotteries from Federal constraint, and to ensure reciprocity in the treatment of U.S. lottery vendors bidding for business in increasingly lucrative foreign markets. The legislation I introduce today is intended to accomplish those goals. It would add a new subsection (b) to 19 U.S.C. 1305 that parallels 18 U.S.C. 1307(b), thus allowing the importation of lottery materials in specifically limited circumstances; like 18 U.S.C. 1307(b), the exception is confined to materials used in authorized State lotteries. The legislation would complete the job Congress intended to accomplish over a decade ago, and benefit the State lotteries in their efforts to operate secure and efficient games. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1955

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. STATE-CONDUCTED LOTTERIES.

Section 305 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1305) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) This section shall not apply to printed paper that may be used as tickets, advertisements, or other materials concerning a lottery which—

"(A) is conducted by a State under the authority of State law, or

"(B) is designed to be used in a foreign country in a lottery authorized by the law of that foreign country.

"(2) For purposes of this section—

"(A) The term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any territory or possession of the United States.

"(B) The term 'foreign country' means any foreign country, empire, dominion, colony, protectorate, or any subdivision thereof.

"(C) The term 'lottery' means the pooling of proceeds derived from the sale of tickets or chances and allotting those proceeds, or parts thereof, by chance to one or more chance takers or ticket purchasers. Such term does not include the placing or accepting of bets or wagers on sporting events or contests.".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendment made by this Act shall take effect on the date that is 15 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN:

S. 1957. A bill for the relief of Lynne Cleaver and her child, Leigh Alison Cleaver; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

RELIEF OF LYNNE CLEAVER AND HER CHILD LEIGH ALISON CLEAVER

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a private bill for the relief of Lynne Cleaver and her child, Leigh Alison Cleaver.

The situation of Mrs. Cleaver, who is an Australian national, and her child is one that commends itself to me as ordinary decency in the treatment of persons at work in this country who have supported themselves and have made themselves invaluable members of the community, but who have also found themselves in the situation where through no fault of their own, they are likely to have their children separated one from the other if they are required to return to Australia.

It is my great hope that the Committee on the Judiciary might expedite the consideration of this matter and that the Immigration and Naturalization Service will, in the meantime, stay its deportation, which would serve no useful purpose, and which would jeopardize children in a way that none of us would wish to have happen.

By Mr. DECONCINI:

S. 1958. A bill to prohibit the Department of Defense from obligating or expending any funds for the procurement of certain toilet cover shrouds; to the Committee on Armed Services.

TO CURB ABUSE IN DEFENSE PROCUREMENT SYSTEM

● Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today aimed at curbing waste in the Department of Defense procurement system.

Ten months ago the weapons procurement reformers and concerned American taxpayers read about the $640 custom-made toilet seat covers built for Navy planes by the Lockheed Corp. After the ensuing public outcry and swirling controversy the company decided in February to lower the price to $100 each for 54 of the toilet parts. However, hoping to cap the controversy, the company invited 30 small plastics products firms to bid for the next lot of 10 covers. These companies have declined to bid on such a small quantity and Lockheed has thus decided to continue to supply covers to the Navy at their lowest possible price—$544 each. This type of arrogance by defense contractors cannot and should not be tolerated.

My bill, Mr. President, would not permit more than $125 to be obligated or expended by the Department of Defense during fiscal year 1986 for each plastic toilet cover shroud referred to as toilet assembly 941673-101. The $125 figure was arrived at by using the lowest bid offered by a private firm before the quantity was limited to 10.

My staff has spent time researching the cost of "civilian" toilet seats. Local drug stores and plumbing suppliers enumerated prices for fancy oak-stained seats and covers at $23.99; heavily padded, no-tear, and automatic return-to-form cushioned (guaranteed not to indent) at $25; regular generic plastic seats and cover at $7.99; and even your favorite college or professional team logo inscribed for $25 as you lift up the seat.

Many of my esteemed colleagues will consider this legislation frivolous and light-hearted. They might say this is an insignificant and paltry amount of money in comparison to high cost ticket items such as the B-1 bomber, the MX missile, or star wars. When Pentagon programs have a $302 billion military budget for this year—$827 million a day—the potential savings of $419 per toilet cover seems trivial. This amendment seeks to address the underlying problem of over-runs, waste and abuse. The growing publicity about the excesses—the $7,622 coffeemakers, the $439 hammers, and the $544 toilet covers—is symptomatic of this widespread perception of a gluttonous industry. If we allow the military contractors to continue this spectacular run of fraud, waste, and overcharge on spare parts—what hope do we have to keep them honest in their bids on weapons, aircraft and engines?

This bill is not intended to be humorous. My effort to flush this costly and flawed program into the open is a serious attempt to hold contractors to goals and targets and keep the military budget within prudent spending limits. The potential for public furor and condemnation increases dramatically if we cannot control and account for the small items in the procurement process. Contractors must realize we Senators are genuinely serious about controlling gross inefficiency and reckless use of taxpayers' money. Vigorous fact-checking and congressional oversight now will save us millions in future contracts.

Not long ago General Dynamics Corp. was indicted when three of its top officials were charged with defrauding the government on a weapons contract. The indictment alleges that General Dynamics tried to hide the cost overruns on the Division Air Defense antiaircraft gun project known as Divad. This involved shifting $7.5 million in excess costs to two other company accounts that were also funded by the Defense Department. In addition, General Dynamics did not pay any taxes between 1981 and 1984.

My amendment cannot be called ridiculous or outrageous if it intends to discourage waste and inefficiency. Whether it involves $500 or $7.5 million, we have to send a firm and resounding message to companies which overtly attempt to flush taxpayers' money down the drain. There were 72 suspensions and debarments of contractors abusing Government policy and procedure in 1980. This has dramatically proliferated to 402 in 1984 and 457 so far in 1985. This incredible increase can be attributed to better enforcement methods, more available money for defense programs, eroding ethical practices on the part of defense industries, and less concern voiced by the U.S. Congress. We cannot afford to let this continue.

Mr. President, it took Government much too long to uncover the abuse and overruns on spare parts. History cannot repeat itself on costly weapons including cruise missiles, fighter planes and laser systems in star wars. Cost overruns in these systems will eventually bust the budget. American taxpayers need to know that the expenditure of these tax dollars have been rigorously scrutinized. After all, Mr. President, if it costs over $500 to cover a toilet in an airplane, how much will it cost in space?

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an editorial from the Los Angeles Times concerning the potential for abuse in the highly classified "black project areas" of the Pentagon be printed at the end of my statement. These programs are hidden from public view and have grown from $742 million in research and development in 1980 to $5.7 billion in 1985.

Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Los Angeles Times, Nov. 17, 1985]

DEFENSE DEPARTMENT ABUSES NEED FOR WEAPONS SECRECY

(By Richard C. Barnard)

Once again, the Defense Department is tip-toeing backward into the tar pits of public condemnation. The Public furor over spare parts pricing will pale by comparison with a second public backlash against defense spending that is likely to arrive soon.

In the coming months, the taxpayers gradually will realize that too many weapons projects and too many billions of dollars are hidden from public view in the rats' maze of highly "black" programs nurtured by the Pentagon. Those digging into their pockets to pay for an ample defense will grow resentful that so much is needlessly kept from them.

A wide range of costly weapons including a fighter plane, a bomber and a variety of cruise missiles are called black projects because they are both highly classified and compartmentalized. Money for the black programs is disguised by tucking it away in a number of public budget lines items. The black funds there are placed in what Pentagon officials call pockets. Few people knowwhere the pockets are or how much is in them.

One black project, the Stealth bomber, is reported to be one of the most costly in the nation's history. Information about black projects is circulated to a comparatively tiny number of government and congressional officials.

Despite their cost and diversity, black projects are exempt from much of the fact-checking and congressional oversight common to billion-dollar weapons developed in plain view.

Major policy and budget decisions are made without benefit of the discussion and debate that are a normal part of decision-making in Washington.

The number and diversity of black projects once were controlled to keep the nation's real secrets secret. Since 1980, however, the Pentagon's use of black stamps has become a bureaucratic cancer. By unofficial count, black projects in 1980 totaled $742 million, or 6% of the Pentagon's $12.4 billion in research and development accounts.

By 1985 that figure had risen almost eightfold to at least $5.7 billion or 17% of the R&D total. That is what can be estimated with a calculator and common sense. Old hands in the Pentagon place the actual R&D figure closer to $9 billion. Procurement dollars push the total even higher.

The likelihood of bureaucratic abuse rises right along with the dollar amounts. "We need secrecy," says an industry official who has run black projects for years, "but a lot of the programs are black because the people involved want to protect themselves. There has to be an end to it."

Cost overruns and system failures are easier to handle far from the spotlight's hot glare. It is simple to begin a new venture—needed or not—under the protective cover of a black stamp. Eventually, the security officer's power becomes a convenience.

When appropriate, secrecy is synonymous with defense. Surveilliance and intelligence programs should be kept far from prying eyes. That is vital. But is it necessary that all aspects of the $47 billion Stealth bomber project be black? American taxpayer have never been asked. The Pentagon should release the budget, in general terms, and protect the technology.

Only months ago, senior Air Force officials rejected an internal plan to declassify much of the bomber project. With the exception of engine design and mounting, there is little about the Air Force Joint Tactical Missile that need by highly classifed.

It is only a matter of time before the public gets a peek inside the rats' maze and is repelled by what is there. A huge systems failure? Another crash of a black plane? A billion dollars squandered? What will be the equivalent of the infamous $650 hammer within the black system? It certainly is there somewhere. And it will be used for the same purpose as was the scandal over spare parts pricing: to damage public faith in the Pentagon and in the defense industry.

There are even larger reasons why the number and cost of black projects must be reduced. Our is an open society. We remain a free people partly because of our adversarial system of government. We normally choose the marketplace of ideas over the government censor.

There is a need for secrecy. But the Defense Department is abusing its broad authority for short-term gains.

Government and industry awakened far too late to the political implications of the horror stories about spare parts. Let us hope that sad performance is not repeated.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds appropriated to or for the use of the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for the procurement of any plastic toilet cover shrouds, identified as toilet assembly number 941673-101, at a unit cost in excess of $125.●

By Mr. CHAFEE:

S. 1959. A bill to clarify the tax treatment of certain mortgage related securities, to authorize the ownership of certain mortgage loans in multiple class arrangements, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

SECONDARY MARKET TAX AMENDMENTS

● Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am today introducing the Secondary Market Tax Amendments of 1986 [SECTA]. This bill is designed to clarify and modernize the tax treatment of the instruments issued in the growing secondary mortgage market. Currently, securities in this market are issued and traded under a set of anachronistic tax rules that are causing inefficiencies in the market and creating confusion for investors as to the proper tax treatment of earnings on these securities.

The legislation is expected to reduce mortgage interest costs for homeowners by facilitating investments in mortgages, and to provide greater flexibility, higher yields, and reduced transaction costs to financial institutions seeking to liquidate portions of their portfolio of seasoned mortgages. The legislation is intended to be revenue neutral. Indeed, I hope there may be some revenue gains from improved taxpayer compliance.

In 1983 about $200 billion in home mortgage loans were originated by thrift institutions, mortgage bankers, commercial banks, and other lenders. Although most of these loans were made to be held in the portfolio of the original lender, more than a third of the loans—about $70 billion—were sold to investors in the form of securities backed by mortgage loans. An additional $15 billion of seasoned mortgage loans, originated some years earlier and initially held in the lender's portfolio, were also sold to investors in the form of mortgage backed securities. The market in which these mortgage loans are pooled, turned into securities, and sold to investors is known as the secondary mortgage market.

The existence of an efficient secondary market for both new loans and older seasoned mortgage loans is of critical importance to mortgage lenders of all types. And, since the secondary market can help lower mortgage interest rates for the consumer, improvements in the efficiency of the secondary market can also spur greater home construction and home ownership.

The secondary mortgage market is not only of concern to the housing sector. It is a large and important part of the financial and credit markets. By the end of 1984 the total amount of outstanding publicly issued mortgage backed securities was about $300 billion. In comparison, outstanding publicly issued corporate securities totaled slightly over $400 billion.

Despite its importance to the housing industry, and its significant size in relation to the rest of the credit markets, the secondary mortgage operates under a set of tax rules that are at best ambiguous and uncertain, and at worst simply ill-suited to the unique characteristics of the market. In almost all cases, the inadequacy of these rules does not result from an intentional decision to tax mortgage-backed securities in a particular way to serve some competing policy goal. Rather, the inadequacy results from the rapid growth of the secondary market in the last 15 years, and the concomitant failure to focus on the problems arising from applying existing rules to these transactions.

A fundamental feature of any successful mortgage-backed security is the imposition of tax liability arising from mortgage payments on the investors in the security, rather than the issuer of the security. Under current law this can be accomplished in two ways. The most common way is to use a so-called pass-through investment vehicle, in which the mortgages are legally owned by the trustee of a grantor trust, and beneficially owned by the investors. Cash payments on the underlying mortgages, as well as all tax consequences of the ownership of such mortgages are passed through to the investors as beneficiaries of the trust. The second way is to create a taxable entity that issues bonds—backed by mortgage loans—called collateralized mortgage obligations [CMO's]. In this situation, the bond issuer recognizes income arising from ownership of the mortgages and deducts interest on the obligation issued to the bondholders, who in turn report the interest as income on their tax returns.

Unfortunately, the tax rules governing both of these investment vehicles were not designed with mortgage-backed securities in mind. The grantor trust rules were written principally to deal with family trusts, and the rules governing corporate obligations were written with traditional corporate securities in mind.

Current law permits investors to acquire direct interests in a pool of mortgage loans by acquiring ownership interests in a grantor trust. Under the grantor trust rules, the trust is not treated as a taxable entity. The trust investors, who as beneficiaries are entitled to receive all net income from the trust assets, are instead required to pay taxes on their allocable portion of the trust's income. This method of taxation is commonly referred to as pass-through treatment. It is similar to the treatment afforded to partnerships and S corporations.

Under longstanding principles of case law and Treasury regulations, an investment trust qualifying for pass-through treatment must provide terms of investment that are essentially fixed when the trust is created. Thus, mortgages generally cannot be bought and sold or replaced with other investments without losing the benefits of pass-through treatment. If a trust provides for such powers of active investment management it will be characterized as an association taxable as a corporation. The imposition of a separate corporate income tax on the income of the trust, in addition to the shareholder level income taxes would more than offset the financial advantages of pooling mortgages into an investment vehicle.

Under proposed Treasury regulations, pass-through treatment is denied to certain trusts with a fixed portfolio of investments where the trust provides for multiple classes of beneficial ownership. Under the proposed regulations, such trusts are entitled to pass-through treatment only if the different classes of ownership represent ownership in specifically identified stripped coupons or stripped bonds that are subject to the rules of code section 1286. The regulations deny pass-through treatment of so-called fast-pay/slow-pay trusts that entitle different classes to receive different payments of interest and principal that are not specifically identified, but identified by reference to the timing of the receipt of cash payments by the trust—that is, the cash-flows at the trust level).

Despite the fact that CMO's and pass-through trust arrangements are similar, there are a number of advantages to the trust format. In the trust format, the thrift institution, mortgage banker, commercial bank, or other institution sells the mortgages to the trust. In the CMO format, the institution retains ownership of the mortgages and issues bonds secured by the mortgages.

The advantages of selling mortgages to a trust include the following:

First, selling mortgages, instead of issuing debt backed by mortgages, means that added debt does not need to be carried on an institutions's balance sheet. Balance sheet concerns now effectively preclude many mortgage bankers, thrifts, and other financial institutions from participating in the CMO market to any significant extent.

Second, in a CMO issue that is classified as debt for tax purposes, the issuer may be required to retain an equity interest in the mortgages. In other words, the issuer cannot fully borrow against the value of the mortgages, and must retain a residual interest in the mortgages. With less cash received up front, the CMO is less useful as a financial liquidity device for thrifts seeking to restructure their portfolios. This equity requirement also imposes additional legal, accounting and capital costs on the issuer. In part, this is attributable to the fact that current law is unclear as to whether any equity at all is required. These transaction costs may reduce the financial advantages of the CMO.

Third, investments in CMO's, as opposed to investments in a grantor trust containing mortgages, do not technically qualify as mortgage investments. This is of concern to thrifts and other entities that are required by various tax rules to invest in mortgages.

Fourth, the technical tax rules for CMO's are uncertain and may impose taxes on an issuer despite the fact that it has not truly received any economic gain. This phantom income problem of income without gain can be quite serious where the collateral is seasoned mortgages that bear less tha.. current market interest rates.

The bill I am introducing today is based on the technical recommendations of a group of distinguished tax practitioners and financial experts who have been meeting to study the tax problems of the secondary mortgage market transactions for almost a year now. Their efforts to suggest helpful legislative changes in this area will be the first step in a legislative process that I am sure will involve further refinements of this proposal. I welcome the comments and suggestions of the Treasury Department and other interested parties in the private sector, such as the tax bar and mortgage finance experts. In that regard, Mr. President, I also wish to announce that as chairman of the Senate Finance Subcommittee on Taxation and Debt Management I intend to schedule a hearing early next year on the provisions of this bill, and other possible approaches to the tax issues facing the secondary mortgage market.

The legislation has four major provisions:

First, the bill permits CMO-like investment arrangements to be structured as ownership interests in a passive, multiple class entity—referred to as a collateralized mortgage security or CMS—with strict rules designed to ensure that the amount, timing, and character of income realized by the investors is not reduced, slowed down or otherwise modified so as to be adverse to the revenues of the Treasury.

Second, the bill clarifies the precise method of computing original issue discount on CMS's, in a manner that reduces inappropriate phantom income taxable to issuers.

Third, the bill provides that investments in the newly authorized CMS are treated as investments in mortgages under the Tax Code. This would enable thrift institutions and real estate investment trusts to invest in the new instrument and retain the tax advantages of investing in mortgages.

Fourth, the bill provides for expanded information reporting on mortgage related securities.

The tax rules and principle which the bill applies to mortgage backed securities were written with residential mortgages in mind, principally because that is the area where there is the greatest volume of secondary market transactions and thus the greatest need for clarification of the Tax Code. Residential mortgages are generally obligations of individuals, and generally self-amortizing loans. This contrasts with the traditional bonds and debentures traded in the capital markets, which tend to be corporate obligations with balloon payments of principal.

The focus of the bill is on mortgages for another reason. There is much more data, and better understanding, of how mortgages and mortgage backed securities behave than there is of other asset-based securities. However, it is my understanding and expectation that as this bill is considered, one of the issues that will arise is whether the bill's proposed tax rules should be extended to other types of asset-based securities, such as car loans or consumer credit loans.

It is my expectation that if the Congress concludes that these rules make sense for mortgage backed securities, and we come to more fully understand how they would apply to other asset-based securities, then it may be sensible to extend these rules to a broader category of asset-based securities. I welcome the support and comments of my colleagues in trying to establish clearer tax rules which could eventually apply to many types of asset-based securities.

Finally, there is one important point I would like to make about the scope of this bill. The major impetus for this legislation, in my view, is the need to clarify and rationalize the tax rules governing a large and important segment of the capital markets, the secondary mortgage market. There is an existing industry with existing financing mechanisms that are in need of sensible and neutral tax rules, that reflect the true economic substance of the transactions involved. This bill is strictly a tax bill that does not address any credit policy issues, or differentiate among different types of securities on the basis of any credit policy concerns, and consequently debate on the bill should be confined to tax policy issues.

At this point, Mr. President, I would ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD the text of the bill and a technical explanation of the bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1959

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as "The Secondary Market Tax Amendments of 1986."

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS TO ORIGINAL ISSUE DISCOUNT RULES.

Section 1272(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(7) If the schedule of amounts payable on any debt instrument is subject to acceleration under a formula based principally on the extent of prepayments of qualified obligations owned by the issuer, then

"(A) the increase described in paragraph (3) shall be determined under paragraph (8), and

"(B) the issuer may elect, subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary, to apply this section using a regular accrual period shorter than that required by paragraph (5).

For purposes of this paragraph, a qualified obligation includes any obligation or interest described in section 1290(e) (1) or (2) (without regard to any requirement of assignment to an issue).

"(8) In the case of an instrument to which this paragraph applies, the increase described in paragraph (3) for an accrual period shall be the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the sum of—

"(i) any payments during the accrual period of amounts included in the stated redemption price at maturity of the instrument, and

"(ii) the present value of the debt instrument at the beginning of the following accrual period, determined using as the discount rate the original yield to maturity of the debt instrument (within the meaning of paragraph (3)), over

"(B) the adjusted issue price of the instrument at the beginning of the accrual period.

In the case of any debt instrument to which this paragraph applies, no prepayments on qualified obligations (other than those guaranteed to occur) shall be anticipated in determining the instrument's original yield to maturity under this section, or in determining the instrument's present value under this paragraph."

SEC. 3. MULTIPLE CLASS INTERESTS IN CERTAIN DEBT INSTRUMENTS.

Part V of Subchapter P of Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to special rules for bonds and other debt instruments) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new Subpart:

"(2) may provide for interest or similar amounts to be paid or accrued on the outstanding balance of the payments described in the preceding paragraph.

"(d) A 'residual interest' is a registered transferable interest in an issue whose terms are fixed on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue and which entitles the holder only to receive one or more payments the amount and timing of which are wholly contingent upon—

"(1) the extent of prepayments on qualified obligations;

"(2) the extent of income from permitted investments; or

"(3) contingent payments on qualified obligations.

"(e) A 'qualified obligation' includes—

"(1) the establishment or maintenance of reasonable reserves incidental to the holding of qualified obligations, or

"(2) the temporary reinvestment of portfolio cash flows.

"(g) A 'holder' is an owner of one or more interests of an issue.

"SEC. 1291. CONSEQUENCES OF TRANSFERRING ASSETS TO ISSUE.

"(a) HOLDERS, NOT ISSUER OR ISSUE, SUBJECT TO TAX.—

"(1) Except as otherwise provided in section 1295(a) (relating to penalty taxes) an issuer electing (in the manner prescribed by regulations) to apply the provisions of this section, and any issue subject to such election, shall not be subject to tax imposed by this subtitle on income attributable to the ownership or disposition of qualified obligations or permitted investments of the issue.

"(2) Notwithstanding the form in which interests are issued, the holders (including the issuer to the extent the issuer is also a holder)—

"(A) shall be subject to taxation on such income in the manner prescribed in this subpart, and

"(B) for purposes of this subtitle shall be treated as the owners of undivided interests in the qualified obligations and permitted investments of the issue (in proportion to the adjusted basis of the holder's interest, divided by the aggregate adjusted basis of all outstanding interests of the issue).

"(b) TRANSFERS OF PROPERTY TO ISSUE.—

"(1) RECOGNITION OF GAINS IN GENERAL.—Upon the transfer of property to an issue, gain shall be recognized to the transferor to the extent such property is transferred in exchange for money and any other property (other than residual interests).

"(2) RECOGNITION OF LOSSES IN GENERAL.—Upon the transfer of property to an issue, loss shall not be recognized to the transferor to the extent such property is transferred in exchange for money and other property (other than regular and residual interests).

"(3) ALLOCATION OF BASIS OF PROPERTY TRANSFERRED.—The amount of gain or loss recognized under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be determined by allocating the basis of the property transferred in proportion to the amount of money and the fair market value of the other property (including interests) received. For purposes of the preceding sentence, if on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue the fair market value of the residual interests in the issue is less than 1 percent of the fair market value of all interests in the issue, the issuer may elect to treat such residual interests as having a fair market value equal to zero.

"(4) DEFERRED RECOGNITION OF GAINS AND LOSSES.—Any gain (or loss) not recognized to the holder of an interest pursuant to paragraph (1) (or paragraph (2)) shall be treated as outside discount (or outside premium) subject to section 1294.

"(5) DEFERRED RECOGNITION OF GAINS.—The Secretary may prescribe regulations providing for the deferred recognition of gain in a transfer subject to paragraph (1), to the extent the interests received and owned by the transferor are in the aggregate substantially similar to the property transferred.

"(6) ADJUSTED BASIS OF INTERESTS.—The adjusted basis of an interest received in a transfer described in paragraphs (1) or (2) shall be equal to the amount of money and the fair market value of property transferred in exchange for the interest (determined as of the first day of the first taxable year of the issue).

"(c) RECOVERY OF EXPENSES OF ISSUE.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—Expenses paid or incurred by any holder, or the withholding of any expenses from amounts otherwise payable to any holder (other than deductions allowable to the beneficial owner of qualified obligations pursuant to the provision's of section 671) shall not be taken into account in determining the holder's income under section 1292 or section 1294. Such expenses shall be recovered in the manner prescribed by this subsection.

"(2) OPERATING EXPENSES.—Expenses paid or incurred by the issuer, any holder, or any other taxpayer in connection with the operation of the issue (whether or not such expenses are subject to being withheld from amounts otherwise payable to the taxpayer as a holder) shall be recovered as if the issue were a debt instrument issued by the taxpayer responsible for such expenses.

"(3) ISSUANCE EXPENSES.—Expenses paid or incurred by the issuer (whether or not such expenses are subject to being withheld from amounts otherwise payable to the issuer as a holder) in connection with the creation of an issue shall be allocated among the interests sold or exchanged and the interests retained by the issuer in proportion to their respective fair market values. Expenses in connection with the sale or exchange of interests shall be allocated to the interests sold or exchanged and shall be recovered as selling expenses. Any expenses allocated under this paragraph to interests retained shall be recovered as if such expenses were outside premium (within the meaning of section 1294).

"SEC. 1292. TAXATION OF HOLDERS.

"(a) REGULAR INTERESTS.—The holder of a regular interest shall include as ordinary interest income—

"(1) the amount of income (including original issue discount) which would be includible by an accrual basis holder if such interest were a debt instrument to which section 1272(a) applied (determined without regard to section 1272(a)(6)), and

"(2) the sum of the daily portions of additional issue income allocable to the interest under subsection (c) for each day during the taxable year on which such holder holds such interest.

For purposes of this subsection, in determining the amount of original issue discount described in paragraph (1) for any accrual period, an interest shall be considered to have an adjusted issue price at the beginning of the accrual period equal to its adjusted basis at the beginning of the period.

"(b) RESIDUAL INTERESTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The holder of a residual interest shall include as ordinary interest income the sum of the daily portions of residual income determined under paragraph (2), and the daily portions of additional issue income allocated to the interest under subsection (c) for each day during the taxable year on which such holder holds such interest.

"(2) RESIDUAL INCOME.—For purposes of paragraph (1) the daily portion of residual income shall be determined by allocating to each day in the accrual period its ratable portion of amounts paid or credited with respect to the interest for the period, reduced (but not below zero) by its basis recovery amount.

"(3) BASIS RECOVERY AMOUNT.—The basis recovery amount of an interest for an accrual period is the sum of—

"(A) the unused basis recovery amount carried forward from the preceding accrual period, and

"(B) the allocable portion of the adjusted basis of the interest on its issuance date, determined by allocating such basis ratably over its estimated duration (determined as of its issuance date).

"(4) UNUSED BASIS RECOVERY AMOUNT.—The unused basis recovery amount for an accrual period is the excess of "(A) basis recovery amount for such period over,

"(B) the amounts paid or credited with respect to the interest for the period.

"(c) ADDITIONAL ISSUE INCOME.—

"(1) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF ADDITIONAL ISSUE INCOME.—For purposes of this subsection, the additional issue income for an accrual period is the excess of—

"(A) the cumulative amount of taxable income which would have been includible with respect to the issue for the term ending with the end of the accrual period, if the issue were a corporation reporting income on the accrual method with a taxable year beginning on the first day of its first taxable year, over

"(B) the sum of—

"(i) the cumulative amount of income includible under this section (determined without regard to section 1294), for the term ending with the end of the prior accrual period, and

"(ii) the income includible under subsections (a) and (b) (determined without regard to section 1294) for the period.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of subparagraph (A) of the preceding paragraph—

"(A) All gains and losses on the sale, exchange, or redemption of qualified obligations and permitted investments shall be treated as giving rise to ordinary income and loss;

"(B) No deductions shall be allowed for any expenses other than expenses allowable to the beneficial owner of a qualified obligation under section 671;

"(C) The basis of property transferred to an issue shall be its fair market value on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue; and

"(D) The Secretary may prescribe such additional exceptions and rules as may be necessary to implement the purposes of this subsection.

"(3) ALLOCATION RULES.—

"(A) GENERAL RULE OF ALLOCATION.—Additional issue income for an accrual period shall be allocated among all regular interests outstanding at the end of the period in proportion to the amount of original issue discount described in section 1292(a)(1) with respect to such interests for the period.

"(B) LIMITATION TO UNTAXED DISCOUNT.—If the application of paragraph (A) would result in the allocation of additional issue income to any interest in excess of its untaxed discount (determined as of the beginning of the accrual period), then additional issue income shall be allocated to such interest only to the extent of such untaxed discount. Any additional issue income not allocated by the application of the preceding sentence shall then be allocated by applying paragraph (A) and this paragraph as if such interest was not outstanding.

"(C) UNTAXED DISCOUNT.—For purposes of this section, the untaxed discount of a regular interest at the beginning of an accrual period is the excess of:

"(1) the original issue discount of such interest determined as if it were a debt instrument to which section 1272(a) applied over,

"(2) the sum of the adjustments to the adjusted basis of such interest under section 1293(a) for all prior accrual periods.

"(D) ALLOCATION TO RESIDUAL HOLDERS.—Any additional issue income not allocated to regular interests for an accrual period shall be allocated among all residual interests outstanding at the end of the period, in proportion to the amount of income includible with respect to each such interest for the period under subsection (b).

"SEC. 1293. BASIS RULES AND TRANSFERS OF INTERESTS.

"(a) BASIS ADJUSTMENTS.—The adjusted basis of an interest in the hands of any holder shall be equal to its adjusted basis on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue—

"(1) increased by the amount of income includible with respect to the interest under section 1292 (determined without regard to section 1294), and

"(2) decreased (but not below zero) by any amounts distributed with respect to the interest.

"(b) TRANSFERS OF INTERESTS.—If a holder transfers an interest in a sale or other disposition, gain or loss shall be recognized to the transferor as if the interest were a debt instrument with a basis in the hands of the transferor equal to the adjusted basis of the interest on the date of the transfer.

"(c) PARTIAL OR COMPLETE WORTHLESSNESS OF INTERESTS.—A holder of an interest shall be entitled to a deduction for losses attributable to the partial or total worthlessness of an interest (but only to the extent such worthlessness is attributable to the partial or total worthlessness of a qualifying obligation or permitted investment of an issue) to the same extent as if the interest were a debt instrument with a basis in the hands of the owner of such instrument equal to the adjusted basis of the interest on the date the loss arises (increased by the amount of any outside premium (or decreased by the amount of any outside discount) not accounted for under section 1294 as of the date the loss arises).

"SEC. 1294. OUTSIDE DISCOUNT AND PREMIUM.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—

"(1) A holder's outside premium is the excess (if any) of the holder's cost for the interest, over the adjusted basis of the interest on the date of acquisition by the holder.

"(2) A holder's outside discount is the excess (if any) of the adjusted basis of the interest on the date of acquisition by the holder over the holder's cost for the interest.

"(b) REGULAR INTERESTS.—

"(1) RECOVERY OF OUTSIDE PREMIUM IN GENERAL.—Outside premium with respect to a holder's regular interest that does not exceed the untaxed discount of the interest on the date of acquisition by the holder shall be recovered as a deduction amortized in proportion to the inclusion of amounts treated as original issue discount and additional issue income with respect to the interest. The excess outside premium, if any, shall be recovered as a deduction amortized in proportion to the recovery of principal or similar amounts.

"(2) INCLUSION OF OUTSIDE DISCOUNT IN GENERAL.—Outside discount with respect to a holder's regular interest shall be includible in income in the same manner as if the interest were an obligation acquired with market discount equal to the holder's outside discount.

"(3) SALES OF INTERESTS.—Any outside premium not accounted for under paragraph (1) (or outside discount not accounted for under paragraph (2)) before an interest is sold or exchanged in a transaction in which gain or loss is recognized shall be treated as if attributable to an increase (or decrease in the case of outside discount) in the adjusted basis of the interest immediately before such sale or exchange.

"(4) CHARACTER OF GAIN OR LOSS, ETC.—The character of gain or loss attributable to paragraphs (2) or (3) of this subsection (whether attributable to the holding of an interest or to its retirement or sale or exchange) shall be determined by treating the interest as an obligation of the same type as the qualified obligations and permitted investments comprising the portfolio of the issue. If the portfolio is comprised of assets of different types of issuers, this paragraph shall be applied by allocating such gain or loss among the different types of assets in proportion to their adjusted basis in the hands of the issue (except to the extent the Secretary prescribes a different allocation method). If 85 percent or more of the aggregate adjusted basis of such assets is attributable to one type of asset, all of the assets shall be treated as of that type.

"(1) OUTSIDE PREMIUM.—Outside premium with respect to a residual interest shall be recovered by the holder as if a ratable portion of such premium were added to the basis recovery amounts of such interest for the period (if any) beginning with the date of acquisition of the interest and ending with the end of the estimated duration of the interest (within the meaning of section 1292(b)(3)).

"(2) OUTSIDE DISCOUNT.—A holder's outside discount on a residual interest shall be included in income as if a ratable portion of the discount were subtracted from the basis recovery amounts of such interest for the period (if any) beginning with the date of acquisition of the interest and ending with the end of the estimated duration of the interest (within the meaning of section 1292(b)(3)).

"(3) SALES OF INTERESTS.—Any premium not accounted for under paragraph (1) (or discount not accounted for under paragraph (2)) before an interest is sold or exchanged in a transaction in which gain or loss is recognized shall be treated as if attributable to an increase (or decrease, in the case of discount) in the adjusted basis of such interest immediately before such sale or exchange.

"(4) CHARACTER OF GAIN OR LOSS, ETC.—The character of gain or loss attributable to paragraphs (2) or (3) of this subsection (whether attributable to the holding of an interest or to its retirement or sale or exchange) shall be determined by treating the interest as an obligation of the same type as the qualified obligations and permitted investments comprising the portfolio of the issue. If the portfolio is comprised of assets of different types, this paragraph shall be applied by allocating such gain or loss among the different types of assets in proportion to their adjusted basis in the hands of the issue (except to the extent the Secretary prescribes a different allocation method). If 85 percent or more of the aggregate adjusted basis of such assets is attributable to one type of asset, all of the assets shall be treated as of that type.

"SEC. 1295. SPECIAL RULES.

"(a) TAXES ON PROHIBITED TRANSACTIONS.—There is hereby imposed on the issuer a tax of 100% of the net income derived from the following prohibited transactions (determined in a manner similar to that prescribed in section 857(b)(6):

"(1) the sale or other disposition of any qualified obligation transferred to an issue, other than pursuant to—

"(A) the substitution of a defective obligation within 2 years of the first day of the first taxable year of the issue;

"(B) the bankruptcy or insolvency of the issuer or the issue;

"(C) a qualifying complete liquidation described in subsection (b).

"(D) dispositions incident to the foreclosure, default, or imminent default of an obligation;

"(2) the receipt of any income attributable to any assets transferred to an issue other then qualified obligations and permitted investments;

"(3) the receipt of any income from the sale or operation of property described in section 1290(e)(5) more than 1 year after its acquisition by the issue; and

"(4) the receipt or retention by the issue of amounts representing fees or other compensation for services.

"(b) RULES FOR COMPLETE LIQUIDATIONS.—

"(1) REQUIREMENTS FOR COMPLETE LIQUIDATION.—If the issuer adopts a plan of complete liquidation and,

"(A) all of the assets of the issue (other than cash) are sold within a 90-day liquidation period ending no later than 90 days after the adoption of the plan, and

"(B) all of the cash proceeds of the liquidation are credited or distributed to holders on the last day of such liquidation period, then the provisions of paragraph (2) of this subsection shall apply.

"(2) TREATMENT OF COMPLETE LIQUIDATION.—Except as otherwise provided in regulations consistent with the purposes of this subsection, in the case of a complete liquidation to which this paragraph applies—

(A) no gain or loss shall be recognized to the issue for purposes of section 1292(c)(1) on the sale of any qualified obligations during the liquidation period, and

(B) amounts credited or distributed to holders (other than amounts representing interest or similar amounts) shall be treated as amounts received upon the sale or exchange of an interest.

"(c) PROCEDURAL PROVISION.—

"(1) ANNUAL RETURNS.—Every issuer shall file an annual return for each issue providing such information as the Secretary may require for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this subpart. Each failure to comply with this requirement shall be treated as a failure to comply with this section 1275(c)(2) with respect to a separate issue.

"(2) TAX TREATMENT OF ISSUE ITEMS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, provisions similar to those contained in sections 6241, 6242, 6243, 6244, and 6245 shall apply to the issuers and holders of any issue."

"(d) SPECIAL RULES APPLICABLE TO RESIDUAL INTERESTS.—

(1) Any statement in a prospectus subject to the Securities Act of 1933, stating the estimated prepayment rate and estimated reinvestment rate used in determining the estimated lives of interests for purposes of pricing such issue may be relied upon in estimating the duration of a residual interest under section 1292(b), unless such estimated rates are clearly erroneous.

(2) The Secretary may, by regulation, prescribe rules (in place of the provisions of section 1292(b)) applying the principles of section 1286 to—

"(A) residual interests that entitle the holder to payments wholly contingent upon the receipt of contingent payments on qualified obligations (excluding contingencies related to the prepayment of such obligation), and

"(B) residual interests that entitle the holder to receive payments of interest on qualified obligations based on a rate of interest payable on such obligations in excess of the highest coupon rate payable on a substantial portion of interests in the issue."

(d) Any issuer of a debt instrument or issue of collateralized mortgage securities issued after the date of introduction of this bill may elect (subject to such conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe by regulations) to apply the provisions of sections 2, 3, and 4, of this Act to such issue.

TECHNICAL EXPLANATION OF THE SECONDARY MARKET TAX AMENDMENT OF 1986 [SECTA]

OVERVIEW

The bill would clarify the proper method of applying the OID rules of current law to mortgage related debt where the timing of payments by the issuer of the debt obligation is not fixed but is related to the timing of payments received by the issuer on the underlying loans backing the debt obligation.[1]

The bill would also authorize a new multiple class, mortgage related security referred to as a collateralized mortgage security or CMS. For Federal tax purposes, the issuer would be treated as transferring to the security holders beneficial ownership of the underlying loans. Rules would be provided to ensure that security holders are taxed appropriately.[2]

In addition, the bill would require issuers of mortgage related securities to file information returns reporting the security holders' interest income.[3]

The bill is intended to solve a variety of tax problems and anomalies that have arisen in the context of securities backed by mortgage loans. However, the principles underlying the bill's provisions are not industry specific, and could be applied to securities backed by other types of debt instruments similar to mortgages.

1. Clarification of OID Rules

A. Present Law OID Computation

Under present law, the amount of OID required to be accounted for currently is computed under the so-called constant yield method. Under that method, the first step is to compute an obligation's yield assuming that it has a constant yield to maturity.

The OID for the first 6-month accrual period is computed by multiplying the obligation's yield by its initial issue price, and subtracting any amount payable as interest during that period. For the succeeding period, the obligation's new adjusted issue price is computed by adding to its initial issue price the amount of OID previously reported and subtracting any payments of stated redemption price.

The OID for the period is then computed with reference to the new adjusted issue price in the same manner. This method is applied for each succeeding accrual period until the obligation is redeemed.

B. Applying the OID Rules to Mortgage-Backed Debt

In theory, the periodic adjustments to the obligation's issue price should reflect the increase in the obligation's fair market value, as the period within which the discount will be realized is shortened. This mechanism should ensure that there will be no artificial gains or losses on the sale or redemption of an OID obligation prior to maturity.

In the case of mortgage backed debt, prepayments on underlying loans can alter the obligation's payment schedule, rendering the constant yield method less accurate as a method of accounting for interest income and deductions, and as a method of keeping track of the obligation's adjusted issue price or adjusted prepayments. Without appropriate adjustments for the effect of prepayments, investors and issuers may be overtaxed or undertaxed in comparison to their economic income. In addition, amounts that in economic terms constitute interest may be converted into capital gains.

Several methods have been proposed as possible ways to take into account the effect of prepayments in applying in OID rules. The method adopted by the bill accelerates the recognition of income attributable to the effect of prepayments on the obligation's payment schedule and substantially diminishes or eliminates the possibility of converting ordinary interest income into capital gains. The issuer's interest deductions are accounted for on the same method as the holder's income.

C. Proposal

Instead of computing OID and determining the obligation's new adjusted issue price by reference to the amount of OID previously recognized, the bill would determine the amount of OID to be reported by reference to changes in the obligation's adjusted issue price.[4] The advantage of this method is that adjusted issue price for any period can be determined with greater accuracy simply by determining the present value of the obligation's scheduled payments, as adjusted to take account of the effect of prior prepayments.

Under the bill, the adjusted issue price of a debt obligation at the beginning of any period is the present value of its outstanding scheduled payments after adjusting the payment schedule to take into account prior prepayments, assuming no further prepayments, and discounting at the obligation's yield to maturity.[5] If the yield curve is level, as assumption embodied in the constant yield method, the adjusted issue prices determined in this manner would closely approximate the obligation's fair market value.

Once adjusted issue prices are determined, OID is derived by applying the formula embodied in current law.* Under this formula, the OID for a given period is equal to the adjusted issue price at the beginning of the succeeding period, minus the adjusted issue price at the beginning of the given period, plus the amount of stated redemption price paid in the given period.[6] Generally, this amount will be a positive number, in which case it will be the amount of OID deductions allowable to the issuer and the amount of OID income recognized by the holder.

In theory, a negative OID amount produced by this formula would reflect premature accrual of OID in prior periods. Such a negative amount should be reflected in a deduction to the holder and income to the issuer. Since the method prescribed by the bill assumes no prepayments, however, and adjusts for actual prepayments periodically, negative OID amounts should not arise normally. Accordingly, the bill does not provide for negative OID deductions or negative OID income in cases where the application of the formula produces a negative number.

*Under current law, the adjusted issue price of an obligation at the beginning of an accrual period is derived by applying the formula:

$AIP_i + OID_i - SRP_i = AIP_{i+1}$

In this formula, AIP_i is the adjusted issue price at the beginning of period i, OID_i is the OID accrued in period i, and SRP_i is the amount of any payments of stated redemption price in period i.

Applying the formula to solve for OID produces the formula:

$OID_i = AIP_{i+1} - AIP_i + SRP_i$

These rules will apply to any instrument subject to the periodic inclusion (OID) rules of Section 1272 of the Internal Revenue Code, whose payment schedule is subject to acceleration under a formula based principally on the extent of prepayments of qualified obligations owned by the issuer.[7] For this purpose, a qualified obligation includes any interest in a collateralized mortgage security, any debt obligation that is principally secured by an interest in real property, and any participation certificate of beneficial ownership in any such interest or obligation.[8] It is intended that a formula based on the extent of prepayments of qualified obligations and the amount of income from temporary reinvestment of cash flows on such obligations would be within the ambit of this provision.

The bill would also permit the issuer to elect to account for OID on such instruments on the basis of any regular accrual period shorter than the 6-month period generally applicable.[9]

No inference is intended, by the adoption of these rules, regarding the appropriate method of applying the OID rules under current law.

2. Authorization of Multiple Class Ownership Arrangements

A. Overview

The bill would authorize a multiple-class, mortgage related security referred to as a collateralized mortgage security or CMS.[10] The issuance of a CMS would be treated for Federal tax purposes as a sale of the loans backing the security. However, the security could be structured either in the form of a sale of assets or as debt for state law purposes. In this way, the bill would ensure that the substance of the transaction would govern its treatment for tax purposes.[11] At the same time, however, holders of mortgages with below-market coupons, for example, could issue the security in the form of debt to accommodate state law, regulatory, and accounting concerns unrelated to the security's classification for Federal tax purposes.

Treating the security's issuance for Federal tax purposes as a sale of assets to the security holders will ensure that all income attributable to the assets backing the security will be taxed to the security holders who in substance own the collateral, with no "phantom income" (i.e., income in the absence of economic gain) recognized at the entity level.[12] In addition, by avoiding any requirement that the issuer retain a minimum amount of "equity" in the loans backing the security (a requirement that may be applicable in the case of similar securities qualifying as debt for tax purposes) transaction costs and uncertainty now associated with multiple class mortgage backed securities will be substantially reduced.

Investors in a CMS will be treated as owners of the underlying collateral.[13] Thus, thrift institutions, Real Estate Investment Trusts, and other entities required by the tax law to invest in mortgage loans could do so by investing in a CMS.

B. Organizational Requirements in General

An issue of collateralized mortgage securities is an arrangement created by the issuer for the division of ownership interests in a pool of mortgages and related investment assets into multiple classes of ownership interests.[14] A CMS issue can be issued by, or have the form of, a corporation, trust, association, or partnership.[15]

Under the bill, the tax rules applicable to an issue apply only to the mortgages and related investment assets that are transferred to the issue and accounted for as part of that issue. Accordingly, the bill generally does not affect the taxation of activities of the issuer that are unrelated to the issue.[16]

For example, a corporation may be engaged in mortgage servicing activities, and may also pool mortgages into an issue and sell interests in that issue. The bill's provisions treating the holders of interests in the issue as the owners of the assets of the issue would not affect the existing rules governing the taxation of the issuer's activities as a mortgage servicer. Thus, in this example, the issuer would be subject to tax on such servicing activities, but not on the investment income of the issue, which is properly taxed to the holders of interests in the issue. If the issuer were also a holder of an interest in the issue, however, it would be subject to tax on that interest in the same manner as any other holder.[17] This result is essentially similar to the treatment of a corporation or other entity engaged in business activities that also pools mortgages into a fixed investment trust, acts as the trustee, and sells interests in the trust to investors.

An issuer creates an issue by transferring assets to the issue and electing to apply the provisions of the bill to the issue.[18] The transfer of assets to an issue is accomplished by an appropriate accounting entry identifying the assets transferred. Assets that may be transferred and held in the issue are limited to "qualified obligations" and "permitted investments".

Qualified obligations in general include mortgage loans, interests in other CMS issues, participations or certificates of beneficial ownership in such loans or interests, guaranteed investment contracts, and assets that are acquired in connection with the default of a qualified obligation or pursuant to a permitted substitution for a defective qualified obligation.[19] Since an issue is a self-liquidating security, the bill generally requires qualified obligations to be transferred to the issue on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue,[20] and generally prohibits the issue from selling or disposing of qualified obligations.[21] Exceptions to these rules are limited to permitted substitutions for defective qualified obligations, the acquisition of property in connection with the default of a qualified obligation, and the complete liquidation of an issue.[22]

Permitted investments include cash and money market debt instruments that are transferred to the issue on the first day of the first taxable year of the issue, or subsequently acquired pursuant to the establishment or maintenance of reserves incident to the holding of qualified obligations, or the temporary reinvestment of cash flows of the issue.[23]

Consistent with these basis rules, gains and losses are generally recognized upon a transfer of property in exchange for interests. In certain circumstances, however, gains and losses are not recognized to the transferor currently, but are accounted for under the bill's rules for "outside discount" and "outside premium". (See discussion below at page 16.)[30]

In order to prevent the accelerated deduction of built-in losses on transferred property that in substance has not been sold, the bill disallows loss recognition to the extent the transferor transfers property to an issue in exchange for any regular or residual interests in that issue.[31]

A similar non-recognition rule applies with respect to gains on property transferred in exchange for residual interests, but not in the case of exchanges for regular interests.[32] This limited non-recognition rule is intended to impose a tax on gain where the transferor has received regular interests (which tend to be marketable securities similar to conventional debt instruments) while avoiding the imposition of an immediate tax on the transferor's retention of residual interests in the issue (which are unlike conventional marketable securities because they are contingent and highly speculative). (See discussion below at page 13.)

To prevent transferors from inappropriately accelerating income (e.g., in order to utilize expiring net operating losses) the Treasury Department is authorized to prescribe regulations deferring gain recognition when a transfer of assets and the retention of interests in an issue is tantamount to the retention of ownership of the transferred assets.[33]

For purposes of determining the amount of gains and losses recognized under these rules, the bill provides for an allocation of the basis of transferred property in proportion to the amount of money and the fair market value of interests and other property received in exchange.[34] For example, if mortgages with a basis of $80 and a value of $100 are transferred in exchange for $20 of cash, regular interests worth $80, residual interests worth $10, and other property worth $10, the $80 basis would be allocated 20 percent to the cash, 60 percent to the regular interests, 10 percent to the residual interests and 10 percent to the other property.[35] To simplify the application of this allocation rule, the bill permits an issuer to elect to treat the residual interests in an issue as having a fair market value of zero, if the value of such interests is less than one percent of the value of all interests in the issue.[36] The effect of this election is to allocate all of the basis of transferred property to the money, regular interests, and other property (other than residual interests) received.

C. Taxation of Holders

1. Generally.—Holders of regular interests are taxed in a manner similar to the taxation of holders of debt instruments subject to the OID rules of current law. Holders of residual interests are taxed under statutory rules designed to accommodate the contingent nature of these interests.

2. Taxation of Regular Interests.—Holders of regular interests are taxed under a hybrid method, based on the rules of current law governing debt instruments. Essentially, holders first determine their income as if their interests were debt obligations, subject to the OID rules where applicable.[37] Thus, the OID rules would be applicable to regular interests issued at a discount regardless of whether the underlying mortgage loans in the issue were themselves subject to the OID rules (for example, seasoned mortgage loans with market discount). For purposes of applying the OID rules to regular interests the "issue price" of the interest is its initial basis (i.e., the amount of money and the fair market value of property initially transferred in exchange for the interest).

In addition, holders would be allocated additional income[38] for any accrual period in which the cumulative amount of income recognized by all holders of regular and residual interests (under the OID rules, the normal rules applicable to paid interest, and the special rules for residual interests) is less than the cumulative amount of income that would have been recognized if the assets of the issue had been held continuously by a single taxable entity.[39]

Additional amounts required to be recognized under this allocation rule would first be allocated among the holders of regular interests in proportion to the amount of OID recognized by each holder in the period to which the additional amount is attributable.[40] However, no amount would be allocated to an interest in excess of the interest's unrealized discount.[41] Any remaining amounts would be allocated to the holders of the residual interests in the issue.[42] Additional amounts recognized under this rule would be credited against income required to be recognized in future periods by adding the amounts recognized in prior periods to an interest's adjusted basis and adjusted issue price.[43]

3. Taxation of Residual Interests.—In practice, there are several basic forms of residual interests. In one form, sometimes referred to as "excess servicing," the stated interest rate on the qualified obligations of the issue exceeds the stated interest rate on some or all of the regular interests in the issue. As long as the qualified obligations are not prepaid, the holder of the residual interest will receive this "excess" interest. It is uncertain, however, to what extent prepayments on the qualified obligations will extinguish the residual holder's right to receive this "excess" interest. In the extreme case, if all of the obligations prepay immediately, this form of residual interest will become worthless.

In another form of residual, sometimes referred to as principal-to-principal overcollateralization, the face amount of the qualified obligations of the issue exceeds the face amount of the regular interests, but the stated interest rate on one or more of the regular interests exceeds the stated interest that will be received on the qualified obligations. To the extent there are prepayments, the residual holder will profit because the amount of principal received exceeds the amount required to retire the regular shares. However, it is uncertain to what extent the absence of prepayments will require this "excess" principal to be used to pay interest on the regular interests. In the extreme case, if there are no prepayments for the life of the security, this form of residual will become worthless.

Another form of residual interest is a payment that depends on reinvestment income on funds received prior to required payments to holders. This residual is similar to excess servicing, except that the amount of reinvestment income can be dependent upon market interest rates and other factors.

Another form of residual interest is a payment that is contingent upon the receipt of contingent payments on a qualified obligation (such as contingent interest, equity kickers, etc.)

In general, amounts paid or accrued on a residual interest are included in income as they are paid or credited to the holder.[44] The basis of a residual interest will be recovered as a deduction against amounts includible in income on a straight line method, over the estimated duration of the residual.[45]

Any gain not recognized to an issuer upon the transfer of assets in exchange for a residual interest will be includible in the issuer's income, in addition to amounts actually paid or credited with respect to the interest, on a straight line method over the estimated duration of the interest.[46]

The bill provides that the estimated duration of a residual interest can be computed on the basis of certain estimates used in pricing an issue subject to securities law registration requirements, unless those estimates are clearly erroneous.[47]

The bill's rules for the taxation of residual interests depart somewhat from the so-called "scientific" method for the taxation of debt instruments, embodied in the OID rules and coupon stripping rules of current law. This departure is appropriate inasmuch as these residual interests depart from the characteristics of the traditional debt instruments for which the OID rules and coupon stripping were designed. Nevertheless, the bill also authorizes the Treasury Department to issue regulations adopting different rules, based on the OID and coupon-stripping rules of existing law, to certain residual interests that may be more appropriately taxed under such rules in certain circumstances.[48] The residual interest subject to this grant of regulatory authority include residuals that entitle the holder to receive contingent payments on underlying obligations,[49] and certain residuals that entitle the holder to receive payments of excess servicing (i.e., interest only on a qualified obligation).[50] Excess servicing residuals are subject to these rules only to the extent they are based on a rate of interest paid on a qualifying obligation that exceeds the highest coupon rate payable on a substantial portion of interests in the issue. For example, if the mortgages in an issue pay 12 percent interest, and regular interests are issued with coupon rates of 8 percent, 10 percent, and 13 percent, an excess servicing residual would not be subject to these regulations. However, if the regular interest were issued with coupon rates of 6 percent, 8 percent, and 10 percent, two percentage points of the excess servicing residual would be within the scope of the regulations.

4. Transfer of Interests.—The sale or exchange of an interest will give rise to gain or loss, generally in the same manner as if the interest were a debt obligation.[51]

The amount of gain or loss on a sale or exchange is determined by reference to the adjusted basis of the interest, which is equal to the initial transferor's cost basis (i.e., the amount of money and the value of property transferred in exchange for the interest) increased by the cumulative amount of income includible with respect to the interest, and decreased by the cumulative amount of distributions with respect to the interest.[52] The adjusted basis computed in this manner carries over, without other adjustments, whenever the interest is sold or exchanged.[53] However, the amounts of gain or loss recognized by a holder are appropriately adjusted for cases where an interest is acquired at a premium or discount relative to its adjusted basis.[54] Similar adjustments are provided to account for an issuer's unrecognized gain or loss.[55] These adjustments are referred to as outside discount and outside premium.

In the case of an interest that becomes partially or completely worthless, the holder is entitled to deduct the resulting loss without selling or exchanging the interest, in the same manner as if the interest were a debt instrument.[56] This rule, however, applies only to partial or complete worthlessness attributable to the partial or complete worthlessness of an underlying obligation, and not to the occurrence or nonoccurrence of contingencies related to prepayments or reinvestment income.

5. Adjustments for Outside Premium and Discount.—Outside premiums and discounts arise in two circumstances: where an interest is purchased at a premium or discount from its adjusted basis (as carried over from previous holders), and where there are unrecognized gains and losses arising from the transfer of property in exchange for interests, in transactions subject to the bill's nonrecognition rules. An unrecognized gain is treated as outside discount, and an unrecognized loss is treated as outside premium. Outside premium and discount are accounted for over time, as in interest is held.

Outside premium in the case of a regular interest first reduces the amount of original issue discount and additional issue income required to be included, in proportion to the inclusion of such amounts in income over the interest's life.[57] Any excess outside premium is then recovered as an ordinary deduction, amortized over the life of the interest in proportion to the recovery of principal or similar amounts.[58] Any outside premium not accounted for by the time an interest is sold or exchanged will be treated as an adjustment to the amount of gain or loss recognized on such a sale.[59]

Outside discount with respect to a regular interest is includible in income, as if it were market discount on a debt instrument, over the life of the interest in proportion to the recovery of principal or similar amounts.[60]

The character of gains attributable to the recovery of outside discount is determined by reference to the type of qualified obligations underlying the issue.[61] (Thus, if the qualified obligations are obligations issued before July 19, 1984, amounts received as a recovery of outside discount upon the sale of an interest would be treated as capital gains). In the case of issues with underlying obligations of different types, an appropriate allocation would be made. However, if 85 percent or more of the obligations are of a single type, all of the obligations will be treated as of that type.[62] For purposes of this provision, the type of obligation includes its issuer's status as a corporation or individual, its issuance date, and any other factors that would be relevant to the character of market discount of an underlying obligation.

With respect to residual interests, outside premium and discount are recovered ratably over the estimated duration of the interest by adding a ratable portion of the amount of premium to be recovered to the amounts allocable to basis recovery for the interest (or subtraction a ratable portion of the amount of discount to be included in income).[63] The rules for amounts of premium or discount not accounted for under these rules by the time an interest is sold or exchanged, and the rules for determining the character of market discount, are the same as those provided for regular interests.[64]

6. Rocovery of expenses of Issue.—In general, the bill provides that expense associated with the operation of an issue are not taken into account in determining the income includible by holders of interests in the issue.[65] (Servicing fees that are withheld from amounts payable as interest on pass-through securities, which are accounted for under current law as deductions, rather than reductions of interest income, are an exception from this rule.) Instead, operating expenses are accounted for separately by the taxpayer responsible for such expenses, who may or may not also be a holder of interests in the issue.[66] This rule applies regardless of whether a taxpayer's liability to bear certain expenses requires that such expenses be withheld from the amount of cash payable to the taxpayer with respect to interests held by the taxpayer. It is intended that operating expenses, including trustee fees, legal fees, and accounting fees, will be deductible when paid or incurred, without requirement that such expenses be amortized over the life of the issue.

The bill provides that issuance and sales expenses allocable to interests that are sold are recovered as selling expenses. Any issuance expenses properly allocable to interests retained by an issuer are treated as outside premium.[67]

7. Prohibited Transactions.—In order to ensure that an issue or an issuer does not engage in activities for which the bill's provisions are not designed, the bill imposes a 100 percent tax on the net income from certain prohibited transaction.[68] These include the sale or disposition of qualified obligations (with certain limited exceptions), the receipt of income from assets not permitted to be held in an issue, and the receipt or retention by the issue of amounts representing fees or other compensation for services.[69]

8. Complete Liquidations.—Rules are provided to permit the sale of an issue's assets, and the distribution of cash to holders of interests, in a qualifying complete liquidation without incurring tax at the issue level. The purpose of these rules is to permit holders to obtain similar treatment in a complete liquidation to that which would obtain if they had sold all of their interests in the issue.

D. Tax Compliance and Administrative Provisions

In the case of mortgage backed bonds and other debt obligations subject to the OID rules of the bill, the bill would repeal certain exemptions from the information reporting rules of current law. In particular, the bill would repeal the exemption for payments to corporations, registered securities and commodities dealers, real estate investment trusts, registered investment companies, and common trust funds (other than organizations exempt from taxation).[70] In addition, additional information relevant to the taxation of multiple class debt instruments would be required to be reported.[71]

In the case of CMSs subject to the bill, similar information reporting requirements would be imposed.[72] In addition, CMS issues would be required to file annual information returns, and would be subject to rules similar to the entity level audit rules applicable to partnerships and S corporations.[73] Finally, it is intended that CMS issues would be subject to the registration requirements of current law.[74]

EFFECTIVE DATES

The bill would generally be effective upon enactment, however, issuers could elect to apply the bill to any obligation or CMS issued after the date the legislation is introduced. Such an election would be binding upon the issuer and the holders.[75]

[75] Bill section 5.●

By Mr. DURENBERGER (for himself and Mr. DANFORTH):

S. 1960. A bill entitled the "Medical Offer and Recovery Act"; to the Committee on Finance.

MEDICAL OFFER AND RECOVERY ACT

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Medical Offer and Recovery Act along with my distinguished colleague, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH]. I am introducing this bill as a courtesy to my distinguished House colleagues, Representatives MOORE and GEPHARDT. It is a companion bill to H.R. 3084 which would propose to reform this country's medical malpractive system. This measure includes refinements to the proposal which they introduced last year and I am including a summary of the bill after my statement which outlines the provisions and changes from last year's version.

My House colleagues spent considerable time and effort developing this proposal and it is a serious contribution to a much needed national debate. It is the one major measure that provides an alternative to State tort reform, and therefore deserves examination and scrutiny in the Senate along with another important measure, S. 1804, introduced by my distinguished Senate colleague, ORRIN HATCH. His proposal is authored by the American Medical Association.

Mr. President, there is no question that the funding of malpractice insurance is reaching a crisis point. I was reading an article in the Mankato Free Press from my own State of Minnesota, about a young woman named Ann McCall, who was looking forward to having the doctor who had delivered her 21 years before also deliver her new baby. Just 2 weeks before the anticipated delivery date, her doctor informed her that he was turning over his obstetric practice to another doctor because he could no longer afford the escalating cost of his malpractice insurance premiums. Zachary McCall was born to Ann and Pat McCall with the assistance of a physician they had known for only 2 weeks.

This story is repeated every day all over this country. And it's happening because there are major problems with the medical malpractice system in the United States.

Malpractice insurance premium costs are skyrocketing, reaching as high as $100,000 a year for some speciality physicians in certain areas of the country. The number of malpractice claims has tripled over the past decade and million dollar settlements happen on a regular basis. The average settlement has grown from $5,000 to over $300,000 in just 6 years.

Growing numbers of claims have resulted in physicians practicing defensive medicine. The AMA estimates that this may cost Americans at least $15 billion a year in extra costs. Still the number of claims against doctors continues to grow, and the public pays for it through high hospital bills, doctor bills, and health insurance premiums.

Higher malpractice insurance costs force doctors and hospitals to raise their charges and pass these costs on to third party payers and consumers. It is also pricing some physicians out of business. The Minnesota Medical Association estimates that 40 family practice doctors have stopped delivering babies and more are expected to drop the obstetric part of their practice. This could create serious problems for residents in rural Minnesota and similar areas around the country who rely on their community doctor for all their medical care.

The litigation of malpractice cases is unwieldy and expensive. It is also time-consuming and inequitable. A few plaintiffs are awarded large recoveries, but only after a long, drawn out litigation process. But the real tragedy is that the expense of litigation discourages many with valid claims from even prosecuting those claims. And international reinsurance companies are threatening to quit reinsuring American malpractice insurance companies. These reinsurers are concerned that damage awards in the United States have gotten too far out of line from premium revenues.

These problems are not new. In the mid-1970's, in response to increased numbers of claims and sizes of settlements, many liability insurance carriers were left out of the market and others had to raise their premiums by as much as 750 percent. The States responded to this by enacting medical malpractice reform legislation. But these reforms have obviously not had much of an effect.

States are now taking even more steps to reform their tort laws. I was in Florida in November and learned about their newly passed law which includes a sliding fee scale for attorneys' contingency fees. States are trying other methods of reform, and the jury is still out on the likely success of these measures. We will watch these changes closely. But it is time to determine whether a Federal role in this area is appropriate.

The crisis may be upon us again. This demands action. We must bring down the cost of malpractice insurance to physicians, insurers, and the public, and at the same time, create a more equitable, efficient system to adjudicate malpractice. At a time when the health care marketplace is becoming more and more cost conscious, we can ill afford this lopsided, ineffective malpractice system that perpetuates an insensitivity to price and unresponsiveness to fairness.

I trust the new year will bring serious debate and resolution of the professional liability crisis. I intend to be at the center of that debate. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill and summary of the Medical Offer and Recovery Act be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1960

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Medical Offer and Recovery Act".

SEC. 2. ALTERNATIVE LIABILITY SYSTEM FOR MALPRACTICE

(a) MEDICARE AMENDMENT.—Part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by inserting after the heading to part A the following new subpart heading:

"Subpart I—Hospital Insurance Program".

(2) by adding at the end the following new subpart:

"Subpart II—Alternative Liability System for Malpractice

"TENDER OF COMPENSATION BENEFITS IN SETTLEMENT OF MALPRACTICE CLAIMS

"SEC. 1821. (a)(1)(A) In the case of a health care provider (as defined in paragraph (4)(D)) which—

"(i) is participating in an assigned claims plan under section 1826 and

"(ii) is potentially liable for a personal injury (as defined in paragraph (4)(A)) to an injured individual, if the provider provides the individual not later than the date specified in subparagraph (C) with a written tender to pay compensation benefits with respect to such injury in accordance with this subpart, the individual and any other entity shall (except as provided in paragraph (3)) be foreclosed from bringing any civil action described in paragraph (2) against such provider or other entity joined under subsection (b) based on such personal injury.

"(B) If the provider fails to provide an individual with such a written tender on a timely basis with respect to a personal injury, the individual may, during the 90-day period beginning on the date specified in subparagraph (C), serve on the provider a written request for arbitration on the question of the legal liability for the personal injury and the provisions of this section shall apply as though a tender under subparagraph (A) had been made. If the arbitrator determines that the provider was wholly or partly legally liable for the personal injury—

"(i) the amount of the liability of the provider shall be determined as though the provider had made a timely tender under subparagraph (A), and

"(ii) the provider shall be liable for reasonable attorneys fees incurred by the individual who requested the arbitration.

"(C) The date referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) is—

"(i) in the case of a personal injury resulting from a stay as an inpatient in an institution, 180 days after the date of the patient's discharge from the institution,

"(ii) in the case of failure to provide informed consent, erroneous diagnosis, or injury to a new born caused by action or inaction before or at the time of birth, 180 days after the date of the filing of a claim against the provider, or

"(iii) in the case of any other personal injury, 180 days after the date of the action or inaction giving rise to the personal injury, except that such date may be extended for up to an additional 60 days for purposes of subparagraph (A) if the provider and the patient agree in writing to such extension.

"(D) Nothing in this subpart shall be construed as changing any applicable statute of limitations of any State or of the United States.

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), civil actions referred to in paragraph (1) include any civil action (whether brought in a Federal or State court) which could have been brought against a compensation obligor (as defined in subsection (d)(1)) for recovery of damages relating to personal injury, whether based on (i) negligence or gross negligence, (ii) strict or absolute liability in tort, (iii) breach of express or implied warranty or contract, (iv) failure to discharge a duty to warn or instruct or to obtain consent, or (v) any other theory that is (or may be) a basis for an award of damages for personal injury.

"(B) Civil actions referred to in subparagraph (1) do not include—

"(i) any action to recover for compensation benefits tendered under this subpart, or

"(ii) any action in the nature of a wrongful death action, but only in the case of such an action for losses accruing to survivors after the death of an injured individual and resulting from the death of the individual.

"(3) In no event shall a civil action be foreclosed under paragraph (1) against any entity which intentionally caused or intended to cause injury, except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to a personal injury unless the injured individual provides the provider making a tender with a notice of election not later than 90 days after the date the tender of compensation benefits was made.

"(4) As used in this subpart:

"(A) The terms 'injury' and 'personal injury' mean sickness or disease or bodily harm arising in the course of the provision of health care services provided pursuant to (or for which payment may be made under) this title, a State plan approved under title XIX, plans under sections 1079 and 1086 of title 10, United States Code (relating to the CHAMPUS program), section 613 of title 38, United States Code (relating to the CHAMPVA program), a health benefits plan pursuant to a contract with the Office of Personnel Management under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code (relating to the Federal employees health benefits program), title 10 or title 38 of the United States Code (relating to the Department of Defense and the Veterans' Administration), or any other program established under Federal law.

"(B) The term 'injured individual' means an individual suffering injury in the course of health care provided by an individual or entity.

"(C) An entity intentionally causes or attempts to cause a personal injury when the entity acts or fails to act for the purpose of causing injury or with knowledge that injury is substantially certain to follow; but an entity does not intentionally cause or attempt to cause injury merely because the individual's act or failure to act is intentional or is done with the individual's realization only that it creates a grave risk of causing injury without the purpose of causing injury or if the act or omission is for the purpose of averting bodily harm to the individual or another entity.

"(D) The term 'health care provider' means—

"(i) any institution described in subsection (e)(1), (f)(1), (j)(1) of section 1861 which is a Federal institution or meets the requirement of section 1861(e)(7),

"(ii) an agency or organization described in section 1861(o)(1) which meets the requirement of section 1861(o)(4),

"(iii) any health care professional described in section 1861(r), and

"(iv) a rural health clinic (as defined in section 1861(aa)(2)), a comprehensive outpatient rehabilitation facility (as defined in section 1861(cc)(2)), and a hospice program (as defined in section 1861(dd)(2)).

"(E) The term 'entity' includes an individual or person.

"(b)(1)(A) A health care provider which has tendered (or deemed to have tendered) compensation benefits under subsection (a) may, by written notice to the entity, join in the foreclosure provided under subsection (a) any entity which is potentially liable, in whole or in part, for the personal injury and who may benefit from foreclosure of action against the entity under subsection (a). Joinder under this subparagraph may only be by written notice to the entity to be joined and such notice shall not be effective if provided later than the date the provider makes the tender under subsection (a).

"(B) Any entity which would benefit from foreclosure of action against the entity under subsection (a) with respect to a personal injury shall be joined in any tender made (or deemed to have been made) under subsection (a) with respect to that injury if the entity requests such joinder by written notice to the provider making the tender under subsection (a) not later than the date the tender under subsection (a) is made.

"(2) By joinder under this subsection, an entity is deemed to have agreed to pay a share of (A) such compensation benefits and (B) the reasonable costs incurred by the provider in preparing and making such tender and paying compensation benefits. Any disagreement between such entities involved as to any entity's share of the benefits and costs or the amount of such costs shall be submitted to binding arbitration for determination and each entity's share shall be based on the comparative fault of the entities (other than the injured individual) involved.

"(c)(1) Any entity which has tendered (or deemed to have tendered) compensation benefits with respect to an individual under subsection (a) or been joined in the tender under subsection (b) shall be subrogated to any rights of the individual against another entity (other than against another entity joined under subsection (b)) arising from or contributing to the personal injury and shall have a cause of action separate from that of the individual to the extent that (A) elements of damage compensated for by compensation benefits are recoverable and (B) the entity has paid or becomes obligated to pay accrued or future compensation benefits.

"(2) In the case that a foreclosure from liability is effected under subsection (a), no right of subrogation, contribution, or indemnity shall exist against a compensation obligor other than the right of contribution among compensation obligors under subsection (b)(2), nor shall any provision of any contract be enforced that has the effect of limiting or excluding payment under that contract because of the existence or payment of compensation benefits under this subpart.

"(3) The District Courts of the United States shall not have jurisdiction under section 1331 or 1337 of title 28, United States Code, over any civil action arising under this subpart.

"(d) As used in this subpart:

"(1) The term 'compensation obligor'—

"(A) means, with respect to a personal injury, the health care provider that has obligated itself to pay compensation benefits under subsection (a) with respect to that injury, and

"(B) includes—

"(i) any entity that has been joined under subsection (b) with respect to that injury, and

"(ii) any other entity (including an insurance company) which is contractually responsible for payment of the obligations of a compensation obligor under this subpart.

"(2) The term 'initiating compensation obligor' means, with respect to a personal injury, the compensation obligor which (A) first tenders compensation benefits to the injured individual, or (B) agrees to serve as an initiating compensation obligor and has been designated as such by a majority of the compensation obligors for that injury for purposes of this subpart.

"AMOUNT OF, AND ADJUSTMENTS TO, COMPENSATION BENEFITS

"SEC. 1822. (a)(1) The amount of compensation benefits payable with respect to a personal injury is equal to the net economic loss (as defined in subsection (b)(1)) resulting from such injury, plus attorney's fees (as provided under subsection (c)).

"(b) For purposes of this subpart:

"(1) The term 'net economic loss' means—

"(A) economic detriment, consisting only of—

"(i) allowable expense (as defined in paragraph (2)(A)),

"(ii) work loss (as defined in paragraph (2)(B)), and

"(iii) replacement services loss (as defined in paragraph (2)(C)), whether caused by pain and suffering or physical impairment, but not including noneconomic loss (as defined in paragraph (3)), less collateral benefits (as defined in paragraph (4)).

"(2)(A) The term 'allowable expense' means reasonable expenses incurred for products, services, and accommodations reasonably needed for medical care, training, and other remedial treatment and care of an injured individual, but includes expenses for rehabilitation treatment and occupational training only in accordance with subsection (d).

"(B) The term 'work loss' means 100 percent of the loss of income from work the injured individual would have performed if the individual had not been injured, reduced by any income from substitute work actually performed by the individual or by income the individual would have earned in available appropriate substitute work the individual was capable of performing but unreasonably failed to undertake.

"(C) The term 'replacement services loss' means reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining ordinary and necessary services in lieu of those the injured individual would have performed, not for income but for the benefit of the individual or the individual's family, if the individual had not been injured.

"(3) The term 'noneconomic detriment' means pain, suffering, inconvenience, physical impairment, mental anguish, emotional pain and suffering, punitive or exemplary damages, and all other general (as opposed to special) damages, including loss of earning capacity and loss of any of the following which would have been provided by an injured individual to another: consortium, society, companionship, comfort, protection, marital care, attention, advice, counsel, training, guidance, and education. Such term does not include pecuniary loss caused by pain and suffering or by physical impairment.

"(4) The term 'collateral benefits' means all benefits and advantages received or entitled to be received (regardless of any right any other entity has or is entitled to assert for recoupment through subrogation, trust agreement, lien, or otherwise) by an injured individual or other entity as reimbursement of loss because of personal injury, payable or required to be paid, under—

"(A) the laws of any State or the Federal government (other than through a claim for breach of an obligation or duty), or except that no benefits payable with respect to an injury under a State plan approved under title XIX shall be considered to be collateral benefits for purposes of this subparagraph.

"(B) any health or accident insurance, wage or salary continuation plan, or disability income insurance;

"(c)(1) Compensation benefits shall include reasonable expenses incurred by the injured individual in collecting such benefits, including a reasonable attorney's fee. Such expenses may be offset from the amount of compensation benefits otherwise provided, if any significant part of a claim for compensation benefits is fraudulent or so excessive as to have no reasonable foundation.

"(2) A compensation obligor defending a claim for compensation benefits shall be allowed a reasonable attorney's fee, in addition to other reasonable expenses incurred, in defending such a claim or part thereof that is fraudulent or so excessive as to have no reasonable foundation. The fee or expenses may be treated as an offset to any compensation benefits due. The compensation obligor may recover from the claimant any part of the fee or expenses not offset or otherwise paid.

"(d)(1) Allowable expenses under subsection (b)(2)(A) include expenses for a procedure or treatment for rehabilitation and rehabilitative occupational training if the procedure, treatment, or training is reasonable and appropriate for the particular case, the expenses are reasonable in relation to the probable rehabilitative effects and the compensation benefits otherwise payable, and it is likely to contribute substantially to rehabiliation, even though it will not enhance the injured individual's earning capacity.

"(2) Allowable expenses shall not include expenses described in paragraph (1) with respect to a procedure or treatment for rehabilitation or a course of rehabilitative occupational training which exceed $2,000 in any 30-day period unless the injured individual has provided the initiating compensation obligor with notice of such procedure, treatment, or course of training before expenses totaling $2,000 with respect to such procedure, treatment, or course of training during such period have been incurred.

"PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION BENEFITS

"SEC. 1823. (a)(1)(A) Compensation benefits shall be paid not later than 30 days after the date there is submitted to the initiating compensation obligor reasonable proof of the fact and amount of net economic loss incurred, except that payment may be made, for expenses incurred over periods not exceeding 31 days, within 15 days after the end of the period. If reasonable proof is supplied as to only a portion of net economic loss, and the portion totals $100 or more, the compensation benefits with respect to that portion shall be paid without regard to the remainder of the net economic loss. An injured individual to whom a tender of compensation benefits has been made under section 1821 shall be entitled to interest, at the annual rate of interest applied to judgments in the State in which the injury occurred, on such benefits not paid on a timely basis.

"(B) If there elapses a period of five years after a claim for payment of net economic loss incurred is last made with respect to a personal injury, the injured individual is no longer entitled to receive compensation benefits with respect to that injury.

"(2) A compensation obligor who rejects in whole or in part a claim for compensation benefits shall give to the claimant prompt written notice of the rejection and the reasons therefor.

"(3) Compensation benefits with respect to allowable expenses may be paid either to the injured individual or to the entity supplying the products, services, or accomodations to the individual.

"(b) In lieu of payment therefor as a part of allowable expenses and with the consent of the injured individual, a health care provider may provide medical or rehabilitative services needed by the injured individual.

"(c)(1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, subsection (d)(2), or section 1822(c)(2), compensation benefits shall be paid without deduction or setoff.

"(2) An assignment or an agreement to assign any right to compensation benefits under this subpart for net economic loss accruing in the future is unenforceable except as to benefits for—

"(A) work loss to secure payment of alimony, maintenance, or child support; or

"(B) allowable expenses to the extent the benefits are for the cost of products, services, or accomodations provided or to be provided by the assignee.

"(3)(A) Compensation benefits for allowable expense are exempt from garnishment, attachment, execution, and any other process or claim, except upon a claim of a creditor who has provided products, services, or accommodations to the extent benefits are for allowable expense for those products, services, or accommodation.

"(B) Compensation benefits other than those for allowable expense are exempt from garnishment, attachment, execution, and any other process or claim to the extent that wages or earnings are exempt under any applicable law exempting wages or earnings from process or claims.

"(4)(i) Except as provided in clause (iii), a claim for compensation benefits shall be paid without deduction or offset for collateral benefits, if the collateral benefits have not been paid to the injured individual before the incurring of expenses included in net economic loss.

"(ii) The compensation obligor is entitled to reimbursement from the entity obligated to make the payments or from the entity which actually receives the payments.

"(iii) A compensation obligor may offset amounts it is entitled to recover under clause (ii) against any compensation benefits otherwise due.

"(d)(1) An entity making payment of compensation benefits under this subpart may bring an action against an entity to recover compensation benefits paid because of an intentional misrepresentation of a material fact by that entity upon which the entity relied, except that such an action may not be brought against the injured individual unless the injured individual made or had knowledge of the making of the misrepresentation.

"(2) If such entity secures judgment in an action under paragraph (1), the entity may offset amounts it is entitled to recover under such judgment against any compensation benefits otherwise due.

"REQUIRING DISCLOSURE OF FACTS ABOUT, AND MENTAL AND PHYSICAL EXAMINATION OF, INJURED INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 1824. (a)(1) Upon request of an injured individual or compensation obligor, information relevant to payment of compensation benefits shall be disclosed as follows:

"(A) The injured individual shall furnish evidence of the individual's earnings, if self-employed.

"(B) An employer of the individual shall furnish a statement of the work record and earnings of an injured individual who is or was an employee of the employer, for the period specified by the injured individual or obligor making the request, which may include a reasonable period before, and the entire period after, the injury.

"(C) The injured individual shall deliver to the compensation obligor upon request a copy of every written report, not otherwise available to the compensation obligor, previously or thereafter made, available to the individual, concerning any medical treatment or examination of the injured individual and the names and addresses of hospitals, physicians, and other entities, examining, diagnosing, treating, or providing accommodations to the individual in regard to the injury or to a relevant past injury, and the injured individual shall authorize the compensation obligor to inspect and copy all relevant records made by such entities.

"(D) A hospital, physician, or other entity examining, diagnosing, testing, or providing accommodations to an injured individual in connection with a condition alleged to be connected with an injury upon which a claim for compensation benefits is based, upon authorization of the injured individual, shall furnish a written report of the history, condition, diagnosis, medical tests, treatment, and dates and cost of treatment of the injured individual in connection with that condition or any previous or other condition which may be relevant to assessing such condition, and permit inspection and copying of all records and reports as to the history, condition, treatment, and dates and cost of treatment.

Any entity (other than the injured individual or a compensation obligor) providing information under this paragraph may charge the entity requesting the information for the reasonable cost of providing it.

"(2) In case of dispute as to the right of an injured individual or compensation obligor to discover information required to be disclosed under this subsection, the individual or obligor may petition a court having jurisdiction over the matter for an order for discovery, including the right to take written or oral depositions. Upon notice to all entities having an interest, the order may be made for good cause shown. It shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the discovery. To protect against oppression, the court may enter an order refusing discovery or specifying conditions of discovery and directing payment of costs and expenses of the proceeding, including reasonable attorney's fees.

"(b)(1) If the mental or physical condition of an injured individual is material and relevant to compensation benefits, a compensation obligor may petition a court having jurisdiction over the matter for an order directing the individual to submit to a mental or physical examination by a physician. Upon notice to the individual to be examined and all entities having an interest, the court may make the order for good cause shown. The order shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, scope of the examination, and the physician by whom it is to be made.

"(2) If requested by the individual examined, a compensation obligor causing a mental or physical examination to be made shall deliver to the individual examined a copy of the written report of the examining physician, and reports of earlier examinations of the same condition. By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination ordered or by taking the deposition of the physician, the individual examined waives any privilege the individual may have, in relation to the claim for compensation benefits, regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or may thereafter examine the individual respecting the same condition. This subsection does not preclude discovery of a report of an examining physician, taking a deposition of the physician, or other discovery procedures in accordance with any rule of court or other provision of law. This paragraph applies to examinations made by agreement of the individual examined and a compensation obligor, unless the agreement provides otherwise.

"(3) If any individual refuses to comply with an order entered under this subsection, the court may make any just order as to the refusal, but may not find a individual in contempt for failure to submit to a mental or physical examination.

"(c) If a health care provider tenders compensation benefits with respect to an injured individual under this subpart and there is a dispute between the initiating compensation obligor and the injured individual respecting the determination of the amount of the compensation benefits owing, except as otherwise provided under this subpart, the initiating compensation obligor or the individual may apply to a court with appropriate jurisdiction for a declaration as to the amount of the compensatıcn benefits owed.

"LUMP SUM AND INSTALLMENT SETTLEMENTS AND DECLARATIONS OF BENEFITS

"SEC. 1825. (a) An obligation to pay compensation benefits may be discharged initially or at any time thereafter by a settlement or lump sum payment, except that no such discharge shall be made with respect to an injury with a current value of net economic loss exceeding $5,000 unless a court having jurisdiction over the matter determines that the settlement is fair to the injured individual. A settlement agreement may also provide that the compensation obligor shall pay the reasonable cost of appropriate medical treatment or procedures, with reference to a specified condition, to be performed in the future.

"(b)(1) In an action for payment of unpaid compensation benefits, a judgment may be entered for compensation benefits, other than allowable expense, that would accrue after the date of the award. The court may enter a judgment declaring that the compensation obligor is liable for the reasonable cost of appropriate medical treatment or procedures, with reference to a specified condition, to be performed in the future if it is ascertainable or foreseeable that treatment will be required as a result of the injury for which the claim is made.

"(2) A judgment for compensation benefits, other than with respect to allowable expenses, that will accrue thereafter may be entered only for a period as to which the court can reasonably determine future net economic loss.

"(3) If the injured individual notifies the initiating compensation obligor of a proposed specified procedure or treatment for rehabilitation or specified course of rehabiliation occupational training the expenses of which are an allowable expense and the compensation obligor does not promptly agree to such characterization, the injured individual may move the court in an action to adjudicate the individual's claim, or, if no action is pending, bring an action in a court having jurisdiction over the matter for a determination respecting whether or not such expenses are allowable expenses for which compensation benefits are payable. The initiating compensation obligor may move the court in an action to adjudicate the injured individual's claim, or, if no action is pending, bring an action in a court having jurisdiction over the matter for such a determination as to whether or not expenses for such a procedure, treatment, or course or training which an injured individual has undertaken or proposes to undertake are allowable expenses for which compensation benefits are payable. This subsection does not preclude an action by the initiating compensation obligor or the injured individual for declaratory relief under any other applicable law, nor an action by the injured individual to recover compensation benefits.

"(4) If an injured individual unreasonably fails, either directly or through one legally empowered to act on the individual's behalf, to obtain medical care, rehabilitation, rehabilitative occupational training, or other medical treatment which is reasonable and appropriate, the initiating compensation obligor may move the court in an action to adjudicate the injured individual's claim, or, if no action is pending, may bring an action in a court having jurisdiction over the matter for a determination that future benefits will be reduced or terminated so that they equal the benefits that in reasonable probability would have been due if the injured individual had submitted to the procedure, treatment, or training, and for other reasonable order. In determining whether an injured individual has reasonable ground for refusal to undertake the procedure, treatment, or training, the court shall consider all relevant factors, including the risks to the injured individual, the extent of the probable benefit, the place where the procedure, treatment, or training is offered, the extent to which the procedure, treatment, or training is recognized as standard and customary, and whether the restriction of this paragraph because of the individual's refusal would abridge the individual's right to the free exercise of religion.

"(c)(1) A settlement agreement or judgment under this section may be modified as to amounts to be paid in the future upon a finding that a material and substantial change of circumstances has occurred after the date the agreement or judgment was made, or that there is newly discovered evidence concerning the injured individual's physical condition, loss, or rehabilitation, which would not have been known previously or discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence prior to such agreement or judgment.

"(2) The court may make appropriate orders concerning the safeguarding and disposing of the proceeds of settlement agreements and funds collected under judgments under this section.

"(3) A settlement agreement or judgment for compensation benefits may be set aside if it is found to have been procured by fraud.

"ASSIGNED CLAIMS PLAN

"SEC. 1826. (a) In order to participate in the alternative liability program under this subpart, a health care provider must participate, directly or through an insurance company which has agreed to be the compensation obligor with respect to that provider, in an assigned claims plan which meets the requirements of this section in order to insure the payment of compensation benefits by compensation obligors.

"(b)(1) Entities (including insurance companies) in a State may organize and maintain, subject to approval and regulation by the regulator of insurance therein, an assigned claims plan and adopt rules for its operation (including designation of assignees) consistent with this section.

"(2) If such a plan is not established or maintained in a State, whether organized by such entities or otherwise under State law, the Secretary shall organize and maintain an assigned claims plan for the State meeting the requirements of this section for purposes of this subpart. The Secretary may not establish an assigned claims plan under this paragraph with respect to health care providers located in a State unless the Secretary determines that no plan under paragraph (1) has been established in the State and the Secretary has provided the State with notice providing the State at least six months in which to establish such a plan.

"(3) Each assigned claims plan shall provide for assessment of costs on a fair and equitable basis consistent with this subpart and providing for assignment of claims in accordance with subsection (c). An assigned claims plan may not permit an entity covered under the plan to withdraw from the plan retrospectively.

"(c)(1) An injured individual entitled to compensation benefits from a compensation obligor pursuant to this subpart may obtain them through the assigned claims plan established pursuant to this section if the initiating compensation obligor obligated therefor is financially unable to fulfill its obligation.

"(2) Where an assigned claims plan finds that a compensation obligor which is associated with such plan reasonably is financially unable to pay the compensation benefits it owes, the assigned claims plan shall promptly assign the claims to a member or members of the plan and notify the individual or individuals entitled to receive such benefits of the identity and address of the assignee or assignees. Claims shall be assigned so as to minimize inconvenience to injured individuals. Any such assignee shall have all rights and obligations as if it had lawfully obligated itself to pay such compensation benefits and the plan and assignee may seek payment (including interest) from the compensation obligor or its successor of 120 percent of the costs and expenses incurred in fulfilling the obligor's obligations.

"(d) If an obligation qualifies for assignment under this section, the assigned claims plan or any compensation obligor to whom the claim is assigned is subrogated to all rights of the injured individual against any compensation obligor, its successor in interest or substitute, legally obligated to provide compensation benefits to the injured individual, for compensation benefits provided by the assignee.

"ACTIVITIES TO ENHANCE QUALITY OF CARE

"SEC. 1827. (a)(1) As a condition of participation for an institutional health care provider (as defined in subsection (c)(3)) under this title, if the provider—

"(A) takes an action adversely affecting the clinical privileges of a health care professional (other than a suspension of clinical privileges for a period of 30 days or less), or

"(B) terminates or does not renew a contract with a health care professional, for reasons relating to the professional incapability (as defined in subsection (c)(7)) of the professional, the provider shall submit a written report detailing the action to the appropriate health care licensing board in the jurisdiction where the provider is located.

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), no one shall disclose—

"(i) the identity of an entity that provides information to an institutional health care provider (or to a peer review committee) concerning the professional incapability of a health care professional who is or was a member of (or who has applied for membership in) the medical staff of the provider, and

"(ii) the minutes, analyses, findings, deliberations, and reports of a peer review committee.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), information described in subparagraph (A) shall not be subject to discovery, and is not admissible into evidence, in any civil, administrative, or criminal proceeding.

"(C) The restrictions of subparagraphs (A)(ii) and (B) shall not apply to the disclosure, upon the request of a health care professional against whom an adverse action is taken by the institutional health care provider, of information relating to that professional, but only if the disclosure is made in a proceeding to determine the lawfulness of the adverse action.

EXPLANATION OF THE MEDICAL OFFER AND RECOVERY ACT OF 1985 BY CONGRESSMEN W. HENSON MOORE AND RICHARD A. GEPHARDT

RATIONALE

The country again is facing a medical malpractice crisis. Litigation is increasing rapidly. The relationship between physicians and patients has become an adversarial one. Physicians engage in the practice of defensive medicine. They raise their fees to patients to offset increased insurance premiums. In some cases they abandon their practices, making it more difficult for patients to obtain care.

Patients are not being well-served by the current malpractice litigation system. Today's system does not provide a fair, rapid or rational method for compensating victims of medical malpractice. The process requires patients, physicians and hospitals to assume stances diametrically opposed to their best interest. The high cost of malpractice insurance is causing some physicians to abandon their practice, making it more difficult for patients to obtain care.

Today's system for determining and paying compensation for malpractice is unfair and inefficient. A few plaintiffs win large recoveries but only after the long and arduous litigation process, while others equally deserving receive nothing. Most insurance money currently is spent on transactional costs (fees for expert witnesses and lawyers and other costs of litigation) and on payment to a few victims of damages for noneconomic loss (pain and suffering, loss of consortium, etc.)

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

Model for State Legislation.—The Medical Offer and Recovery Act is designed to serve as model legislation for state legislatures to consider in passing their own mechanism for providing prompt payment of a patient's economic loss. The federal provisions of the Medical Offer and Recovery Act will not apply to states that implement such reforms by January 1, 1988.

Mechanics of Proposal.—1. A health care provider would, within 180 days of an occurrence, have the option of making a commitment to pay the patient's economic loss. Payments from collateral sources such as private health insurance and workers compensation would offset the amount owed by the provider.

2. If the provider makes the commitment to pay the patient's economic loss, a patient's right to sue for malpractice under the conventional tort system would be foreclosed except for cases where the provider intentionally caused the injury or a wrongful death occurred.

3. The offer must by definition encompass all of the patient's economic loss. Economic loss includes the cost of continued medical and hospital care, rehabilitation, nursing care, wage loss, the cost of a housekeeper and adapting the patient's house and car, as well as reasonable attorneys' fees in advising the patient. The payments would occur periodically as the patient's economic loss accured.

4. The provider making a commitment to pay a patient's economic loss may join to the settlement other third parties (potential defendants) who may be responsible for the injury. Similarly, other third parties may request to be joined. Any disagreement between the joined parties will be settled by binding arbitration.

Patient Protections.—1. The patient's rights to sue for the enforcement of the commitment are protected should the provider default or breach the commitment.

2. If a provider and patient wish to settle for a lump sum payment instead of periodic payments, they may do so by agreement. However, the agreement would be ineffective (if the patient's net economic loss was in excess of $5,000) without court approval and the provider would be responsible for all of the patients net economic loss.

3.[1] Patients are assured of payment. The bill requires physicians to carry sufficient malpractice insurance or post bond in order to participate in the program. This protects patients against judgement proof providers.

4.[1] A patient may demand compensation for economic loss without going to court. In the event that a provider does not choose to voluntarily make a commitment for economic loss, a patient who believed he or she had been a victim of malpractice could request that an expeditious arbitration proceeding be conducted. If the arbitrator determined the provider was at fault, the patient would be awarded compensation for economic loss as if the provider had voluntarily made the commitment. A request for arbitration would foreclose the patient's right to sue for noneconomic damages.

5.[1] A patient is further protected by provisions to reduce malpractice by preventing incompetent physicians and other health care professionals from practicing. Health care institutions must notify state licensing authorities if they terminate the privileges or take other adverse actions with respect to the privileges of a health care professional. It also provides confidentiality and immunity for those who provide information to a hospital or its medical staff that a member of the staff is incompetent or impaired. Finally, it provides immunity from suit for those who review health care professionals' conduct and those who take disciplinary action against them.

● Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague on the Senate Finance Committee, Senator DURENBERGER, as a cosponsor of the Medical Offer and Recovery Act. This legislation addresses one of the Nation's critical health care problems—the spiraling cost of medical malpractice insurance.

In my own State of Missouri, malpractice insurance rates for family practice physicians rose by 135 percent this year, and hospital insurance costs increased by more than 150 percent. The problem is particularly severe in obstetrics and gynecology, where skyrocketing malpractice insurance rates are discouraging many rural physicians from performing such services and greatly diminishing and availability of care to high-risk maternal patients, who in many cases are poor.

At the Wetzel Clinic in Clinton, MO, which provides care to a wide rural area in the western part of the State, 7 of the 10 doctors who used to deliver babies have been squeezed out of this essential part of their practice by insurance rate increases.

Faced with a tenfold increase in its medical malpractice insurance premiums, Truman Medical Center, a public hospital in Kansas City, was forced to seek a $1.5 million loan from the city to form a self-insurance pool and avoid closing down or operating without insurance. A recent series of medical malpractice jury awards in excess of $10 million has made commercial reinsurance coverage virtually unavailable in western Missouri.

As these examples clearly demonstrate, the medical malpractice insurance crisis is not a problem faced only by doctors and hospitals—it is a problem which affects every one of us. The costs of medical malpractice—which include not only the rising price of insurance, but also the cost of additional tests and procedures ordered by doctors primarily to guard themselves against lawsuits—are paid by employers and individuals in the form of higher health insurance premiums and higher taxes.

This malpractice insurance crisis is but one facet of a much larger problem affecting all purchasers of liability insurance. Accountants, truck drivers, commercial fishermen, municipal governments, and many other groups also are confronting huge increases in the cost of insurance coverage. Indeed, the problem of cost and availability of liability insurance is so widespread and severe that it is becoming one of the most pressing economic issues the country faces today.

At the heart of the problem is a complicated and expensive civil justice system which consumes more money determining fault than compensating victims. If we are to get at the true cause of our insurance woes—in medical malpractice and other areas—something must be done to provide for more just and predictable awards to injured parties, while reducing the massive transactions costs associated with litigating disputes.

Although I am not yet certain that the legislation introduced today provides the best proposal for civil justice reform in the medical malpractice area, it is an important beginning. The Medical Offer and Recovery Act would provide for an alternative compensation scheme similar in design to legislation I have sponsored with regard to products liability. The goal is to get people out of the court system and to encourage swift and certain compensation for out-of-pocket losses. The products bill is moving ahead in the Commerce Committee, and I look forward to working on this legislation in the Finance Committee.

While I support the concept of setting up alternatives to formal court litigation of personal injury disputes, I am also aware that tort law reform is an issue within the purview of the States. Many States, including Missouri, have been very active recently in attempting to reform their laws governing personal injury litigation. This legislation is not attempting to discourage these efforts, but rather to complement and support them.

Mr. President, the Medical Offer and Recovery Act is directed at a complex problem, and there are a number of competing interests involved. While the task ahead is a challenging one, I am encouraged by the prospect of real reform that would benefit both the providers and consumers of medical care.●

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. DIXON, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. WARNER) (by request):

S. 1961. A bill to amend title 28 and title 11 of the United States Code to authorize a new U.S. trustee system by providing for the appointment of U.S. trustees to supervise the administration of bankruptcy cases in judicial districts throughout the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

UNITED STATES TRUSTEES ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, on behalf of the administration, I rise to introduce the United States Trustee Act of 1985. This bill would expand and make permanent the U.S. Trustee Pilot Program for Bankruptcy Administration, which was established by title I of the Bankruptcy Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-598). The initial period for the project was 4½ years, but it was extended twice: First until September 30, 1984 (Public Law 98-166), and again until September 30, 1986 (Public Law 98-353).

The U.S. trustees would be charged with overseeing the administration of bankruptcy cases filed under chapters 7, 11, and 13 of the Bankruptcy Code. Under the aegis of the Justice Department, the U.S. trustee system would effect a separation of the administrative and case monitoring functions from the adjudicative functions carried out by the bankruptcy judges and the judiciary. In the nonpilot areas, the bankruptcy judges have continued to adjudicate legal issues and to supervise the administration of bankruptcy cases.

This legislation would expand the pilot program from 10 field offices covering 18 judicial districts to 30 regional offices covering the entire United States. Each region would be headed by a U.S. trustee appointed by the Attorney General for a 4-year term.

Pursuant to the 1976 act, an independent study to compare the pilot and nonpilot programs was undertaken by Abt Associates, Inc. of Cambridge, MA. The findings of that study indicate that the pilot program has resulted in "enhanced honesty and efficiency in bankruptcy administration" in the pilot districts. Certainly this approach deserves careful consideration.

I am pleased to introduce this measure by request and to be joined by Senators DECONCINI, ANDREWS, BURDICK, D'AMATO, DIXON, SIMON, and WARNER. Having the proposal before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary this early will ensure that the committee will have adequate time to study the issue prior to the sunset date of September 30, 1986.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill from the Department of Justice be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1961

● Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary in introducing this bill to implement a nationwide U.S. Trustee System. This bill is needed to provide impartial, efficient, and effective administrative oversight of bankruptcy cases and to curb abuses and overreaching in some of those cases. The legislation we are introducing today is an extension and modification of a program that has been in place in 10 pilot programs for the past 6 years. The new System utilizes the knowledge we've gained from the pilot programs operations. The system will be completely self-supporting through small increases in the filing fees and modest monthly charges in chapter 11 cases reflecting the services provided by the system.

I also want to compliment the Attorney General and the Department of Justice for the constructive role they have played in the development of this legislation. Earlier this fall, it appeared that the Department might offer its own bill, that Judicial Conference might author a bill, and that I would also have a separate and distinct approach to bankruptcy administration. Since then, many thoughtful, productive meetings have occurred between the staff of the Department, the chairman's staff, and my staff. I believe the result is far better for their discussions than any of our individual products may have been, and I thank them for their efforts.

Active supervision of bankruptcy cases is essential due to the ever-present risk of fraud, self-dealing, and diversion of funds, and the huge number of people affected by bankruptcy proceedings, an estimated 8 million a year. Among the duties and responsibilities of the U.S. Trustees are overseeing the qualifications and appointments of private trustees in bankruptcy cases and supervising their performance, serving as trustees in certain cases, investigating misconduct or impropriety, monitoring the hiring of professionals and experts and the reasonableness of their fees and compensation, examining the debtor or presiding at meetings where the creditors examine the debtor, objecting in appropriate cases to the discharge of the debtor, reviewing the adequacy and completeness of financial statements submitted by the debtor, reviewing the final reports on estates that trustees have administered, forming representatives creditors' committees, and supervising creditors' committees to ensure that they perform their statutory duties.

The role of the U.S. Trustee is to eliminate favoritism, opportunities for fraud, and such improprieties as the operation of a company with no insurance during the pendency of a chapter 11 business reorganization proceeding, engendering administrative expenses (such as rent, utlities, and taxes) which cannot be paid, or failing to pay withholding taxes during the chapter 11 proceeding.

The sum of these duties led Congress to create the U.S. Trustee as an executive branch officer and, after thorough deliberations, to place the system in the Department of Justice in view of the U.S. Trustees' litigating and enforcement functions. That placement has worked extremely well. The Department has the prestige to attract high caliber personnel, the experience in supervising attorneys, and has other responsibilities in the area of bankruptcy, especially the prosecution of bankruptcy crimes. The placement has allowed needed cooperation between the U.S. Trustees and the U.S. Attorneys, and other components of the Department, as well as other agencies and departments of the Government. It has also enhanced the Department's detection and prosecution of white collar crimes related to bankruptcy and of organized crime figures involved in bankruptcy bustouts.

The pilot program has been exhaustively evaluated and has been highly effective in improving the quality and efficiency of bankruptcy case administration. An independent evaluation by ABT Associates, Inc., of Cambridge, MA, was very positive. Among other indicia of the success of the program, it found that there were twice as many successful business reorganizations in districts with a U.S. Trustee than in others. The statutorily mandated 1984 Report of the Attorney General was equally positive, focusing particularly on the effective discharge of the U.S. Trustees' watchdog function. This legislation is quite similar to the United States Trustees Act of 1985 introduced in the other body as H.R. 3664, but differs in the following important respects.

It establishes 30 rather than 24 regions to be headed by a U.S. Trustee by reducing the geographical areas to be covered and, as a result, making the U.S. Trustee more accessible. This change would have only a minimal effect on the cost of the system since the number of offices would not be increased.

It clarifies the U.S. Trustees' authority to remove trustees and examiners for cause, by providing that removal in one case is cause for removal in all other cases. It makes clear that the U.S. Trustees are not given standing to file plans in chapter 11 cases, and provides for active district court supervision over cases still pending under the former Bankruptcy Act of 1898, as amended.

An important difference is the addition of a demonstration project to be implemented by the Department of Justice to evaluate the effectiveness of an integrated computer system in increasing efficiency in both the U.S. Trustees' offices and the offices of the clerks of the courts. Despite a decadelong attempt, the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, has been unable to develop such a system.

This legislation will implement a cost saving and effective administrative system to protect the financial interests of millions by implementing a U.S. Trustee system nationwide without burdening the taxpayers of the country.●

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am happy to be an original cosponsor of the United States Trustees Act, legislation being introduced today to expand the bankruptcy trustee program. I have become very familiar with this program through its successful operation in the Southern District of New York.

The pilot United States Trustee Program was established in 1979 to combat embezzlement, fraud, and other white collar crimes, as well as administrative waste and abuse, in our Nation's bankruptcy system.

In 1984, approximately 150 criminal matters were referred to appropriate law enforcement agencies for investigation and prosecution.

One of the worst frauds the trustee program combats is the so-called bustout, or planned bankruptcy. This typically involves the purchase or taking control of a company with as small an investment of funds as possible.

A good credit rating is first established by submitting false financial information, and by making small purchases of goods from suppliers and paying promptly. Large amounts of goods are then obtained on credit. The goods are sold below cost for cash to companies under the participants' control.

The original company is then "sold" to "new" owners, who are also participants in the scheme. The new owners disclaim responsibility for debts of the prior owners, while obtaining more goods on credit.

Finally, the original company is put into bankruptcy with large debts and as few assets as possible. A great quantity of goods has been obtained on credit and without payment. The goods have been sold at a price very advantageous to participants in the scheme, and the company's creditors have been defrauded. The participants in such schemes, frequently members of organized crime, execute many bust-outs over a period of time by using various companies under their control.

In 18 pilot districts, Congress has given the Justice Department primary responsibility for administration and case monitoring. The U.S. Trustees serve as "watchdogs" who supervise the administration of all cases filed pursuant to Chapters 7, 11, and 13 of Title 1 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act.

Although the Bankruptcy Reform Act originally provided for the program to expire on April 1, 1984, Congress first extended it until September 30, 1984, and last year extended it again until September 30, 1986. This program has been subjected to the strictest scrutiny, and has repeatedly proved itself to be a success. I refer my colleagues to the 1983 study conducted by Abt Associates entitled, "An Evaluation of the United States Trustee Pilot Program for Bankruptcy Administration" and to the 1984 "Report of the Attorney General on the United States Trustee Program".

In chapter 7 cases, the trustees oversee the complete liquidation of the debtor's nonexempt assets. Their review helps prevent unnecessary expenses being charged to a debtor's estate and to prevent overreaching by professionals.

In 1984, the Trustees filed 1,550 objections to fee requests by professionals. In only 200 of these cases were the fees granted as originally requested. This number does not include the many cases handled by negotiations prior to action by the court.

In chapter 11 cases, the trustees oversee financial reorganizations, usually of businesses. They prevent dissipation of assets, and have been especially successful in making certain that withholding taxes are paid. There are twice as many successful business reorganizations under chapter 11 in those judicial districts where the United States Trustee Program is in place.

In chapter 13 cases, the trustees work to ensure that debtors repay their creditors with regular monthly payments over a set period of time, usually 3 years. Trustees assist debtors in developing acceptable repayment plans, and handle disbursements to creditors.

Mr. President, I encourage my colleagues to give this bill their full support. The United States Trustees Act is a major contribution toward the development of a nationwide system that provides relief to deserving creditors, maximizes distributions to creditors, and preserves jobs by allowing failing businesses to reorganize.●

By Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mr. BINGAMAN):

S. 1963. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain interests in lands in Socorro County, NM, to the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

NEW MEXICO TECH LAND PURCHASE

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, today I introduce a bill that will convey 8,501 acres of Bureau of Land Management land to the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, commonly called New Mexico Tech. This small, highly regarded institution is located at Socorro, NM.

New Mexico Tech has gained international prominence for the work it has completed in the areas of petroleum recovery research, explosive technology research, and military hardware research.

The land that will be conveyed in this bill is necessary so that valuable educational research and testing work can continue. The university's present field laboratory does not have enough usable space. If the university's present field laboratory is not expanded a very important component of our Nation's defense related research and testing capabilities will be put at jeopardy. Therefore, this legislation is not only very important for the university and for New Mexico, but for the Nation as well.

The research that would be conducted on the subject land would be undertaken by the terminal effects research and analysis [TERA] group which is a component of the Research and Development Division at New Mexico Tech.

TERA is known for its work in the fields of aircraft vulnerability, antiaircraft missile design, and warhead evaluation. TERA is also involved in the design and evaluation of missile warheads for antiship and antitank targets. The TERA group was involved in the pioneering design, testing and evaluation efforts for the Talos, Tartar, and Terrier warhead systems. In addition, TERA has more recently been involved in the Sea-Sparrow, Phoenix, Standard Missile-2, Amraam, Chaparral, and Roland missile systems projects.

All branches of the military are looking to TERA to assume more of the testing work which is required to fulfill their explosive testing obligations. This work, by its very nature, involves large explosive charges, rocket propellants, and long-range gun firings, all of which require large expanses of land for purposes of safety and security.

I have been informed by New Mexico Tech that current contract negotiations with the military include such project requests as a 5-kilometer (3-mile) gun range to test 120 mm ammunition for the M-1 Abrams tank, and an area for testing 10,000-pound explosive charges against blast barriers for U.S. embassies abroad, and a 5-kilometer range for a testbed electromagnetic rail gun. The present field laboratory with 37 test sites now in operation does not have usable space available to meet these current needs.

The land that would be conveyed to New Mexico Tech is admittedly a large acreage, but it is needed to meet both line-of-site and safety requirements. This land is contiguous to the present laboratory and thus well situated for security purposes. The land will allow for economies of operation that might otherwise not exist in a location removed from the existing facility.

TERA expertise centers on experimental development, evaluation, and analysis of defense system components intended for use by the U.S. Armed Forces. So far, the Department of Defense has been TERA's primary user, but increasingly the Departments of Energy and State as well as other Government agencies and private industry are turning to TERA for assistance.

TERA evolved from ordnance research projects during World War II and has been a part of New Mexico Tech since 1949. Over the years, TERA's combination of knowledge and experience, specialized test facilities, fast turnaround, and reasonable cost have served to make it a very important defense related research center. This bill will guarantee continued research for this vital institution.

I think it is very obvious that a lot of worthwhile activity is going on with the TERA group at New Mexico Tech. This university needs to have title to this land because they cannot lease it from BLM. BLM would be prohibited from issuing any permits and leases under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA) because of the unique and special uses that the land would be used for. I have explained the merits of these special uses and the only way to insure that this special research can continue is if this bill is passed.

This legislation contains language which authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Interior to convey this land at fair market value. Preliminary estimates by the BLM show that this land is worth about $640,000. The university intends to get the State appropriation to purchase this land. So far their request has been approved by New Mexico's Board of Educational Finance and is supported by the Governor. This evidences the State's commitment to this project and is a good example of State and Federal Governments working together to accomplish an important goal.

This legislation reserves to the Federal Government any mineral rights associated with the land. Further, New Mexico Tech agrees to perform and provide the Secretary with a survey of the archeological resources of the area. The university will complete this survey in coordination with New Mexico's historic preservation office. This conveyance is subject to all valid and existing rights such as existing grazing permits, geothermal leases, or mining claims.

In summary, this bill will provide New Mexico Tech with the additional land to fulfull TERA's defense-related commitments. This land is contiguous to the present field laboratory and will meet the university's requirements for safety and security while providing for economies of operation.●

By Mr. MOYNIHAN:

S. 1964. A bill to extend the Revenue Sharing Program for local governments through fiscal year 1988; to the Committee on Finance.

GENERAL REVENUE SHARING EXTENSION

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill extending through 1988 a program that has long been an important source of support for local and State governments—the General Revenue Sharing Program.

This is a matter which concerns the fundamental nature of our federalist system. During the 1960's we faced an elementary fact: the progressive arrangement of our income tax system caused those of the Federal Government to grow faster than the revenues of State and local governments. As money flowed to Washington, so did power.

Revenue sharing was established more than a decade ago when Congress passed the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972. It was seen then as a way of halting, or even reversing, the trend toward ever-increasing concentrations of power in Washington, at the expense of State and local autonomy.

We extended the program in 1976, 1980, and 1983; since 1972, the program has provided more than $74 billion in assistance to State and local governments.

Mr. President, as in 1972, this program continues to embody the fundamental concept of maximizing local control over how funds are used. Since then, moreover, we have reformed the original program, to ensure that the funds could be sent to the governments which most truly need them. When first established, State governments as well as localities received revenue sharing funds. In 1980, we changed this arrangement to reflect the view that State governments were in better financial shape than the Federal Government.

Today, revenue sharing continues to provide needed funds to cities and towns throughout the country, on the basis of fiscal need and capacity. More than 39,000 units of government are eligible for the program, including 3,049 counties nationwide. Jurisdictions with populations of less than 10,000, most of which receive no other assistance from the Federal Government, account for more than 85 percent of the program's recipients. Revenue sharing is the only form of Federal assistance received by more than 30,000 local governments.

These communities do need revenue sharing. Sixty-two percent of all revenue sharing funds go to jurisdictions with per capita incomes below the national average. Fully 93 percent go to those with per capita incomes below 125 percent of the national average.

More than half of the funds are used for police, fire, schools, and hospitals. They are used as well to help maintain roads, highways, and bridges and to build jails and sewage and water treatment facilities. Funds also are used to provide services for poor and elderly Americans, such as Meals on Wheels, indigent health care, and nursing homes.

Less than 0.2 percent of the funds are used for administration costs, making the program one of the most efficient the Government has ever established.

Without revenue sharing, local governments will be faced with the choice of increasing taxes or cutting nonessential services. For many local governments, taxes would have to go up more than 30 percent to compensate for the loss of revenue sharing.

I have long been a proponent of revenue sharing, and in the executive branch helped craft the legislation that led to creation of the program in 1972. Since coming to the Senate in 1977, I have always strongly supported the program. As the current program expires at the end of this fiscal year, the time has come again to extend the program. I urge my colleagues to support this effort.●

By Mr. STAFFORD (for himself, Mr. PELL, Mr. QUAYLE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. WEICKER, Mr. DODD, Mr. WALLOP, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. PRESSLER):

S. 1965. A bill to reauthorize and revise the Higher Education Act of 1965, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

HIGHER EDUCATION AMENDMENTS

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, today as chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts, and Humanities, I am introducing the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act of 1965 on behalf of myself and cosponsors Mr. PELL, Mr. QUAYLE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. WEICKER, Mr. DODD, Mr. WALLOP, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. PRESSLER.

The Higher Education Act provides the means for millions of Americans to achieve a higher education. Its wide-ranging impact on the skills and competence of our work force, as well as on the quality of life for our people is immeasurable. The majority of testimony heard by this Senator during 12 days of hearings in Washington and around the Nation convinced me that the Higher Education Act was basically successful in design and execution, and should be reauthorized with a minimum of disruption to current programs.

With this in mind, the subcommittee has considered and unanimously voted out a conservative bill. Programs which have been funded are continued with improvements. Finally, our student aid programs are given the priority and emphasis they deserve. Particularly the Pell Grant Program which, as the centerpiece of the Federal investment in higher education, has been strengthened and expanded.

The bill is divided into two parts. Title I contains all of the student aid provisions. Title II is made up of all remaining programs that provide institutional support. As chairman of the subcommittee, it was my goal throughout this reauthorization process, to produce a bill that was realistic in light of the deep concern about the federal deficit, yet at the same time enjoyed wide bipartisan support. The long list of cosponsors who join with me today is a tribute to the hard work on the part of all subcommittee members and staff to help reach that goal.

The bill I am introducing today is over $2 billion below current authorization levels, and approximately $750 million below the higher education bill recently passed by the House of Representatives for fiscal year 1987.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD immediately following the statements of Senators PELL and SIMON.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

● Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to join the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts, and Humanitaries [Mr. STAFFORD] in introducing the Higher Education Amendments of 1985. This legislation was approved by the subcommittee last Thursday, December 12, and represents strong bipartisan consensus on the part of the subcommittee members.

It is especially important to note that the total cost of this legislation is more than $2 billion below current authorizations for higher education. It is truly a bill that has been written in the spirit of prudent fiscal restraint.

I am particularly pleased that the major portions of this legislation focus upon student aid, which is by far our most important contribution to the cause of higher education. For some time, I have been very concerned by the decline of the actual dollar value of Pell grants, which is the cornerstone of our Federal student aid efforts. Over the past 4 years the value of that grant has declined by one-fifth. Further where a Pell grant in 1979 covered about 46 percent of average college attendance costs, it now covers less than a third.

Under the legislation approved by the subcommittee, the maximum Pell grant, now at $2,100, would increase to $2,400 for 1987, $2,600 for 1988, $2,800 for 1989, $3,000 for 1990, and $3,200 for 1991. In the first year of our proposal, this would mean an increase of almost 15 percent and that would do much to reverse the decline of the grant's value.

Generally the modest increases we have provided for undergraduate students through the Pell Grant Program and for graduate students through the Graduate and Professional Opportunities Program are truly investments in the future. Their cost will be repaid many times over in the contributions the men and women who receive these grants will make to our country.

There are, in addition, four proposals in which I have had a continuing interest that have been incorporated into this legislation. The first of these is the satisfactory progress provision, which stipulates that a student must maintain a "C" average in order to remain eligible for Federal student aid. I have long contended that we must make sure that student aid goes not only to those who truly need and deserve it but also only to those who are serious about their work, and who are completing and passing the courses in which they are enrolled.

Second, we have provided a modest $5 million authorization to assist college libraries. Unlike previous programs, however, this proposal would target assistance to those libraries which have the greatest demonstrated need. It is without question that the quality of a college education depends not only upon the quality of instruction but also upon the quality of a college library. Thus, what we do in this area in the very small program we are proposing can have a lasting impact upon student after student for years to come.

Third, under the bill approved by the subcommittee, campus-based aid to students would be targeted to students who demonstrate exceptional financial need. This change applies to both the Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant Program and the National Direct Student Loan Program. In a period of limited funds for student aid, it is particularly important that those funds reach students who need them most. The changes we have proposed will help accomplish that end.

Finally, our legislation includes the provision that child care be included in the cost of attendance and therefore an allowable expense to be considered in calculating student aid. This is especially important to students who are starting a college career or returning to college and must take care of small children at the same time. Including child care in the cost of attendance will help provide sufficient aid to cover those costs while the student is in school.

Mr. President, this is an excellent piece of legislation. It protects and improves student aid, provides important program assistance in such important areas as libraries, foreign language, and area studies, and cooperative education, and accomplishes all of that in a fiscally responsible manner. I am proud to have my name on this bill, and I look forward to considering it in the full Labor and Human Resources Committee and on the floor of the Senate during the second session of the 99th Congress.●

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Education, Arts, and Humanities and its ranking Democratic member as cosponsors of S. 1965, the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1985. This bill, which was marked up in the subcommittee last Thursday, represents the bipartisan coalition that has traditionally supported higher education in the Congress of the United States. It is a fiscally responsible, as well as responsive to the needs of students, parents, and the higher education community.

Last year, while I served in the other body as chairman of the Education and Labor Committee's Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, I urged the higher education community to begin the process of reauthorizing the Higher Education Act of 1965 early. Although the community could not come to an agreement with respect to some critical issues in the student aid area, I thought then, and believe now, that the Congress and the President could have constructed a more positive and beneficial bill to higher education then we will in the current budgetary climate. Under the present circumstances, we often ask how much does it costs before we determine what will best serve students and the Nation!

The bill being introduced today achieves several of the objectives I articulated last year:

Expand access, by dramatically increasing the Pell grant maximum, enlarging the maximum grant in the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant Program (SEOG), while retargeting SEOG's on the neediest students;

Simplify programs while improving efficiency, by providing a simple form for Federal student aid applicants who come from families with annual incomes of $15,000 or less, and permit student aid officers to correct errors on Pell grant application forms on the campus; and Enhance quality, by strengthening the statutory "satisfactory academic progress" requirement and improving institutional facilities and endowments under title III.

I am especially pleased that the bill contains several provisions included in H.R. 5240 (98th Congress):

Each State will be required to establish an agency to serve as a lender of last resort;

The special allowance will be reduced by one-half of 1 percent to 3 percent (for lenders whose GSL loan volume exceeds $8 million);

A master calendar is established in law to ensure the timely delivery of student aid;

All students will have to undergo a needs test to determine eligibility for assistance, and the GSL needs test will be mandated in the law as a part of the needs analysis for the GSL and campus-based programs in section 482; and

The Pell grant family contribution schedule is written into law in order to ensure that these funds will be available for low- and middle-income students.

The bill also addresses the important issue of restoring a better balance between loans and grants in the financing of higher education. There have been major shifts over time in the overall proportions of aid awarded in the form of grants and loans. From 1970-71 to 1975-76, grant aid increased from 66 percent to 80 percent of total aid awarded, while loans decreased from 29 to 17 percent. This pattern reversed itself in the mid-1970's. In 1983-84, the proportions of total aid awarded as grants and loans are about equal at 48 percent each; work-study support provides the other 4 percent.

There is no more critical issue facing higher education than the continued expansion of educational opportunity to minority students, women, and those who historically have been left at higher education's doorstep. Monday's Washington Post included an article about the decline in the number of blacks pursuing graduate careers and entering the professoriate. The same is true for Hispanics and native Americans, and while the situation has improved for women, they still often find themselves untenured, underpaid, and uncertain about their futures. I expect to offer an amendment when the full committee marks up our bill to address the minority access problem. My amendment will provide for the use of the fifth year of Pell grant assistance by needy, qualified graduate students, and would authorize an early identification program—similar to the Trio Program—for juniors and seniors in college.

Although this bill is not everything I would like for it to be, it maintains the Nation's commitment to access and choice in higher education and attempts to address many of the concerns raised by parents, students, and college and university leaders.

Chairman STAFFORD and Senator PELL, who ably chaired the subcommittee for many years, have worked closely with all of the subcommittee members in fashioning a bill we can all support. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join us in support of academic excellence, increased efficiency, and improved opportunities—cosponsor the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1986.●

3	50 percent of the contribution determined in subparagraph (A).

"(2)(A) The family income contribution amount is determined by deducting from effective family income (i) a family size offset determined in accordance with subparagraph (B), (ii) an unusual expense offset determined in accordance with subparagraph (C), (iii) an employment expense offset determined in accordance with subparagraph (D), and (iv) an educational expense offset determined in accordance with subparagraph (E). If such discretionary income is a negative amount, the family income contribution amount is zero. If such discretionary income is a positive amount the family income contribution amount is determined in accordance with the following chart:

"Discretionary income	Expected contribution
$0 to $5,000	11% of discretionary income.
$5,001 to $10,000	$550, plus 13% of amount over $5,000.

"(II) if the parents are divorced or separated, family members include the parent whose income is included in computing the effective family income and that parent's dependents; and

"(III) if the parents are divorced and the parent whose income is so included is remarried, or if the parent was a widow or widower who has remarried, family members also include, in addition to those individuals referred to in subdivision (II) of this division, the new spouse and any dependents of the new spouse if that spouse's income is included in determining effective family income.

"(C) The unusual expense offset is equal to the amount by which the sum of unreimbursed medical and dental expenses exceeds 20 percent of the effective income of the parents. The expenses of both parents are included only if the income of both parents are included in determining effective family income. A stepparent's expenses are included only if the parent's income is included in determining effective family income.

"(D) The employment expense offset is determined as follows:

"(i) If both parents were employed in the year for which their income is reported and both have their incomes reported in determining the expected family contribution, such offset is equal to the lesser of $1,500 or 50 percent of the earned income (income earned by work) of the parent with the lesser earned income.

"(B) If parental assets include assets other than a principal place of residence and other than farm and business assets, the amount determined under this subparagraph is the net value of such assets, minus $25,000. If such value minus such amount produces a negative number the amount determined under this subparagraph is zero.

"(C)(i) If parental assets include farm or business assets, or both, the amount determined under this subparagraph is the net value of such assets, minus $80,000. If such value minus such amount produces a negative number the amount determined under this subparagraph is zero.

"(ii) If the sum of the farm and business deduction and the deduction under subparagraph (B) exceeds $100,000, the farm and business deduction shall be reduced by the amount such sum exceeds $100,000.

"(D) If the student's parents are separated, or divorced, and not remarried, only the assets of the parent whose income is included in computing effective family income shall be included, for purposes of this paragraph. If that parent has remarried, or if the parent was a widow or widower who has remarried, and that parent's spouse's income is also included in computing effective family income, the assets of that parent's spouse shall also be included, for purposes of this paragraph.

"(E) In the computation of family contributions from effective family income and parental assets for any academic year beginning on or after July 1, 1986, the proceeds of a sale of farm or business assets of the family shall be excluded from family income if such sale results from a voluntary or involuntary foreclosure, forfeiture, liquidation, or bankruptcy.

"(i) $3,500 in the case of a single student or $5,300 in the case of a married student, if the amount determined under paragraph (2)(A) for parental discretionary income is a positive amount; or

"(ii) if such parental discretionary income is a negative amount, the sum of (I) the amount allowed as an offset under clause (i), plus (II) the amount, if any, by which the result of the subtraction performed under paragraph (3)(A) is less than zero.

"(5) The student asset contribution amount is equal to—

"(A) 33 percent of net value of the student's assets, in the case of a single dependent student; or

"(B) in the case of a married dependent student and spouse, 5 percent of (i) the net asset value, minus (ii) $25,000.

If such value minus such amount (as computed under clause (B) (i) and (ii)) is a negative amount, the student asset contribution amount is zero.

"(c) RULES FOR INDEPENDENT STUDENTS.—(1) For each independent student the expected family contribution is equal to—

"(A) the sum of (i) the family income contribution amount determined under paragraph (2), and (ii) the family asset contribution amount determined under paragraph (3), adjusted for—

If such discretionary income is a negative amount, the family income contribution amount is zero. If such discretionary income is a positive amount the family income contribution amount is equal to—

"(i) 75 percent of such discretionary income in the case of a single independent student with no dependents or a married independent student without children, or

"(ii) 25 percent of such discretionary income in the case of an independent student with one or more dependents.

"(B)(i) The family size offset is equal to the amount specified in the following table:

"FAMILY SIZE OFFSETS

"Family members	Amount
1	$5,300
2	6,700
3	8,100
4	10,400
5	12,300
6	13,800
7 or more	13,800 plus $1,800 for each member over 6.

"(ii) In determining family size—

"(C) The unusual expense offset is equal to the amount by which the sum of unreimbursed medical and dental expenses exceeds 20 percent of the effective family income. The expenses of both the student and the student's spouse are included only if the incomes of both are included in determining effective family income.

"(D) The employment expense offset is determined as follows:

"(i) If both the student and the student's spouse were employed in the year for which their income is reported and both have their incomes reported in determining the expected family contribution, such offset is equal to the lesser of $1,500 or 50 percent of the earned income (income earned by work) of the spouse with the lesser earned income.

"(E) The educational expense offset is equal to the tuition paid by the student and spouse for dependent children enrolled in elementary or secondary school.

"(3)(A) The family asset contribution amount of an independent student with dependents is equal to 5 percent of (i) the sum of the amounts computed under subparagraphs (C) and (D), reduced by (ii) the amount, if any, by which discretionary income as computed under paragraph (2)(A), is less than zero. If the result of such subtraction is a negative amount, the family asset contribution amount is zero.

"(B) The family asset contribution amount of a single independent student is equal to 33 percent of such student's net asset value, reduced by the amount, if any, by which discretionary income as computed under paragraph (2)(A) is less than zero. If such value minus such amount is a negative amount, the family asset contribution amount is zero.

"(C) If the assets of an independent student with dependents include assets other than a principal place of residence and other than farm and business assets the amount determined under this subparagraph is the net value of such assets, minus $25,000. If such value minus such amount produces a negative number the amount determined under this subparagraph is zero.

"(D)(i) If the assets of an independent student with dependents include farm or business assets, or both, the amount determined under this subparagraph is the net value of such assets, minus $80,000. If such value minus such amount produces a negative number the amount determined under this subparagraph is zero.

"(ii) If the sum of the farm and business deduction and the deduction under subparagraph (B) exceeds $100,000, the farm and business deduction shall be reduced by the amount such sum exceeds $100,000.

"(d) REGULATION AUTHORITY LIMITATIONS.—The Secretary shall promulgate only such regulations as may be necessary to require the use of the most recent and relevant data in determining the expected family contribution under this section. Such regulations may also include procedures for computing family contributions when the student's family or an independent student have encountered extraordinary circumstances.

"(2) In preparing the schedule of expected family contributions under this section, the Secretary shall, in evaluating the ability of the family to pay and the eligibility of the student for assistance under the program subject to the schedule, apply the following policies:

"(A) Parents of dependent students have a responsibility to finance their children's education to the extent that they are able to do so.

"(B) The ability of parents to pay derives from an evaluation of their financial resources at the time their dependent son or daughter applies for assistance.

"(C) Both income and assets of the parents and student are considered in arriving at an estimate of a family's ability to contribute to educational costs.

"(D) Basic and nondiscretionary expenses for food, shelter, and clothing and obligatory expenditures, such as taxes, are assumed not to be available to the family to pay for the children's educational costs. A portion of the remaining discretionary income is assumed to be available for postsecondary educational expenses.

"(E) Students who are dependent on their parents also are expected to contribute to their own educational expenses through their earnings, savings (including an $800 minimum contribution), or other resources that may be available directly to them, such as veterans' benefits.

"(F) Students are expected to contribute a greater proportion of their income and assets for education than their parents.

"(G) To qualify as self-supporting, students must meet age or other criteria established in this title and must demonstrate that they are not receiving any significant financial assistance from their parents.

"(H) Students determined to be self-supporting who have not accumulated sufficient personal resources should be able to receive financial assistance to pay for direct educational costs and minimum living costs for themselves and their dependents.

"(I) Through a combination of financial aid and personal resources, all self-supporting students and their families should be able to maintain a minimum living standard.

"(J) Students with no minor dependent children and their spouses who earn income should be expected to contribute most of that income toward direct and indirect educational expenses and be allowed to retain a portion of that income in order to improve their standard of living.

"(K) Self-supporting students with minor dependent children should be expected to contribute the same proportion of income and assets toward direct and indirect educational expenses as families of dependent students.

"(L) All self-supporting students and their spouses should be expected to contribute a minimum amount of resources toward their education.

"(b) BASIC CRITERIA.—The basic criteria to be followed in promulgating the expected family contribution are as follows:

"(2) Allowances against income shall include:

"(D) An allowance for unreimbursed tuition paid for dependent children other than the student enrolled in private elementary or secondary institutions.

"(6) The number of dependents in the family of the student.

"(7) The number of dependents in the family of the student who are enrolled in, on at least a half-time basis, a program of postsecondary education.

"(8) In the case of an independent student, the marital status of the student and the number of minor dependents in the student's family.

"(9) In determining the expected family contribution under this section, a schedule of marginal taxation rates shall be applied to the amount of Adjusted Available Income. Separate taxation rates shall be developed for the parents of dependent undergraduate students, independent students with minor dependents, parents of dependent graduate students, and for independent students without minor dependents.

"(c) SEPARATE SCHEDULES.—Separate schedules of expected family contributions shall be developed for independent students and independent students with dependent minor children. "(3) in determining the family contribution for an independent student who has one or more dependent minor children, provide that the assessment rate which is to be applied to the student's available income shall be the same as the assessment rate applied to the available income of the family of a dependent student.

"SEC. 321. The Congress finds that—

"(1) the historically black colleges and universities have contributed significantly to the effort to attain equal opportunity through postsecondary education for black, low-income, and educationally disadvantaged Americans;

"(3) the current state of black colleges and universities is partly attributable to the discriminatory action of the States and the Federal Government and this discriminatory action requires the remedy of enhancement of black postsecondary institutions to ensure their continuation and participation in fulfilling the Federal mission of equality of educational opportunity; and

"(4) financial assistance to establish or strengthen the physical plants, financial management, academic resources, and endowments of the historically black colleges and universities are appropriate methods to enhance these institutions and facilitate a decrease in reliance on governmental financial support and to encourage reliance on endowments and private sources.

"(2) The Secretary may waive the requirements set forth in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) with respect to a postgraduate degree in the case of any institution otherwise eligible under such paragraph for a challenge grant upon determining that the institution makes a substantial contribution to medical education opportunities for minorities and the economically disadvantaged.

"(b) USES OF FUNDS.—A grant under this section may be used by an institution eligible for a grant under this section to assist the institution to achieve financial independence.

"APPLICATIONS FOR CHALLENGE GRANTS

"SEC. 332. (a) CONTENTS.—Any institution eligible for a challenge grant under section 331(a) may apply for such a grant under section 351, except that the application for the purpose of this part shall—

"(c) PREFERENCE.—In approving applications for such grants, preference shall be given to institutions which are receiving, or have received, grants under part A or part B.

"CHALLENGE GRANTS

"SEC. 333. (a) PURPOSE; DEFINITIONS.—(1) The purpose of this section is to establish a program to provide matching grants to eligible institutions of higher education in order to establish or increase endowment funds at such institutions, to provide additional incentives to promote fund raising activities by such institutions, and to foster increased independence and self-sufficiency at such institutions.

"(2) For purposes of this section:

"(A) The term 'endowment fund' means a fund established by State law, by an institution of higher education, or by a foundation which is exempt from taxation and is maintained for the purpose of generating income for the support of the institution, but which shall not include real estate.

"(B) The term 'endowment fund corpus' means an amount equal to the grant or grants awarded under this section plus an amount equal to such grant or grants provided by the institution.

"(C) The term 'endowment fund income' means an amount equal to the total value of the endowment fund established under this section minus the endowment fund corpus.

"(b) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—(1) From sums available for this section under section 358, the Secretary is authorized to award challenge grants to eligible institutions of higher education to establish or increase an endowment fund at such institution. Such grants shall be made only to eligible institutions described in paragraph (4) whose applications have been approved pursuant to subsection (g).

The source of funds for this institutional match shall not include Federal funds or funds from an existing endowment fund.

"(3) The period of a grant under this section shall be not more than 20 years. During the grant period, an institution may not withdraw or expend any of the endowment fund corpus. After the termination of the grant period, an institution may use the endowment fund corpus plus any endowment fund income for any educational purpose.

"(4)(A) An institution of higher education is eligible to receive a grant under this section if it is an eligible institution as described in section 331(a)(1).

"(B) No institution shall be ineligible for a challenge grant under this section for a fiscal year by reason of the previous receipt of such a grant but no institution shall be eligible to receive such a grant for more than 2 fiscal years out of any period of 5 consecutive fiscal years.

"(5) A challenge grant under this section to an eligible institution year shall—

"(A) not be less than $50,000 for any fiscal year; and

"(B) not be more than (i) $250,000 for fiscal year 1987; or (ii) $500,000 for fiscal year 1988 or any succeeding fiscal year.

"(6)(A) An eligible institution may designate a foundation, which was established for the purpose of raising money for the institution, as the recipient of the grant awarded under this section.

"(B) The Secretary shall not award a grant to a foundation on behalf of an institution unless—

"(i) the institution assures the Secretary that the foundation is legally authorized to receive the endowment fund corpus and is legally authorized to administer the fund in accordance with this section and any implementing regulation;

"(ii) the foundation agrees to administer the fund in accordance with the requirements of this section and any implementing regulation; and

"(iii) the institution agrees to be liable for any violation by the foundation of the provisions of this section and any implementing regulation, including any monetary liability that may arise as a result of such violation.

"(c) GRANT AGREEMENT; ENDOWMENT FUND PROVISIONS.—(1) An institution awarded a grant under this section shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary containing satisfactory assurances that it will (A) immediately comply with the matching requirements of subsection (b)(2), (B) establish an endowment fund independent of any other such fund of the institution, (C) invest the endowment fund corpus, and (D) meet the other requirements of this section.

"(2)(A) An institution shall invest the endowment fund corpus and endowment fund income in low-risk securities in which a regulated insurance company may invest under the law of the State in which the institution is located such as a federally insured bank savings account or comparable interest-bearing account, certificate of deposit, money market fund, mutual fund, or obligations of the United States.

"(B) The institution, in investing the endowment fund established under this section, shall exercise the judgment and care, under the circumstances then prevailing, which a person of prudence, discretion, and intelligence would exercise in the management of such person's own affairs.

"(3)(A) An institution may withdraw and expend the endowment fund income to defray any expenses necessary to the operation of such college, including expenses of operations and maintenance, administration, academic and support personnel, construction and renovation, community and student services programs, and technical assistance.

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), an institution may not spend more than 50 percent of the total aggregate endowment fund income earned prior to the time of expenditure.

"(ii) The Secretary may permit an institution to spend more than 50 percent of the endowment fund income notwithstanding clause (i) if the institution demonstrates such an expenditure is necessary because of (I) a financial emergency, such as a pending insolvency or temporary liquidity problem; (II) a life-threatening situation occasioned by a natural disaster or arson; or (III) any other unusual occurrence or exigent circumstance.

"(d) REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.—(1) If at any time an institution withdraws part of the endowment fund corpus, the institution shall repay to the Secretary an amount equal to 50 percent of the withdrawn amount, which represents the Federal share, plus income earned thereon. The Secretary may use such repaid funds to make additional challenge grants, or to increase existing endowment grants, to other eligible institutions.

"(2) If an institution expends more of the endowment fund income than is permitted under subsection (c), the institution shall repay the Secretary an amount equal to 50 percent of the amount improperly expended (representing the Federal share thereof). The Secretary may use such repaid fund to make additional challenge grants, or to increase existing challenge grants, to other eligible institutions.

"(e) AUDIT INFORMATION.—An institution receiving a grant under this section shall provide to the Secretary (or a designee thereof) such information (or access thereto) as may be necessary to audit or examine expenditures made from the endowment fund corpus or income in order to determine compliance with this section.

"(f) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In selecting eligible institutions for grants under this section for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall—

"(1) give priority to an applicant which is a recipient of a grant made under part A or part B of this title during the academic year in which the applicant is applying for a grant under this section; and

"(2) give priority to an applicant with a greater need for such a grant, based on the current market value of the applicant's existing endowment in relation to the number of full-time equivalent students enrolled at such institution;

"(3) consider—

"(A) the effort made by the applicant to build or maintain its existing endowment fund; and

"(B) the degree to which an applicant proposes to match the grant with nongovernmental funds.

"(g) APPLICATION.—Any institution which is eligible for assistance under this section may submit to the Secretary a grant application at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary may prescribe. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this section and consistent with the requirement of subsection (f), the Secretary may approve an application for a grant if an institution, in its application, provides adequate assurances that it will comply with the requirements of this section.

"(h) TERMINATION AND RECOVERY PROVISIONS.—(1) After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary may terminate and recover a grant awarded under this section if the grantee institution—

"(A) expends portions of the endowment fund corpus or expends more than the permissible amount of the endowment funds income as prescribed in subsection (c)(3);

"(B) fails to invest the endowment fund in accordance with the investment standards set forth in subsection (c)(2); or

"(C) fails to properly account to the Secretary concerning the investment and expenditures of the endowment funds.

"(2) If the Secretary terminates a grant under paragraph (1), the grantee shall return to the Secretary an amount equal to the sum of each original grant under this section plus income earned thereon. The Secretary may use such repaid funds to make additional endowment grants, or to increase existing challenge grants, to other eligible institutions under this part.

"PART D—RESERVATION FOR HISPANIC, NATIVE AMERICAN, ASIAN AMERICAN, AND PACIFIC BASIN INSTITUTIONS

"STATEMENT OF FINDINGS AND PURPOSE

"SEC. 341. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) Hispanic students in the United States are overwhelmingly concentrated in public postsecondary institutions, especially in 2-year community colleges;

"(2) Hispanic and Native American, including Native American Pacific Islander, students rarely transfer to a 4-year institution of higher education, after receiving an associate degree, and often do not complete the requirements for a baccalaureate degree even when they enroll in a 4-year institution;

"(3) Native American students are the most grossly, underrepresented of all American minorities in higher education, constituting one-half of 1 percent of all students, and 0.3 percent of those receiving degrees; and Hispanics comprise 3 percent of all students in higher education, with less than 3 percent receiving bachelors, masters, and Ph.D. degrees;

"(4) Native Hawaiians represent less than 5 percent of the population of Hawaii who hold a college degree; less than 25 percent of the traditional college-age population actually attends college, although in some of the Pacific Basin territories fewer than 20 percent (Northern Mariana Islands) actually complete more than a high school education, a single community college may be the only form of postsecondary education available on the island, and many teachers possess an associate's degree or less; and literacy rates in both English and the native language ranks far below national averages; and

"(5) the special problems of providing higher education opportunities for Puerto Ricans in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico require separate attention and different solutions than those which relate to Hispanics in the United States.

"(b) PURPOSE.—It is therefore the purpose of this Act to provide a set-aside to address the special needs of Hispanic, Native American, Asian American, and Pacific Basin students, when they constitute a significant portion of the institutional student population.

"RESERVATION FROM PART A APPROPRIATION

"SEC. 342. Of the sums appropriated under section 357(a)(1) for any fiscal year for part A, the Secretary shall make available for use for the purpose of such part—

"(D) $8,508,544 for fiscal year 1990; and
"(E) $8,933,971 for fiscal year 1991;
for Hispanic institutions, as defined in section 312(2)(C);

"(2) not less than—
"(A) $3,150,000 for fiscal year 1987;
"(B) $3,307,500 for fiscal year 1988;

"(D) $1,823,260 for fiscal year 1990; and
"(E) $1,914,422 for fiscal year 1991;
for institutions serving Native American Pacific Islanders, including Native Hawaiians, and serving Asian Americans residing in the Pacific Basin, including the State of Hawaii, as defined in section 312(2)(E).

"USES OF FUNDS

"SEC. 343. Funds made available under section 342 may be used for—

"(1) faculty development, including fellowship assistance to encourage qualified candidates to pursue masters and terminal degrees and return to the institution;

"(2) the acquisition of equipment and library resources which assist in instruction and research;

"(3) institutional partnerships which assist development and facilitate student transition to baccalaureate study, in the case of 2-year institutions;

"(4) student services, with special emphasis on retention and transition in the case of 2-year institutions;

"(5) management of institutional funds and funds authorized under title IV of this Act; and

"(2) set forth policies and procedures to ensure that Federal funds made available under this title for any fiscal year will be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the funds that would otherwise be made available for the purposes of section 311(b) or 323, and in no case supplant those funds;

"(3) set forth policies and procedures for evaluating the effectiveness in accomplishing the purpose of the activities for which a grant is sought under this title;

"(B) in the case of any development project which consists of several components (as described by the applicant pursuant to subparagraph (A)), a statement identifying those components which, if separately funded, would be sound investments of Federal funds and those components which would be sound investments of Federal funds only if funded under this title in conjunction with other parts of the development project (as specified by the applicant);

"(C) an evaluation by the applicant of the priority given any proposed project for which funds are sought in relation to any other projects for which funds are sought by the applicant under this title, and a similar evaluation regarding priorities among the components of any single proposed project (as described by the applicant pursuant to subparagraph (A));

"WAIVER AUTHORITY AND REPORTING REQUIREMENT

"SEC. 352. (a) WAIVER REQUIREMENTS; NEED-BASED ASSISTANCE STUDENTS.—The Secretary shall waive the requirements set forth in section 312(2)(A)(i)(I) in the case of an institution (1) which is extensively subsidized by the State in which it is located and charges low or no tuition; (2) which serves a substantial number of low- and middle-income students as a percentage of its total student population; (3) which is contributing substantially to increasing higher education opportunities for black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Alaskan Natives and Aleuts, and Native American Pacific Islanders, including Native Hawaiians, who are low-income individuals; or (4) which is substantially increasing higher educational opportunities for individuals in rural or other isolated areas which are unserved by postsecondary institutions.

"(b) WAIVER DETERMINATIONS; EXPENDITURES.—(1) The Secretary may waive the requirements set forth in section 312(2)(A)(ii) if the Secretary determines, based on persuasive evidence submitted by the institution, that the institution's failure to meet that criterion is due to factors which, when used in the determination of compliance with such criterion, distort such determination, and that the institution's designation as an eligible institution under part A is otherwise consistent with the purposes of such parts.

"(2) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress each year a report concerning the institutions which, although not satisfying the criterion contained in section 312(2)(A)(ii), have been determined to be eligible institutions under part A or Hispanic, Native American, Asian American, or Pacific Basin institutions under part D, as the case may be. Such report shall—

"(A) identify the factors referred to in paragraph (1) which were considered by the Secretary as factors that distorted the determination of compliance with section 312(2)(A) (i) and (ii); and

"(B) contain a list of each institution determined to be an eligible institution under part A including a statement of the reasons for each such determination.

"(c) WAIVER DETERMINATIONS; AUTHORITY AND ACCREDITATION.—The Secretary may waive the requirement set forth in section 312(2)(v) in the case of an institution—

"(1) located on or near an Indian reservation or a substantial population of Indians, if the Secretary determines that the waiver will substantially increase higher education opportunities appropriate to the needs of American Indians;

"(2) wherever located, if the Secretary determines that the waiver will substantially increase higher education opportunities appropriate to the needs of Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Asian Americans, or Pacific Islanders, including Native Hawaiians;

"(3) wherever located, if the Secretary determines that the waiver will substantially increase higher education opportunities appropriate to the needs of individuals living in rural areas, whose needs are for the most part unserved by other postsecondary education institutions;

"(4) wherever located, if the Secretary determines that the waiver will substantially increase higher education opportunities appropriate to the needs of low-income individuals; or

S. 1966. A bill to provide for efficient and equitable use of operating rights at congested airports, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

USE OF OPERATING RIGHTS AT CONGESTED AIRPORTS

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today that will prohibit the implementation of a regulation issued yesterday by the Department of Transportation. That rule would permit airlines to buy and sell valuable landing rights at the four busiest airports in this country. I believe this rule is the wrong policy at the wrong time—it should never get off the ground.

DOT's action yesterday came in the face of substantial congressional criticism. Members of both parties and both Houses had expressed serious concerns about the wisdom of transferring a Federal property license to private parties at no cost. Although I agree with DOT that something must be done to alleviate the problems at La Guardia, JFK, O'Hare, and Washington National, I cannot agree that our first try should include abandoning takeoff and landing privileges to the auction block.

These crowded airports face the problem of too little airport capacity and too much demand. This dilemma has been addressed in the past through airport scheduling committees made up of representatives of each airline using that particular airport. The scheduling committees, with explicit exemption from our antitrust laws, determine how takeoff and landing "slots" are allocated among airlines.

Unfortunately, for a variety of reasons including the potential issuance of a buy-sell rule, the scheduling committees have proven themselves unable to address effectively the allocation of slots to new airline entrants or the reallocation of slots among incumbent carriers. The committees have been unable to reach the required unanimous agreement on which airline gets to fly when. As a result, we have seen an underutilization of some slots which has denied the traveling public access to the full capacity of these airports.

In recognition of this limited Federal resource, airport takeoff and landing slots, the Department of Transportation has chosen to rely on marketplace forces to allocate the slots. I am convinced, however, that many questions about the impact of buy-sell on commercial air travel have yet to be answered. I am also convinced that a free market analogy is inappropriate when the Federal property right is given to some private entities at no cost while subsequent entrants into these limited markets will face costs of up to $750,000 per slot.

I do not advocate accepting the status quo. We should and must take steps to utilize completely the capacity at these airports. The legislation I am introducing today represents such a step. It offers us the opportunity to adopt a more reasonable approach to this thorny problem, without ending for all time the possibility of a buy-sell experiment.

My bill would require the Secretary of Transportation to issue two rules. The first would impose a "use-it-or-lose-it" requirement, meaning that if an airline is not using a slot a certain percentage of the time, the slot would be made available to an airline which would. This eliminates the incentive for a airline to "pocket" a slot in anticipation of future needs or a future right to sell the slot for profit.

The second rule would require DOT to develop a mechanism which would automatically reallocate slots where the scheduling committees are unable to reach agreement. This proposal provides each airline representative on a scheduling committee the incentive to accommodate the needs of new entrants and other competitors.

This legislation would also require the Secretary to repeal the rule issued yesterday.

I am convinced that sensible policy dictates that we try this two-step approach before, in the words of the Washington Post, "creating a significant cash asset for those airlines that already have won, at no cost, takeoff and landing rights." By taking these initial steps, DOT can provide air travelers access to the entire capacity of these crowded airports.

The solution to the deadlock at these airports does not lie in the creation of more serious problems. Among my concerns regarding buy-sell are these: It is good policy to allow private air carriers to obtain a public property right, such as an airport slot, at no cost? Is it equitable to provide such windfalls to incumbents exclusively, or almost exclusively? Assuming buy-sell is implemented, would not competition best be served by requiring that a significant number of existing slots—certainly more than the 5 percent maximum under the rule—be distributed initially to new entrants, or at least redistributed among incumbents, perhaps through a lottery or auction mechanism. How would buy-sell protect the legitimate rights of midsize communities to affordable air service? Wouldn't buy-sell, by putting a price on slots, a limited commodity, create a disincentive to produce additional airport capacity, because incumbents will be unwilling to see the value of their slots diluted? Doesn't converting slots into property rights invite controversy when the Federal Aviation Administration attempts to exercise reasonable control over slots?

I intend to explore these and other questions in a hearing in February. At that time, the Aviation Subcommittee can fully evaluate the potential impact of a buy-sell rule. My legislation provides the interim action necessary to protect the Federal interest in the fullest use of these airports.

I hope my colleagues will join me in this effort. The transformation of the federally provided privilege into a piece of private property will profoundly affect air travel. For those who doubt that statement, I offer the fact that, by the early 1990's, over 30 U.S. airports will require some type of slot allocation during the peak traffic periods. The course we set today will affect all of us, and it will affect us more directly each year.

Mr. President, what has been proposed is akin to holding the Oklahoma land rush but only telling a few people. The remaining homesteaders would then rely on the free market to allocate land for their homes, paying a high cost to the incumbent landholder who would receive an economic windfall. I urge my colleague to consider my legislation which will prohibit such inequity.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be inserted in the RECORD following my statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1966

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of Transportation and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) repeal any rule or regulation or rescind any order issued between December 1, 1985 and the date of enactment of this Act, and

(2) after the date of enactment of this Act, not promulgate any rule or regulation or issue any order, relating to High Density Traffic Airports designated as Subpart K of part 93 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (14 CFR 93.121 et seq.), that is inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 2. Consistent with aviation safety, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall, not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, provide by rule or otherwise that any domestic air carrier or commuter air carrier operating right (departure or arrival) regulated at High Density Traffic Airports in accordance with Subpart K of part 93 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (14 CFR 93.121 et seq.), hereinafter referred to as a "slot", which is substantially unused shall be recalled by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration for reallocation pursuant to section 3 of this Act.

SEC. 3. (a) Consistent with aviation safety, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall, not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, provide by rule or otherwise for a mechanism for the allocation and reallocation of domestic slots in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(b) The allocation and reallocation of slots (other than on a lottery basis pursuant to subsection (d) of this section) shall be made by a separate air carrier or commuter air carrier Scheduling Committee established for each of such High Density Traffic Airports. Each such Scheduling Committee shall be composed of a representative of each air carrier or commuter air carrier operating from such Airport, and a representative of each air carrier or commuter air carrier that desires to commence air carrier operations from such Airport within six months after the date of application for membership on such Scheduling Committee.

(c) The Scheduling Committee shall allocate and reallocate slots semi-annually, unless the Scheduling Committee unanimously agrees on another allocation interval.

(d) If a Scheduling Committee is unable to reach unanimous agreement on the allocation of slots, the Secretary shall, on a lottery basis, allocate—

(1) all new slots, voluntarily-returned slots, and unused slots; and

(2) a reasonable percentage of slots currently in use at such Airport.

The mechanism for such reallocation shall be adequate to ensure the opportunity for new entry, shall maintain essential air transportation (as defined in section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 App. U.S.C. 1389)), and shall protect the access rights of commuter carriers. In addition, the Administration of the Federal Aviation Administration shall employ a method for the recall of slots currently in use that ensures that no air carrier incurs the loss of an undue proportion of its slots currently in use.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of Transportation or the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall not, by rulemaking or otherwise, provide or permit the transfer of slots for consideration or in a manner inconsistent with this Act. In addition, the Secretary shall declare null and void any transfer of slots which occurred between December 1, 1985 and the date of enactment of this Act, if such transfer was for consideration or occurred in a manner inconsistent with this Act.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, what has gotten into the Secretary of Transportation? I've had great respect for her abilities and her handling of Federal transportation policies. But lately she seems to have become possessed with the notion that virtually everything in her department is for sale and should be unloaded at bargain basement prices.

Her latest proposal to allow the buying and selling of airport landing rights is one of the worst ideas I've heard in a long time. Right to the point, it amounts to a giveaway of valuable Federal assets.

When Secretary Dole came forth with her proposal to sell Conrail to Norfolk Southern, I lined up right behind her with my full support. I still support it, because it's in the best interests of the public and the transportation industry. It's also in the best interests of the Federal Government, which will receive a $1.2 billion purchase price.

Then the Secretary called and asked me to support her plan to sell National and Dulles Airports to a local authority for the grand total of $47 million. Sell the airports, she said, and the local authority could issue bonds to finance the badly needed improvements at the airports. This time I hesitated. Forty-seven million dollars? Why, the Grace Commission has estimated the airports to be worth at least $300 million. In addition, having been a governor, I know what it costs to issue bonds. I got out the calculator and figured out that it would cost more than $700 million to finance $250 million in improvements. The Congressional Budget Office supports me on this.

What's more, we have a $7 billion trust fund which was created for the expressed purpose of airport improvement. It would be far more sensible to take $250 million out of that fund, make the improvements, and be done with it. But no, says our Secretary. "Sell the airports! Get rid of 'em! At whatever the price! And if the State of Maryland objects, give them $36 million to keep their mouths shut."

I didn't think Secretary Dole could top that one, but I believe she's done it with this new buy/sell rule. This isn't merely a fire-sale of Federal assets, it's an outright giveaway.

If allowed to go into effect as planned on April 1, 1986, this rulemaking will relinquish FAA ownership of airport landing rights—commonly known as "slots"—to the air carriers that now hold them at the four airports restricted by the High Density Rule (Chicago O'Hare, Washington National, and LaGuardia and JFK in New York). Thus, the airlines that now hold those landing rights at no cost would be allowed to sell them and retain all proceeds.

Well, ho, ho, ho! Merry Christmas! It seems that Santa Claus has been making a list and checking it twice, and now the stockings of some in the airline industry are going to end up mighty full.

These slots are estimated to be worth close to $1 million apiece. They are public property rights which are properly held by the Federal Government. And I'm not going to stand by and watch the Department Transportation cede those rights to a few airlines which are fortunate enough to be holding them now.

This rule has been completed in direct defiance of a letter I and six other members of the Commerce Committee sent 2 weeks ago to Secretary Dole. In that letter, we strongly urged the Secretary to withhold the issuance of the final buy/sell rule until the Committee would have a chance to review it early next year.

Apparently, however, there's no stopping Secretary Santa on Christmas Eve. Within hours after our letter was sent, the elves at DOT and OMB cranked into high gear and worked overtime to complete the buy/sell proposal and make it effective.

It's time to come back to reality and end the fantasy world at DOT.

Very simply, this legislation, which I am pleased to join Senator KASSEBAUM in sponsoring, would repeal any rule allowing the buying and selling of airport slots, as well as prohibit the future imposition of such a rule. It would direct the Secretary of Transportation to instead issue rules requiring carriers either to "use or lose" the operating rights they currently hold. This would end the hoarding of slots, a practice which has hampered the access of new entrants to these four airports. Finally, this legislation would direct the Secretary to impose a deadlock-breaking mechanism on the scheduling committees which currently allocate the slots among carriers at each of these airports.

If Congress doesn't act quickly to stop the buy/sell rule from going into effect, we will be allowing the administration to severely distort the aviation marketplace by allowing the "haves" to gain tens of millions of dollars in windfall profits, while the "have-nots" get nothing.

In addition, there is the question of what effect this rulemaking would have on air carrier service to the smaller and medium-sized markets. If a carrier had to pay for its access to National Airport, for example, what would keep it from flying only the most lucrative, long-haul, high density routes where the rate of return would be high enough to cover these new costs?

Finally, we must not forget the fact that while this rule currently would apply to only four high density airports, the potential of its ultimate impact is considerable. The FAA is currently considering plans that would expand the high density rule, thereby limiting access, to some 32 airports within the next 5 years. Thus, a buy/sell rule could significantly alter the service patterns at not only these airports, but at every other city in this country that has connecting airline service.

Secretary Dole and the administration have left us no choice but to introduce this legislation and work for its quick approval by the Congress. It is incumbent upon us to draw the line and prevent this ridiculous divestiture of public property from being implemented. For if we do not, who knows what else Santa has in her bag?

By Mr. DURENBERGER (for himself and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 1967. A bill to amend the Toxic Substances Control Act to protect the environment and human health from adverse effects caused by the release of genetically engineered micro-organisms into the environment, to promote the safe use of genetically engineered micro-organisms, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

BIOSAFETY ACT

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I am introducing today a bill to encourage the development of an environmentally safe genetic engineering industry. The proposal is straightforward—it would require a review and approval by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency before a genetically engineered microorganism can be released into the environment or used in a manufacturing process.

We need a viable genetic engineering industry in this country. There is no question in my mind that innovations in genetic engineering will bring enormous social benefits, and that we can achieve these benefits without suffering adverse health or environmental effects. However, in order to flourish, this fledgling industry needs an element of certainty in its future. Companies need the assurance of a reasonably stable regulatory regime, one that is based on a solid statutory framework with consistent requirements that are equitably applied. Facing a regulatory future clouded by uncertainty, companies will find it more difficult to attract capital, and innovation will be hindered.

Mr. President, if we want to develop a viable genetic engineering industry, we must develop a safe industry. We must assure that careless or irresponsible individuals do not jeopardize the industry by making mistakes at this critical stage. Frankly, Mr. President, loss of public confidence is one of the worst things that could happen to this industry. That is why a regulatory framework that will help assure safe development of the technology and provide regulatory consistency is so important.

Mr. President, I want to stress that this bill is not an expression of distrust of the industry or of the Environmental Protection Agency. By all accounts, both are proceeding responsibly. The Agency has announced its intention to regulate using its existing authorities, and the industry appears to be cooperating. However, for reasons that I will explain in a moment, I believe that existing statutory authorities, while they do exist, are inappropriate for this new industry. In the long run, it will be better, I believe, to go ahead and make the necessary statutory improvements. This bill proposes to do that, to strengthen statutory authority while according enough flexibility to adjust to a developing industry.

For the most part, this bill, which would add a new section to the Toxic Substances Control Act [TSCA] is intended to clarify and expand authorities that the Administrator already has under that act. The Administrator has asserted that the definition of "chemical substance" in TSCA is broad enough to include micro-organisms. Therefore, the Administrator can review genetically engineered micro-organisms under the premanufacture notification program designed for review of new chemicals. I agree with the Administrator that he has this authority. But that only raises the next question, which is just as important: Are the premanufacture notice provisions of TSCA, which were crafted with toxic chemicals in mind, adequate and appropriate for assessing the risk to health and the environment that might be caused by the release of genetically engineered micro-organisms? I believe there is room for improvement in this regard, and that is the purpose of this bill. It is intended to replace certain aspects of the TSCA premanufacture notification system with a separate system of review of genetically engineered micro-organisms under TSCA, with information requirements and decision criteria that are more appropriate for micro-organisms.

Mr. President, there is every indication that in the next few years we will see tremendous advances in the genetic engineering of micro-organisms. Genetic information from entirely different organisms will be combined to create in the laboratory micro-organisms with new physiological capabilities or combinations of capabilities. For example, research is underway on bacteria to degrade oil spills and residues of toxic chemicals, to leach minerals from the soil, to accelerate the decomposition of plant matter, and to alter fundamental soil nutrient cycling. A recent survey of genetic engineering research supported by the Department of Agriculture identified 87 projects that are expected to involve the release of genetically engineered organisms within the next 5 years. Of these, over 20 appear to involve micro-organisms, including an array of pathogenic bacteria and viruses.

Of course this survey did not cover the vast amount of research going on in the private sector and in many universities.

We can conclude, I believe, that there will be many releases of entirely novel bacteria, viruses, and other micro-organisms during the next few years. In the great majority of these cases, these micro-organisms will be highly beneficial to society while not causing any adverse effects on human health or ecological processes. But we should have learned from our experience with the organic chemicals industry that social progress can come with a high price tag. In some ways, risks from genetically engineered micro-organisms are more troubling than risks from chemicals, because organisms have the capacity to reproduce and, in many instances, to exchange genetic material with other organisms. Thus, if a mistake is made, the problem can grow bigger over time. Put another way, release of a small amount of a toxic chemical often will have a local and transient effect. Release of a dangerous micro-organism could lead to permanent and expanding damage to the environment.

The bill that I am introducing today represents a starting point for constructing a review system that will allow the use of genetically engineered micro-organisms that can be demonstrated to be safe, while restricting those that may be dangerous to man or the environment.

How serious is the risk from this new technology? No one knows for sure, precisely because it is so new. The closest analogy to the introduction of new micro-organisms from a laboratory is the introduction of new organisms from other countries. In both cases, the ecosystem into which the organisms is introduced must respond in some way. In most cases, the exotic species will be ill adapted to its new habitat and will die out. In some cases, however, the new habitat may be amenable, in which case the introduced organism will survive, reproduce, and perhaps spread to other areas. We have seen this phenomena occur with Dutch Elm disease, starlings, and many exotic weeds.

The bill that I am introducing today would require persons intending to release a genetically engineered micro-organism for experimental purposes to obtain a permit to do so. Similarly, a permit would be required before a person could distribute a genetically engineered micro-organism intended for release by other persons. In each case, the Administrator could establish permit conditions and restrictions to assure that adverse effects do not occur.

The bill describes base line information and assessments that must be submitted by permit applicants. These are modeled on the "points to consider" approach to assessment developed by the EPA and the Recombinant Advisory Committee of the National Institutes of Health. The information requirements are described in general terms to allow the flexibility necessary to accommodate this rapidly changing technology. The Administrator is authorized and expected to develop regulations to articulate further his information needs as more experience is gained.

The bill also requires a permit to use a genetically engineered micro-organism for manufacturing purposes. The purpose of this permit is to assure that use of such micro-organisms will not have an adverse effect on human health or the environment if released from the manufacturing equipment.

Mr. President, many ecologists who have examined the implications of this new technology are concerned. In hearings and published reports, they have pointed to possible adverse ecological consequences that could result from releasing genetically engineered micro-organisms into the environment. What is needed is a regulatory framework that is tailored to the specific information needs and assessments needs of this new kind of environmental manipulation. I believe this bill provides such a framework.

But this bill addresses only part of the problem. There are other issues that are not included here, but which should play a part in discussions of further legislative proposals. One is the issue of good laboratory practice and good manufacturing practice. Consideration should be given to requiring that individuals performing genetic engineering experiments comply with containment and safety guidelines like those developed by the National Institutes of Health. Consideration should be given to similar guidelines governing use of genetically engineered micro-organisms in manufacturing processes.

Another area for discussion is the development of international harmony of regulation in this area. Within a short while, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development will release its regulatory recommendations. This document will help assure that countries do not use regulatory regimes as nontariff trade barriers hindering international commerce. U.S. companies need assurance that their products will be treated fairly in international trade.

Mr. President, I believe this bill will help define an agenda for consideration of needed legislation. I do not expect that it is without flaws. I am sure it can be improved, and I invite comments from interested persons on how to do so.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill and a brief description of its contents be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DESCRIPTION OF BILL

The bill adds a new section 32 to the Toxic Substances Control Act for the purposes of regulating the release of genetically engineered micro-organisms.

Subsection (a) describes the relationship between the new section 32 and existing section 5 of the TSCA, which is the authority EPA now is relying upon to regulate the environmental release of genetically engineered micro-organisms. It also describes the activities for which a permit must be obtained and the authorities of the Administrator to issue permits and to waive permit requirements.

Paragraph (1) states that the release of these organisms would be regulated under section 32 rather than the premanufacture notification component of section 5.

Paragraph (2) defines the three activities for which a permit must be obtained. These are experimental release, distribution in commerce for purposes of release, and use for manufacturing purposes.

Paragraph (3) authorizes the Administrator to issue permits and gives the Administrator broad authority to include conditions and restrictions in a permit.

Paragraph (4) places the burden of proof on the applicant and prohibits the Administrator from issuing a permit if he determines that the activity authorized by permit may cause an adverse effect on human health or the environment.

Paragraph (5) authorizes permit revocation or modification.

Paragraph (6) authorizes the Administrator to waive the requirements of this section upon a determination that doing so will not cause an adverse effect on human health or the environment. The purpose of this paragraph is to provide a mechanism to avoid unnecessary review of safe micro-organisms and activities, thereby reducing the regulatory burden of both the industry and the EPA.

Subsections (b), (c), and (d) establish the information and assessment requirements for the three types of activities for which a permit is required.

For experimental releases, the applicant must describe the genetically engineered micro-organism, the organisms from which it was created, and the type of genetic engineering method used. The application also must describe the intended release experiment and submit the results of any tests that have been performed to evaluate the potential for environmental effects and genetic stability. Also, the application is to include an assessment of potential adverse effects.

The requirements in subsection (c) regarding permits for distribution in commerce are similar, but stress intended uses and the intended locations and manner of release. A similar assessment is required.

A permit under this section is obtained by the manufacturer of the micro-organism, but the permit conditions apply to purchasers and users as well. Therefore, the permit establishes the authorized conditions of use as needed to assure safety.

Subsection (d) defines the information and assessment requirements affecting the use of genetically engineered micro-organisms for manufacturing purposes. The application must contain information on the genetically engineered micro-organism and the organisms from which it was created, as well as a description of the manufacturing process including measures to prevent release. The assessment must consider the potential for adverse effects from intentional or accidental release from the manufacturing equipment.

Subsection (e) authorizes the Administrator to require applicants to submit additional information or perform specific tests when additional information is needed for an assessment.

Subsection (f) clarifies that the new section 32 is supplementary to the other provisions of TSCA and does not affect any TSCA authorities not specifically referred to.

Subsection (g) gives the Administrator the discretion to regulate under TSCA genetically engineered micro-organisms that otherwise could be regulated under the Federal Insecticide Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA).

Subsection (h) provides general authority to promulgate regulations needed to implement this section.

Subsection (i) contains definitions for the purposes of this new section of TSCA.

Subsection (j) provides a statutory authorization for the recently created Biotechnology Science Coordinating Committee, the announcement of which appeared in the Federal Register on November 14 of this year. The bill follows the announced structure and function of the Committee, and is not intended to redirect the Committee from the function ascribed to it.●

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 97—REQUESTING THE PRESIDENT TO NEGOTIATE A NORTH AMERICAN TREATY ON AIR POLLUTION

Mr. BAUCUS (for himself, Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. DODD, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. HART, Mr. HUMPHREY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. PELL, Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. BINGAMAN, and Mr. LEAHY) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

S. CON. RES. 97

Whereas air pollution is a serious concern throughout all of North America, threatening public health, forest resources, manmade structures, and aquatic ecosystems;

Whereas air pollution emanating in Canada, Mexico, and the United States moves across borders and may affect areas great distances from the source of the emissions;

Whereas there is a need for an effective international institution to resolve conflicts concerning transboundary air pollution concerns;

Whereas the Boundary Waters Treaty has provided an effective institution to address transboundary water pollution concerns between Canada and the United States;

Whereas the United States, Canada, and Mexico have mutual environmental concerns regarding water quantity, water quality, and air quality;

Whereas there is a need for uniform monitoring standards and the establishment of an ongoing North American monitoring network;

Whereas there is a need for a sharing of research data and an exchange of ideas over how to protect air quality;

Whereas there is a need for uniform air quality standards to provide comparable protection and protocols to assure protection of North American air quality;

Whereas there is a need for increased understanding of health effects caused by air pollution in North America;

Whereas there is a need to apply equal standards to facilities and products which produce air pollution;

Whereas there is a need to protect existing air quality as well as to seek and implement ways to reduce existing levels of international air pollution; and

Whereas Canada and the United States, and Mexico and the United States, have entered into discussions over concerns about transboundary transport of air pollution: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that the President should institute negotiations with Canada and Mexico for the purpose of concluding a tripartite agreement—

(1) to reduce projected and existing levels of air pollution;

(2) to create an institutional framework to control sources of transboundary air pollution;

(3) to establish a North American air quality monitoring network;

(4) to encourage increased research and dissemination of information on air pollution control strategies; and

(5) to develop uniform minimum levels of protection for public health and the environment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today I am introducing a concurrent resolution calling for the negotiation of an Air Pollution Treaty to cover all of North America.

Evidence continues to grow that air pollution and, in particular, acid rain is causing a major problem throughout all of North America. Canada continues to press for greater action to address existing transboundary air pollution. Many throughout the United States have raised their voices in concern.

The President and the Prime Minister of Canada entered into historic talks on March 17, 1985, to study ways to address acid rain pollution. At this meeting, the Prime Minister for Canada, Mr. Mulroney, stated

> We have broken a 3-year deadlock by agreeing to our common and shared responsibility to preserve our common environment.

President Reagan stated:

> It is very significant that our two countries should work together on all matters of environment because entrusted to us is the care of a very unique continent and a very beautiful continent.

This meeting was a significant beginning. There is a need to build on this beginning.

While these discussions are to address problems caused by existing levels of air pollution, there are no institutions or agreements on how to address new air pollution sources.

At the same time Canada and the United States were beginning talks to consider pollution problems along our northern border, the United States was expressing concerns to Mexico over new air pollution sources south of the border.

Mexico is now preparing to open a new smelter with no pollution controls. The Nacozari smelter is expected to begin operation in the near future.

The Nacozari smelter will be the single largest source of sulfur dioxide pollution in North America. It is projected to emit 550,000 tons of SO_2 per year into the atmosphere. Pollution can be expected to fall out from the Mexican border all the way into Canada.

The United States requested that the Nacozari smelter not begin operation until permanent emission controls have been installed, but the Mexican Government rejected this plea. Without an air pollution agreement, there was little we could do.

There is a need for a formal mechanism to assure that public health and the environment is protected from transboundary air pollution. The United States should take the leadership and immediately call for the commencement of trilateral talks to establish a North American Treaty on Air Pollution.

The United States and Canada have a useful model in place to address transboundary water pollution. This model could provide a guide for how to address air pollution. Its scope could include all of North America.

The Boundary Waters Treaty has been an effective mechansim to address transboundary water pollution since the beginning of this century. It provides for a zero standard of pollution. It is a model of international cooperation.

The International Joint Commission under the Boundary Waters Treaty has proven itself to be a useful institutional mechanism. A similar institutional mechanism is needed for air.

The pending threat of air pollution from Mexico threatens all of the Western United States and highlights the critical need for a North American treaty.

We have had great difficulty coming to grips with existing levels of pollution. A formal mechanism addressing these problems can look for new and innovative ways to address existing levels of air pollution. It can insure that future air pollution problems are not inadvertently being created.

There is tremendous potential for development of additional coal-fired generation capacity in close proximity to borders. Long-range transport concerns continue to grow.

This week, Canada is embarking on a major acid rain control program. Emission levels from four major smelter and coal-fired electrical generation facilities will be reduced 94 percent by 1994.

The Inco smelter, the largest point source in North America with current emissions of 728,000 tons per year, will be reduced to 765,000 tons by 1994.

Canada is demonstrating a willingness to face up to its responsibility for existing air pollution problems. This action will reduce acid loading in the Adirondacks and the Northeastern United States by 5 to 10 percent.

This unilateral action on the part of Canada is a commendable first step to address the acid rain problem.

The United States needs to join with Canada and take similar steps.

But we can ill-afford to play a zero-sum game as other new sources come on line throughout North America.

The President needs to build upon the ongoing talks with Canada and Mexico.

The stage is set for action with Canada. An aggressive posture needs to be taken with Mexico.

The need, the opportunity, and the timing for the development of a North American Treaty on Air Pollution is right. The President needs to seize the initiative and move forward.

Action is needed now. Talks should be undertaken immediately and should involve the United States, Canada, and Mexico. These talks should lead to the establishment of an international treaty to reduce projected and existing levels of air pollution.

This treaty should provide an institutional framework in which to consider these types of disputes. Air quality monitoring, increased dissemination of research, and uniform minimum technologies and levels of protection for public health and the environment should be included in this agreement.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am pleased to join Senator BAUCUS and others in sponsoring this concurrent resolution calling for the negotiation of a North American treaty for the control of air pollution and acid rain.

Events of the past several days have highlighted the need for a commitment from the Reagan administration to bring about significant reductions in acid rain, both in this country and in Canada.

At a hearing in the Environment and Public Works Committee last week, EPA Administrator Lee Thomas indicated that at least 3 more years of research will be needed before the administration will consider supporting a program of controls over acid rain. While I do not oppose continued research, the information we have today confirms that acid rain is a serious environmental problem that places our lakes and forests at great risk.

At the same time that the Reagan administration is delaying needed action to control acid rain, the Canadian Government is moving aggressively to address the problem. Just today, the Province of Ontario announced a specific program to cut acid rain levels in half by 1994. This program is expected to be matched by other Canadian Provinces.

The Ontario acid rain control program will benefit Ontario, but it will also benefit the United States. As a direct result of the Ontario action, acid rain levels in my home State of Maine are expected to decline substantially. Pollutant reductions in other New England States and the Adirondacks are also expected.

While Ontario's program will bring about drastic reductions of acid rain related air pollutants, these steps will not be sufficient to protect the great majority of lakes throughout the Province. Half the acid rain in Ontario comes from emission sources inside the United States. Protection of aquatic and forest systems in Ontario and the rest of Canada will require significant reductions of emissions here in the United States.

In only the past few days, we have heard the Reagan administration refuse to develop even a modest program to deal with acid rain in this country and Canada. And, we have heard the Ontario government announce a dramatic new initiative to control air pollutants related to acid rain.

I cannot conceive of more convincing circumstances to support improved coordination of Canadian and United States air pollution control programs. We have an obligation to take prompt action to develop acid rain control programs to complement the Canadian initiative.

A North American Treaty on Air Pollution would build on the discussions which have occurred to date. And, a treaty would provide a forum for resolving disputes and assuring the on-going coordination of air quality monitoring, research, and control programs.

The exchange of acid rain related pollutants is our most serious international air pollution problem. But, the potential for development of utility and other facilities close to our northern and southern borders is substantial. Further, we now have a better understanding of the long range transport of pollutants. For these reasons, we need to include Mexico, and well as Canada, in a North American Air Pollution Treaty.

The importance of including Mexico in such a treaty is illustrated by the case of the Nacozari smelter, which is expected to begin operation shortly just south of the border. Despite U.S. objections, the smelter will have few pollution controls. Air pollution form the smelter is expected to fall in this country and as far north as Canada.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join in support of this important resolution.

Mr. BURDICK. In the past, the Canadian Government has severely criticized United States efforts and achievements in reducing SO_2 emissions. However, since the election of Brian Mulroney as Prime Minister, there have been indications that Canada is adopting a new and more rational approach in its acid rain negotiations with the United States. In fact, in February of this year, Mr. Mulroney pointedly stated that Canada needs to "clean up its own act first" before expecting the United States to impose stronger American controls. He also stated that Canadians must stop blaming the United States exclusively "for a problem which is not insignificantly of our own creation and about which we have done very little."

Canada is moving in the direction of "cleaning up its own act." The new Government has adopted a major environmental control program to reduce emissions of SO_2 and NO_2, which are thought by many scientists to form acid rain. The Canadian Government wants to reduce SO_2 emissions in eastern Canada by 50 percent by 1994.

Major elements of the Canadian plan are:

First, to reduce SO_2 emissions east of the Saskatchewan/Manitoba border by 1994 to no more than 2.3 million tons.

Second, to require unleaded gas in all 1988 car models to reduce NO_2 emissions by 45 percent by the end of the century.

Third, to provide $150 million to assist the smelting industry in paying for pollution control devices.

Fourth, to promote research by providing $25 million for improved smelting technology and $70 million for clean coal technology.

Fifth, to monitor acid rain effects under an $18 million annual program.

Sixth, to continue its role in the international community by seeking cooperative agreements on acid rain control.

Under this new effort, Canada will now begin to match America's efforts made over the past 15 years. Passage of the Clean Air Act has resulted in reducing SO_2 and NO_2 emissions by 26 percent, and strict car emissions standards has dramatically reduced NO_2.

Success has been linked to a combination of several measures—increased use of fuel substitution, expanded clean coal technology, and installation and operation of 119 scrubbers at utility power generation plants across the country. The cost to American consumers, businesses, and industries of meeting the requirements of the Clean Air Act has been estimated to exceed $25 billion a year. Canada should consider adding to its acid rain program the implementation of scrubbers on its coal utility plants.

If Canada's new program succeeds, and coupled with the continued reductions in SO_2 and NO_2 emissions that will be achieved in the United States under the existing Clean Air Act, their program should achieve substantially reduced acid rain on our common border. In working together, both countries should see great improvement in the hazardous threat to environment by acid rain.

While the United States has made gains in curbing air pollution, it cannot halt its efforts. This administration needs to assess its policy of conducting more research on the causes of acid rain against the need to develop and implement a comprehensive national program. On December 11, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee held an oversight hearing on the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Program. The taskforce has been working since 1980 to develop and implement a comprehensive national program. The administration should use the information gained from such research, monitoring, and assessment activities to develop a national program.

In order to continue to do our fair share, the United States needs a stronger approach on acid rain. A North American treaty would establish a process whereby the United States, Canada, and Mexico could combine their efforts to prevent further deterioration of North America's environment. I would encourage the administration to recommend a national program and approach the acid rain problem on a continental basis.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to join with my good friend and colleague from Montana to cosponsor this Senate Concurrent Resolution, which calls on the President to negotiate a North American Treaty on Air Pollution. Surely, there are few ideas that are more self-evidently good ones.

Mr. President, the only acid rain legislation we have got is the Acid Precipitation Act, which I introduced on September 14, 1979. My purpose was to establish some facts about this matter—facts that we were sorely lacking at that time. Even then, however, we knew enough to suspect that long-range transport of airborne pollutants meant no one country could solve the acid rain problem on its own. In enacting legislation that became Public Law 96-294, Congress found that "acid precipitation resulting from other than natural sources * * * could affect areas distant from sources and thus involve issues of national and international policy." And the comprehensive plan for the next decade's research was to include programs for "effecting cooperation in acid precipitation research and development programs * * * with other sovereign nations having a commonality of interest."

We have had cooperative research with Canada—although not enough. We have discussed our concerns with both Canada and Mexico—although without sufficient results. And most recently, we have named the most capable Mr. Drew Lewis as a special envoy to discuss our concerns at the highest level with a representative of the Government of Canada. But Mr. Lewis has yet to provide us with an indication that the United States and Canada will be able to resolve all of their concerns about transboundary air pollution in such discussions—and, with the opening of the new smelter in Nacozari, Mexico, our attention surely ought to be turned toward the south as well.

Mr. President, we know how difficult it is for each country to make reductions in sulfur dioxide emissions on its own. While our own emissions have declined since controls on the so-called criteria pollutants were required by the Clean Air Act, we have failed to take simple and direct action to reduce these emissions by promulgating strict regulations to control "tall stacks."

Canada is justly concerned by the sulfurous emissions we send northward, as now we are beginning to worry about emissions sent northward to us by Mexican smelters. It is long past time for all concerned to realize that a unified approach for the continent as a whole is the only option for a truly successful acid rain program. And it is long past time for us to begin pursuing one.

I commend Mr. BAUCUS for his resolution, and I support it wholeheartedly.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I commend Senator BAUCUS for authoring this resolution requesting the President to negotiate a North American Treaty on Air Pollution. I am pleased to join many of my colleagues from the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee in cosponsoring this resolution, and look forward to taking up the issue of acid rain and other transboundary air pollution issues early next year.

I am also pleased to note that a number of members of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee have joined as cosponsors of this resolution. Their role as shapers of U.S. policy regarding North American issues is of utmost importance in helping to resolve the stalemate that we find ourselves in with respect to transboundary air pollution.

Mr. President, there could not be a more appropriate time to call upon the President to negotiate a North American Air Pollution Treaty. It is almost 6 years now since President Carter entered into a Memorandum of Intent with Canada. The MOI set out a course of bilateral cooperation in research and in negotiating a treaty for controlling transboundary air pollution. The MOI also stated as a policy that the two countries should work to reduce their emissions of sulfur and nitrogen oxides while negotiating the treaty.

There are few words that can adequately express the exasperation that the Canadians, and those of us in Congress concerned with controlling these pollutants, have felt over the last several years. The research efforts under the MOI were thwarted by those in the administration that would like to argue that not enough is known about the causes and effects of acid rain to justify more stringent controls. The treaty negotiations fumbled when Canada offered to cut its emissions by 50 percent for a similar reduction in emissions generated in the United States. In the meantime, emissions have been on the rise in the United States and in Mexico, where a smelter, financed by the International Monetary Fund, will begin operation without pollution controls and assume the dubious distinction as the largest single emitter of sulfur dioxide in North America.

Mr. President, we have the opportunity to turn the debate around on controlling transboundary air pollution. We must join with our colleagues in Canada and Mexico to negotiate in earnest a North American Air Pollution Treaty. The first opportunity will come early next year, when the envoys appointed by the President and Prime Minister are expected to make a recommendation for action before the next bilateral summit with Canada. In the interim, we must show good faith in these negotiations by reducing harmful emissions of sulfur and nitrogen oxides.

Mr. President, we should follow Canada's impressive example. This week, Canada will announce the details of the final leg of their program to reduce sulfur dioxide by 50 percent. This is not an impossible goal for other industrial countries. Several European countries, including France and West Germany, have announced plans to reduce emissions by 50 percent. The USSR has joined the so-called 30 percent emissions reduction club, and pledged in a recent environmental summit with EPA Administrator Lee Thomas to work on solutions to the acid rain problem plaguing both our countries.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this important resolution, and join in the effort to reduce transboundary air pollution for the sake of all North America.

SENATE RESOLUTION 276—RELATING TO THE REHIRING OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS

Mr. LAUTENBERG (for himself, Mr. DIXON, Mr. SIMON, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. DODD, and Mr. MOYNIHAN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

S. RES. 276

Whereas safe and efficient air transportation is essential to the economy of the nation;

Whereas the margin of safety in the skies is jeopardized by a serious experience drain in the air traffic control system;

Whereas the total number of air traffic controllers is significantly below the level employed in 1981; and

Whereas at a time of rising air travel, the air traffic controller system is at 59 percent of full performance level as of September 30, 1985 as contrasted to 82 percent in 1981 and is subject to further experience drain due to expected retirement: Now, Therefore, be it Resolved, That

(1) it is the sense of the Senate that the Executive Branch should employ the quickest and most cost efficient means to return the air traffic control system to pre-strike experience levels; and

(2) the Executive Branch should, to the extent required, rehire those experienced air traffic controllers fired from the Federal Aviation Administration in 1981, who meet standards for employment in the Federal civil service, necessary to fulfill this objective.

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, today I am submitting a sense of the Senate resolution regarding our Nation's air traffic control system. This resolution is cosponsored by Senators DIXON, SIMON, BRADLEY, KERRY, DODD, and MOYNIHAN. The thrust of the resolution is that, in order to return this Nation's aviation safety program to the experience level which existed in 1981, the executive branch should immediately rehire, on a selective basis, those air traffic controllers fired in the aftermath of the PATCO strike.

In 1981, Mr. President, the FAA employed 16,250 air traffic controllers. When the PATCO union went on strike, President Reagan fired 11,700 of those controllers. Of the 16,250 controllers employed in 1981, 82 percent were full performance level controllers capable of performing a variety of tasks in air traffic control facilities around the country.

Administrator Donald Engen of the FAA testified before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation that the administration's goal for restoring the FAA to prestrike levels was to have 14,306 controllers on duty by the end of fiscal year 1985. On September 30, 1985, the FAA was employing only 14,000 controllers, because the washout rate among new recruits was higher than anticipated.

Mr. President, the FAA claims that they can handle air traffic that is running 10 percent above 1981 levels with fewer air traffic controllers. In addition, air traffic controllers are being checked out in 2 years when it used to take 4 or 5 years to fully train a controller. Supervisors continue to control traffic at the expense of the supervisory duties.

Even if one believes that more traffic can be handled with fewer controllers or that controllers trained for 2 years are as capable as those trained for 4 or 5, one would still have to conclude that the FAA faces a critical experience shortfall.

In 1981, 82 percent of the controller work force was at full performance level. As of September 30, only 59 percent of current controllers were at that level. There are many controllers eligible for retirement in the near future. Because the workload and morale in the system has not, according to the FAA's own reports, improved since 1981, these controllers are expected to retire. These retirements can only make the experience drain worse.

Mr. President, the rehiring of air traffic controllers fired in 1981 would be an act of compassion. After all, it has been years since the strike and these people have paid dearly in terms of the disruption to their families, the loss of their income, and pension rights. But they are not the only ones who have suffered. The traveling public has suffered along with them in terms of an eroding margin of safety and inconvenient delays for business and pleasure travelers. It is time the former controllers and the traveling public got a little relief.

The sponsors of this resolution are not contending that the 1981 strike was legal or that the President was wrong to take the action he did. We are contending that whatever the validity of the action in 1981, it is time to bring these people back to work. The President has made his point. It is no longer a time to exercise power; it is time to exercise wisdom and compassion. It is time to exercise common sense.

Mr. President, the Nation invested heavily in the training of a valuable pool of talent that is badly needed at this time. The quickest and most cost-effective way to return the air traffic control system to full performance levels comparable to 1981 is the immediate rehiring of some of those fired on a selective basis.

Just prior to Thanksgiving, Mr. President, I met with a group of former and present air traffic controllers. I had been told that the present controllers did not want the strikers back. Administrator Engen told me that there would be chaos in the towers if rehiring occurred. But present controllers told me that there is chaos in the towers and the way to eliminate it is to get as many people back to work as soon as possible. My experience in meeting with controllers is confirmed by the Jones report, commissioned by the FAA, which found little opposition and some support for rehiring.

Mr. President, the cost of losing the margin of safety in our skies is not measured in man-hours or other bureaucratic measurements, it is measured in the loss of human lives; 1985 has been the worst year on record for commercial aviation worldwide. We have vitally important work to be done and an available pool of talent ready, willing, and able to do it. Let us put the past behind us and get this job done.●

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, this morning, Senator LAUTENBERG, Senator DIXON, a few others, and I have introduced a resolution regarding the air safety situation. We do face a serious problem. It is still safer to fly by air in this country than it is to drive on the street, but it is not as safe as it should be. Air traffic is growing. Our air traffic management system is frankly not where it should be.

The Nation's air traffic control system is flirting with disaster. Air traffic is growing, our air traffic management system is not up to speed, and there is mounting evidence that the safety margin is suffering deep erosion.

That leaves us with three realistic options: First, increase the capacity of the air safety system; second, impose limits on air traffic; or third, risk the consequences of continued reduction in the margin of safety we all have taken for granted in American civil aviation. Obviously, I think the latter two are not realistic options. The sensible course is the first option: To boost the capacity of the system by raising staffing and experience levels in the control centers and in the airport towers to adequate levels, and to waste no time doing that.

To reach that goal, it is time to consider rehiring some of the best-qualified controllers among those fired during the air traffic controllers' strike of 1981.

I supported President Reagan's decision to fire the controllers on August 3, 1981, when their union implemented an illegal strike. While more could have been done to acknowledge and address the controllers' valid concerns about stressful working conditions, once the strike took place the President made the right decision to fire them. We cannot tolerate strikes against the Federal Government. But now 4 years have passed. Those who lost their jobs have lost much more in pay and retirement benefits than they would have paid in court fines for their missteps. If we rehire some of them, no one would get the idea that you can strike against the Federal Government and go unpunished.

Before the strike there were 13,000 fully qualified controllers. Today there are only 8,000 fully qualified controllers among the 14,300 who are on the job. Fewer fully qualified controllers and an experience level that is far lower—that is a formula for declining air safety.

In fact, Mr. President, that is just what we are reaping today. Near-misses are gaining in frequency. In 1984 the total reached 592, the highest in the history of the airline industry. For the first 7 months of this year, near-misses already were 40 percent ahead of last year's total.

Can we afford that narrowing margin of error? The answer should be obvious.

Rehiring some of the former controllers is no panacea, but it is one of several realistic steps we should consider. The FAA clearly has not been completely realistic in its assessment of the current air safety situation.

The agency has resisted acknowledging that there are too few controllers, too little experience, and too little supervision in the air control centers, and in some of our airport towers as well. But the pilots of the Nation know it, and their association has spoken our firmly of their concerns. In recent days a newspaper's opinion survey of airline pilots underscored this consensus.

FAA does not have any office solely responsible for collecting and analyzing—for safety purposes—the near-miss information the agency generates. The FAA this year was found to have underreported its near-miss figures. In what I fear is an increasing pattern, one controller in the Midwest has told my office of several unreported incidents at his facility.

The staffing and experience problem needs immediate attention. At the Chicago Center in Aurora, IL, for example, which handled 2 million flights last year in the Midwest, the number of controllers is down from 525 in 1981 to some 360 today, even though the center handles 6 percent more traffic daily than it did in 1981. Controllers at Aurora must rely on outdated equipment, much of it is so old it uses vacuum tubes instead of transistors.

Only in recent weeks has the agency begun to address that concern. And as at similar facilities, some of the most experienced professionals are moved from supervisory posts to controller posts because of staff shortages, and under that kind of arrangement, supervision suffers.

Recently the Aurora facility logged a record 5 controller errors in 18 hours, resulting in 10 planes flying too close to each other.

For much too long the FAA has not publicly acknowledged, let alone acted on, this serious staffing and experience problem. The traveling public should commend Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole for breaking this pattern through her recent announcement that FAA intends to phase in 960 new controllers over the 2 years.

That is a welcome change, but the air traffic control system desperately needs experience just as much as it needs more adequate staffing. Some refresher training would be needed for the older hands, but they would be fully on the job sooner, and the taxpayers would save some of the money that would be used to train fresh recruits. We would get some of that valuable experience back behind the radar screens.

Other experienced voices in the airline industry, including the Airline Pilots Association, the Air Transport Association, and recently the chairman and president of USAir, have called for increased air traffic controller staffing in the interest of public safety and improving the performance of our airtraffic control system. Edwin I. Colodny of USAir wrote in his airline's in-flight magazine for November, "• • • the airlines and Congress are concerned that the system is not up to the increasing demands being placed upon it. Safe operation of the system is the primary objective of the FAA, an objective we all share."

The FAA is not adequately addressing the question of air controller experience, nor is the continued use of supervisors "on the boards" easily explained. In October 1983, there were about 3,000 supervisors doing the work of controllers, and the FAA has not yet made a commitment to return them to full-time supervisory posts.

Mr. President, the Chicago Tribune recently carried an article by Lloyd Martinez titled, "A Fired Controller Talks Safety." I ask unanimous consent that this article, as well as an editorial titled, "Air Safety Demands FAA Act, Not React," from the Springfield, (IL) State Journal-Register, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Chicago Tribune, Dec. 1, 1985]

A FIRED CONTROLLER TALKS SAFETY

(By Lloyd Martinez)

As a former air traffic controller, I have sat quietly by the sidelines for the last four years listening and reading what the "experts" have to say about solving the issues of staffing, equipment and, greatest of all, the safety in flying through the United States air traffic control system. I can no longer keep still.

Why should anyone believe an ex-air traffic controller? I worked 24 years in that profession, lost my retirement benefits and haven't any hope of ever going back. You will say the government doesn't lie and you've got to believe it.

Why did the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington report that there were 299 incidents when there were actually 600 reported and perhaps many more? The FAA was forced to admit there were more incidents that somehow got lost on the way to Washington.

The FAA detested the controllers union. Our union encouraged all controllers to report all incidents, and when the news media were notified, the FAA was forced to give detailed information. When the strike occurred in 1981, the FAA found a perfect solution; bust the union, fire all controllers and just maybe take back only the number that they needed.

However, the hireback couldn't be done, so to this day the agency remains gravely understaffed. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole admitted as much last month when she announced the FAA was going to hire another 1,000 controllers to augment the 14,300 on the payroll.

The FAA, it seems, was trying to run the system with 25 percent fewer controllers. The Air Route Traffic Control Center in Aurora, the FAA said, was being operated with 60 percent of the staff it had in 1981. Aurora, of course, is one of the busiest centers in the nation.

But the FAA's claims don't match the figures. At one point recently there were 130 controllers, including supervisors, at Aurora but only about 30 of them were able to work one or two sectors and were lucky if they could do that.

Prior to August, 1981, there were about 300 journeymen controllers and an additional 30 controllers able to work at least one sector. Minimum staffing required that there be at least 14 controllers per area of specialization. Therefore, seven sectors needed 98 men for each of the two major shifts and another 17 on the midnight shift when traffic was lighter. Another 98 were needed to cover days off without considering vacations, sick leave and personnel detailed to other duties.

Excluding vacations, sick leave and detailed personnel, we had a grand total of 294 controllers needed to make the Aurora center operate successfully and safely.

I'll let you do the arithmetic on both sets of figures, but it sounds as if the FAA has pulled the wool over everyone's eyes. Is there any wonder there are so many delays nationwide even on clear days?

Let's face it, the real issue is outdated equipment, understaffed facilities, hundreds of control towers closed since 1981, too many chiefs in personnel offices that are statisticians, too many lawyers and an old bureaucracy that doesn't seem to care or know about the air traffic system.

The FAA first said it would rebuild the system in six months, then that was lengthened to one year, then two. It is now approaching four years and the end isn't in sight.

Someone should have told the FAA that it takes four to five years to make a controller and then only if there is adequate staffing to start with.

The public deserves, and should demand, the best technology and controllers that can be attracted. At the present time they are not receiving either.

[From the State Journal Register (Springfield, IL), Nov. 26, 1985]

AIR SAFETY DEMANDS FAA ACT, NOT REACT

Congress is justifiably concerned about air safety, given the unprecedented string of commercial airline accidents this year that have claimed more than 1,600 lives. The focal point of congressional scrutiny is the Federal Aviation Administration, which is responsible for the air-traffic controller system that guides planes through the skies and the inspectors who check their condition.

Although FAA Administrator Donald Engen insists that his agency is on top of the air-safety situation, recent evidence suggests otherwise.

Three months ago, a U.S. Department of Transportation task force scored the FAA for not implementing safety rules in a timely manner, citing delays of as much as eight years. Indeed, six years after 273 persons perished in the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 near Chicago—the worst commercial aircraft accident in U.S. history—the FAA has failed to implement most of the safety recommendations following that disaster.

The Transportation Department's findings came on the heels of a critical Government Accounting Office report that suggested the FAA is careless in inspecting commercial aircraft. According to that report, some U.S. passenger planes underwent few, if any, inspections between mid-1983 and mid-1984.

The FAA has since drafted tough new safety-inspection regulations and plans to add 500 new inspectors during the next two years. Nevertheless, nagging doubts persist about the agency's capacity to monitor airline safety effectively.

In 1979, the FAA had 2,000 inspectors who were responsible for monitoring the operations of 237 air carriers, commuter and air taxi operators. Last year, the number of inspectors had dwindled to slightly more than 1,300 while the number of operators had increased to 407.

FAA inspectors have simply been unable to keep pace with the proliferation of commercial carriers in the wake of airline deregulation. That proliferation has produced competitive pressures among carriers to pare costs, including such safety-related services as training and maintenance.

Another weak link in the safety system is the shortage of air-traffic controllers. Before the 1981 strike, there were 16,000 controllers. Of the 14,000 controllers currently on duty, only about 8,000 are fully qualified. This despite the fact that deregulation has increased the number of flights around hub cities and underscored the need for more controllers. Belatedly, the FAA plans to add another 1,000 controllers during the next two years. Meanwhile, stress, fatigue, and a lack of supervision have further compromised public confidence in air-traffic control.

Finally, there is the FAA's foot-dragging on the development of a Doppler radar system that could reduce, if not eliminate, the danger of wind sheer accidents. During the last 15 years, wind shear has been cited as the cause of 17 accidents, which have killed 440 persons.

Although the Federal Aviation Administration is not to blame for all of this year's airline catastrophes, the agency has failed to assume the leadership role that Congress intended for it. Instead of reacting to problems, the agency ought to be anticipating them and then acting to prevent potential disasters.

That exacting role demands scrupulous attention to safety procedures, which in turn will cost millions of dollars. But, the millions of persons who place their lives in the hands of commercial air carriers each year deserve nothing less.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I recently joined five of my colleagues in signing a letter to Secretary Dole asking her to take those steps necessary to bring about the rehiring of the best qualified of those air traffic controllers fired in 1981. I have also urged renewed consideration of this issue in a letter to our colleague Senator JOHN DANFORTH, the chairman of the Commerce Committee.

I am hopeful that, quietly and sensibly, Congress and the administration will take this and other steps that can restore an adequate margin of safety to our air travel.

I just add for my colleagues who are here that there is no question we have a problem.

In the first 7 months of this year we had 41 percent more near-misses than we did all of last year, and last year was a record year in terms of near-misses.

My hope is that we are not going to wait until we have more tragedies before we move on the problem. One of the things we clearly ought to do is to carefully select among the experienced air controllers, and rehire some of them. We have quietly rehired about 750. I am not saying the administration ought to make a big announcement. I happen to think the President did the right thing in firing the controllers. You cannot strike against the Federal Government.

But they have lost 4 years of pay, and 4 years of retirement benefits. The question now is air safety. That ought to be the prime question this administration has. There are those within the administration in high positions who believe it makes sense to carefully select and bring back more of these controllers.

I think it is important that those of us in the U.S. Senate do everything we can to encourage the administration to move in a responsible way on this.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

SENATOR BIDEN'S ADDRESS ON THE ROLE OF ADVICE AND CONSENT

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I submit for the RECORD today a speech given by Senator BIDEN. This speech is an articulate and thoughtful response to the debate that is currently underway between the Attorney General and the Senate over appropriate advice and consent role. This speech raises many of the important issues currently facing the Judiciary Committee and the full Senate. I thought my colleagues would be interested in Senator BIDEN's thoughts in this area. His leadership on this issue has been both vigorous and thoughtful. I am pleased to insert his speech in the RECORD today. I commend it to every Member's attention.

THE ROLE OF ADVICE AND CONSENT IN CONSTITUTION INTERPRETATION

(By Joseph R. Biden, Jr.)

(Quis custodiet ipsus custodes—A Latin Proverb)

When we undertake a critical approach to our basic institutions, we do well to remember the Latin caveat that translates its full impact, through our own language, in our own time, to our own institutions—"Who will keep the keepers?"

No one who aspires to be a member of our profession can ignore the controversy that has erupted recently over the proper role of the Supreme Court in interpreting the Constitution. Like lightning bolts hurled from on high, a thunderous exchange of epithets has taken place between the Attorney General and his friends of the Radical Right and the ordinarily more reticent Justices of the Supreme Court.

I enter an arena contested by such gladiators with some trepidation. But as the Democratic leader of the Senate Judiciary Committee, I have a special responsibility to speak to these matters of the Constitution and of its future as interpreted by the Supreme Court. First, our Committee is charged with oversight of both the Department of Justice and the Supreme Court, and second, through our Constitutional responsibility to advise and consent to Presidential nominations, we stand as gatekeepers to both the Department and the Court.

I want to begin tonight by briefly restating the controversy and summarizing my initial reactions to the arguments on both sides. I will then place the debate within the context of the major tendencies in American jurisprudence. Next, I will attempt to demonstrate how the Radical Right has historically reflected one extreme in American jurisprudence.

It is also my judgment that the Radical Right here is attempting to take one more step in its revisionist agenda, an agenda that it has pursued not only in the current Administration, but throughout the past hundred years. In addition, I believe that those who have rushed to the defense of the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Civil War Amendments have also been tempted to over-react.

Finally, I will argue that the proper approach to the delicate problem of interpreting the Constitution requires a middle road and that a similar approach is necessary when I exercise my responsibility as a Senator to advise and consent. I believe that a moderate approach on both questions is the best hope for thwarting the Radical Right and for preserving the independence of the judiciary and the integrity of the Constitutional process.

Let me begin by reviewing the controversy itself:

Attorney General Edwin Meese, in his address before the American Bar Association last summer, offered a public critique of the recent work of the Supreme Court. For the Attorney General, the Supreme Court is expected to resist political efforts to depart from the literal provisions of the Constitution. The text of the Constitution and the original intention of those who framed it should, he said, "be the judicial standard in giving effect to the Constitution."

Applying that standard, the Attorney General then found that the Court, as he put it, "continues to roam at large in a veritable Constitutional forest." To his mind, the "founding generation" would have viewed the Court's modern interpretation of the First Amendment as "bizarre," and as a remedy for such judicial extravagance, he called for a "Jurisprudence of Original Intention," arguing that, in his words, "a Constitution that is viewed as only what the judges say it is, is no longer a Constitution in the true sense."

Associate Justice William J. Brennan, in an address at this university last month, offered an apparent public response to the Attorney General. Justice Brennan's language is too finely textured to admit of easy summary. It must be read to be understood, but his points are powerful.

For Brennan:

"(The) phrasing (of the Constitution) is broad and the limitations of its provisions are not closely marked. Its majestic generalities and ennobling pronouncements are both luminous and obscure. This ambiguity, of course, calls forth interpretation . . ."

Nevertheless, he added, "when Justice interpret the Constitution, they speak for their community, not for themselves alone. Justices are not Platonic guardians, appointed to wield authority according to their personal moral predilections."

Justice Brennan specifically rejected a judicial philosophy that was rooted in a doctrinaire "intention of the Framers." It was, for him, "arrogance cloaked as humility," whose "political underpinnings . . . should not escape notice." It reflects, he said, "a blind eye to social progress" and a presumption against "the claims of the minority . . . against the majority." And he added that,

"We current Justices read the Constitution in the only way that we can: as Twentieth-Century Americans. We look to the history of the time of framing and to the intervening history of interpretation. But the ultimate question must be what do the words of the text mean in our time?

He then illustrated his theory of judging by articulating his continuing objection, under the Constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, to capital punishment. He expressed his "hope to embody a community striving for human dignity for all, although perhaps not yet arrived."

From the perspective of a legislator, I offer another view, differing from those of both our Attorney General and the senior Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Far from finding the Supreme Court's interpretation of the First Amendment as circum-

scribing the powers of the national and state governments "bizarre," I find bizarre itself the notion that the original intent of the Framers of 1789 could govern all specific applications of various provisions of the Bill of Rights.

Attorney General Meese's strictures, for example, were aimed at recent decisions of the Supreme Court dealing with the delicate question of religion and the public schools. No matter how one thinks those decisions should have come out, it ought to be clear beyond serious debate that the state of mind of the men of Philadelphia of 1787 can not be used to resolve the question, for the colonists who fought the War of Independence 200 years ago and were then struggling to make a new country had, at that time, no general public school system. Burke, whose conservative credentials are unimpeachable, put it well:

". . . nothing in progression can rest on its original plan. We may as well think of rocking a grown man in the cradle of an infant."

Wrongly, the Attorney General somehow appears to believe that the Founding Fathers intended that their specific ideas rather than their general words should govern the future.

But a large majority of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention were lawyers. Good lawyers then learned in apprenticeship training, as good lawyers now learn in the first semester of law school, that words are logical universals that necessarily apply beyond the specific state of mind of those who speak them. The Founding Fathers, in fact, intended that their children would be governed, not by their specific thoughts, but by the ideals that were embodied in their words—a thought that Marshall voiced by saying that "We must not forget that it is a Constitution that we are expounding." Holmes spoke to the same point:

"(W)hen we are dealing with words that also are a constituent act, like the Constitution of the United States, we must realize that they have called into life a being, the development of which could not have been foreseen completely by the most gifted of its begetters. It was enough for them to realize or to hope that they had created an organism; it has taken a century and has cost their successors much sweat and blood to prove that they created a nation. (The Constitution) must be considered in the light of our whole experience and not merely in that of what was said a hundred years ago."

Attorney General Meese purports to take issue with Holmes' position; and he asserts a Philosophy of Original Intentions. In fact, the Attorney General's real position, it seems clear to me, is a little-disguised social activism of the Right—in which a minority perspective is being imposed upon a majority. Far from being principled, it is an effort to re-write in his own image our most basic law.

If he thought his position through from his own perspective, would he really want to limit the law-enforcement powers of the FBI in its fight with illegal-drug traffickers by an 18-Century understanding of the administration of criminal justice? If the Attorney General really believed in a Philosophy of Original Intentions, he would be filing briefs in the Supreme Court, seeking to overturn Chief Justice Earl Warren's opinion in Terry v. Ohio, which upheld "stop and frisk" practices employed by modern urban police officers, practices which could not be justified if the Fourth Amendment's command that searches and seizures be reasonable were read in the light of 18th Century standards. In the 18th Century, no urban police force existed—policing was accomplished, if at all, by a constable system whose power to arrest was limited by probable-cause standards. The same could be said about federal organized-crime "Stings" and drug-enforcement "buy-bust" techniques—which are essential to modern law enforcement but were unknown in the 18th Century.

Assuming that the Attorney General is serious about a Philosophy of Original Intent, it is, in fact, the discredited philosophy of Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney in the infamous Dred Scott decision. The Supreme Court never sank so low in the esteem of the American people as it did after Taney's Dred Scott decision, in which the Chief Justice offered his view that the Missouri Compromise of 1820 was unconstitutional. Since by the light of the original intent of the Framers, blacks held in slavery were property, Congress was without power to recognize their human dignity and to free them from bondage.

Taney was not himself a believer in slavery—he had, in fact, freed his own slaves—but he wrote blacks "had no rights which the white man was bound to respect." Listen to Taney in 1857 and reflect on what the Attorney General has said in 1985:

"(The Constitution) must be construed now as it was understood at the time of its adoption. It is not only the same in words, but the same in meaning . . . and as long as it continues to exist in its present form, it speaks not only in the same words, but with the same meaning and intent with which it spoke when it came from the hands of its Framers, and was voted on and adopted by the people of the United States."

That was wrong, tragically wrong, in 1857—it is both wrong and wrong-headed in 1985!

But I find that I also can not agree with Justice Brennan. His words reflect my thoughts, but his actions, at least in one area, betray another view. His choice of capital punishment to illustrate the application of his philosophy marks the crucial difference between us. Like Justice Brennan, I am opposed to capital punishment. I, too, value human life and esteem human dignity. The death of an innocent man wrongfully convicted is too high a price to pay in a free society.

As a legislator, I vote, therefore, against capital punishment—but also as a legislator, I submit my position, along with my other views, to the voters of Delaware for acceptance or rejection. If I were a judge, I would not substitute my personal judgment for that of the people's elected representatives. To do otherwise would make the Constitution, in Justice Holmes' words, "the partisan of a particular set of ethical . . . opinions . . ." In our society, capital punishment is a political, not a Constitutional question, my personal values notwithstanding. Putting aside its administration, nothing in the intent of the Framers, in the text of the Constitution, in its subsequent interpretation by the Supreme Court, or in contemporary social values warrants making the political issue of capital punishment per se a Constitutional question.

Attorney General Meese's position is clearly extreme and unacceptable. Justice Brennan's position is not extreme, but if exaggerated could represent the opposite pole. Taken together, these extremes represent two persistent tendencies in our jurisprudence. Either pole runs the risk of creating the conditions that preclude a viable constitutional law.

These two broad tendencies reflect two different philosophies of judging, which are, at their heart, philosophies of interpretation—of the Constitution, of statutes and of precedent. The first jurisprudential tendency has seen judicial interpretation as constrained by legal rules and institutional principles that compel an objectively correct reading of a legal text. The second has seen judicial interpretation as reflecting subjective value choices that may be freely poured into any legal text, whose open-textured words can always soak up the added content.

The first embodies a methodology consciously taken from a Newtonian view of natural science that makes the judicial process a matter of the deductive application of pre-existing rules within the context of fixed institutional constraints. It traces its heritage to John Austin, who sought to separate law, a positive science, from morals, which, to him, were rooted in individual preferences. Austin's view of jurisprudence helped give rise in this country, in the 19th and early 20th Centuries, to legal formalism. It found its highest judicial embodiment in such decisions by the Supreme Court as Lockner v. New York, in which the Court, on "liberty of contract" grounds, over the dissent of Mr. Justice Holmes, held that legislation that provided for a 10-hour day for bakers was prohibited by the Constitution. The legal formalism of the 19th Century, of course, is no longer openly defended. Today, the objective approach to legal interpretation is best exemplified in the less pretentious and more intellectually defensible writings of men like Professor Herbert Wechsler.

The second tendency in modern jurisprudence, which emphasizes subjective value choices and the indeterminate character of interpretation, is reflected in legal realism, which arose in reaction to legal formalism. The realists were skeptical about the process of finding and relying upon both rules and facts. For men like Karl Llewellyn, legal judgments were ultimately molded by extra-legal grounds. The legal realists' Constitutional philosophy may best be summed up in the dictum of then-Governor of New York and later Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, although he was not a realist himself:

"We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the judges say it is."

For me, the choice between the illusory objectivism of Attorney General Meese and the personal subjectivism that Justice Brennan reflects on capital punishment is a false dichotomy. Interpretation ought not to be wholly objective or wholly subjective—it must be both. Cardozo said that, try to be as objective as we please, we can never see "with any eyes except our own." But what we must see in the process of Constitutional interpretation is not our own values, but the values of our community, as expressed in its authoritative legal materials—its Constitution, its statutes and its precedents. The law must be a means of holding accountable, not only those who violate it, but also those who interpret it, not mechanically as it was mistakenly thought in the 19th Century, but through the honest process of men and women doing their best under difficult circumstances and trying times.

Justice Frankfurter, an academic liberal but a conservative judge, understood that:

"(Interpretation requires) allegiance to nothing except the effort, amid tangled words and limited insights, to find the path through precedent, through policy, through history, to the best judgment that fallible creatures can reach in the most difficult of all tasks: the achievement of justice between man and man, between man and state, through reason called law."

Attorney General Meese appears to be mesmerized by an illusion when he seeks security in an objective philosophy of judicial interpretation. Human justice will always remain the work of human hands. Greek mythology portrayed the goddess Themis with the sword of justice in her right hand and the scales of justice in her left. We have, however, no gods to wield our sword of justice or to weigh our scales of justice. That we must do ourselves. This nation's vision of freedom under law must not be perverted by false objectivism nor distorted by an unbounded subjectivism.

As Democratic leader of the Senate Judiciary committee, I have had to keep up with the Agenda of the Radical Right, for, unfortunately, they in large measure determine what comes before the Committee. I have concluded that Attorney General Meese's new initiative—which for want of a better term, I'll call radical judicial activism—is a part of the continuing evolution of the tactics of the Right.

Early in the first term of the present Administration, the Radical Right decided to change its legislative tactics. They were losing the battle on their social agenda, because they had run head-on into disciplined constituencies organized around those issues—the women's movement, the civil rights movement and mainline religious groups. So the Radical Right shifted tactics and turned instead to a "procedural" attack. Among other things, they set out to repeal the Incorporation Doctrine, Federal Question Jurisdiction and the Exclusionary Rule.

In pursuing this course, the Radical Right was acting on a shrewed political insight—it's a lot easier to win on civil liberties issues than on civil rights issues, mainly because little active public interest is reflected in these matters, but also because few constituencies—the ACLU excepted—have organized specifically to defend our basic civil liberties.

But probably the most important reason is that the Radical Right figured out that it might be a lot easier to win the fight in the judiciary. With their friend Attorney General Meese in the Justice Department—as the author of the Administration's position in the Supreme Court through the Solicitor General's office and as the key actor in filling vacancies on the Court—they could, in effect, judicially enact an agenda that they could not get through the Congress.

None of this should come as a surprise. Like other radical groups of every political complexion, the Radical Right has spent a generation building its constituency largely by spelling out, repeatedly and in detail, what it intended to do. Now, in the classic manner of all such groups when they achieve power, they are in relentless pursuit of that well-advertised agenda, recklessly persuaded that their ends justify the use of any means.

But abuses of the Court and the legal process have not been the sole province of the Radical Right. Some of my heroes on the Left were guilty of similar abuses. Thomas Jefferson ran for office on a platform of repeal of the infamous Alien and Sedition Act as a violation of freedom of speech—and then used the statute to jail his enemies once in office. Andrew Jackson exceeded his authority when he deliberately refused to enforce an order of the Supreme Court upholding the rights of native Americans. Abraham Lincoln suspended the writ of habeas corpus and jailed those who spoke out against the draft. Theodore Roosevelt advocated popular referendums on specific judicial decisions because they were thwarting his preferred policies. And his cousin, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, undertook his infamous court-packing plan to implement the New Deal.

As the Attorney General's position in the current controversy makes unmistakably clear, the Radical Right intends to implement its revolution by creating a new establishment here in Washington, by putting their people in the key positions, in all branches of government, to continue implementing their agenda long after their President is gone.

A key element of that agenda is repeal of the 60-year-old Incorporation Doctrine that provides for the application of the bill of rights to the states. But even turning the clock back to 1925 would not take the Radical Right nearly as far as they mean to go. Their ultimate goal is to reverse the moral outcome of the Civil War and and to overturn the post-Civil War Constitutional Amendments providing for such bothersome protections for human dignity as "equal protection" and "due process." What troubles the Radical Right in particular is that in enacting these Amendments, the people changed the basic character of their Constitution—for the first time, through that constitution, they explicitly restricted not only the power of the federal government but also the power of the states. The Radical Right means, in fact, to overturn the very Constitutional basis of the modern jurisprudence that protects our basic freedoms.

I fear that the Radical Right has about it the vacant stare of the zealot and the acrid odor of burning books!

Within such a context, the advice and consent function is for me the most difficult issue of all. As a politician deeply offended by the Radical Right's agenda, I am tempted to block its enactment by any means—especially where I am in the best position to exert influence—advising and consenting on nominations.

I am certainly sobered by the recognition that by the end of the President's second term, he will probably have appointed well over half of the lower federal judiciary, and I am even more concerned about the future of the Supreme Court. Next year, at the average age of 72, the members of the Supreme Court will have attained a collective longevity that will eclipse the previous record set during the era of Franklin Delano Roosevelt—who appointed seven new justices in four years. Even two new appointments in the next couple of years could dramatically alter the makeup of the Supreme Court.

But whatever happens in the President's last term, the term of the next president will surely be crucial to the future of the Supreme court. Clearly, this President—or the next—will have the opportunity to leave an enduring mark on the nation's highest court, for better or worse. To make sure it is for the better, we must recognize that Chief Justice Hughes was wrong to suggest that the "Constitution is what the judges say it is." It is not—it is what our Constitutional process makes of it.

Here we are obliged to answer that ages-old question, "Who will keep the keepers?"

I answer, "We will—as the Constitution directs."

Judges are nominated by the President. The President reflects in his nominations what he sees as the national interest. Along with the Vice President, only he stands for election before the whole people.

But the President must secure the advice and consent of the Senate. In doing its duty to advise and consent, the Senate has traditionally—and properly—asked three questions:

1. Does the nominee have the intellectual capacity, competence and temperament to be a Supreme Court Justice?
2. Is the nominee of good moral character and free of conflicts of interest?, and
3. Will the nominee faithfully uphold the Constitution of the United States?

The President's power to appoint is not made subject to the power of the Senate to advise and consent so that individual Senators might substitute their judgments for the President's, but so that we might check abuses of the Presidential power.

Some argue that the Senate as a whole reflects the entire nation over a longer period of time than one Presidential election, and that it, therefore, should exercise a power of appointment co-equal with the President. But the Senate does not vote as a whole—it votes Senator by Senator. My vote can only reflect who I am; it can not reflect who others are. I see with my own eyes; I vote with my own voice. I am, in fact, only one Senator—from Delaware, elected by one segment of the nation's population at one particular time. No Senator is the President of the United States, elected by the people of the United States, among other things, to nominate men and women to judicial office.

The President is entitled to reflect in his nominations his view of the national interest. But Congress must act to check any president from overstepping his electoral mandate. He is not, for example, entitled to assume that a mandate to strengthen our national defense justifies an American invasion of Nicaragua. He is not entitled to assume that a mandate to eliminate wasteful federal spending justifies the dismantling of essential federal services for the poor. And he is not entitled to assume that his power to nominate federal judges justifies the selection of candidates exclusively from the ranks of the Radical Right. In 1980 and in 1984, the American people knew they were electing a conservative President, but they did not vote for a new federal judiciary composed of a pack of ideologues obediently responding to the whip of the Radical Right.

The Constitution requires a President to select nominees to the federal judiciary from the mainstream of American jurisprudence. And just as we in the Senate would check military adventurism or neglect of the needy, our role in the process of judicial nominations is to check and balance the excesses of Presidents. Nor is the President entitled to extract from any nominee, either directly or indirectly, a pledge of a vote on a specific issue. No nominee who would give such a mortgage on his or her intellectual integrity is fit to sit on the Supreme Court. We are, therefore, entitled to inquire of each nominee if such a pledge has been given, but we are not entitled to extract such a pledge ourselves. If we begin to exercise such a power, there will be then no principled place where we can draw the line.

But I must add, in the same breath, that it would be, in my judgment, a misapplication of principle to apply these three questions too narrowly, and I do not do so. I would not, for example, give my consent to a dedicated Communist, who would read private property out of the Constitution. I would not give my consent to a racist or sexist who would read minority rights out of the Constitution. And I would not give my consent to a radical revisionist, who would read the Civil War Amendments and a century of progressive jurisprudence out of the Constitution. Such a nominee would not represent the mainstream of American thought.

But by the same token I am not going to apply a litmus test on specific contemporary issues to each nominee who comes before the Judiciary Committee—first, because I believe that Justice O'Connor was right in believing that to answer such questions would jeopardize her independence on the Court; second, because if we make every Supreme Court nominee a hostage to hotly contested political questions, we are going to shift the internecine warfare of the social agenda to the Supreme Court, where the first victim will be the judicial independence upon which the continued defense of the Constitution depends; and third, finally and perhaps most important of all, I have come to believe that taking a seat on the Supreme Court tends to be a transforming experience.

For I have such reverence for the Court that I believe that a new justice, donning those robes and walking behind that podium, must—like Thomas A. Beckett becoming Archbishop of Canterbury—discover that an old loyalty has been transformed into a newer allegiance—to the Constitution! Sitting on such a bench, joined by your fellow justices and in a line with such giants of our jurisprudence as Marshall, Holmes, Cardozo and Brandeis, can not but leave you touched and changed.

I believe that our Constitutional system ultimately relies on faith in people, checked by process. And I refuse to be part of any effort that would undermine that faith or abuse that process. I subscribe to Edmund Burke's observation that "the constituent parts of a state are obliged to hold their public faith with each other . . . otherwise, their competence and power would soon be confounded, and the law be left but the will of a previling force."

The late Alexander Bickel, who came himself to follow the teachings of Burke, reinforced that argument:

"(N)o society, certainly not a large and heterogeneous one, can fail in time to explode if it is deprived of the arts of compromise, if it knows no ways to muddle through. No good society can be unprincipled; and no viable society can be principleridden."

Pulled in two directions, we face the risk of destroying our Constitutional process in the effort to save it.

That we must never do.

Thank you.●

NATIONAL WOMAN'S PARTY

● Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, in recent weeks we have become increasingly pressed for time to meet the demands of our congressional duties. In addition to these duties, we have become involved with the rush of the holiday season, hence, we sometimes overlook the great individuals who make remarkable contributions to our society. One such individual is suffragist Alice Paul.

Being a proponent of women's rights, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to the founder of the National Woman's Party, Alice Paul. Alice Paul made a significant contribution to the women's movement in this country, and I would like to invite my distinguished colleagues to join in the National Woman's Party tribute by taking part in the activities planned for the celebration of her 101st birthday next month.

I ask that a statement on Alice Paul be printed in the RECORD.

The statement follows:

TRIBUTE TO ALICE PAUL

The National Woman's Party will celebrate the 101st birthday of its founder, suffragist Alice Paul, who wrote the Equal Rights Amendment in 1923, at the historic Sewall-Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party, on Friday, January 10, 1896, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Alice Paul was the catalyst in getting the 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote, signed into law in 1920. To commemorate the birthday and achievements of this great American historical figure who contributed so much to the cause of equality for women, the National Woman's Party will honor The Honorable Clare Boothe Luce, writer, publisher, Congresswoman, statesperson and former Ambassador, with the third "Alice Paul Pioneer Achiever Award" for her many and varied accomplishments.

Each year the National Woman's Party celebrates the life and achievements of Alice Paul as symbolizing the best of American and democratic values—her lifelong work and devotion as one of the pioneers in the cause of eliminating discrimination against women—as an affirmation of human rights and human dignity.

In 1985 the National Woman's Party honored Dr. Sally K. Ride and Associate Supreme Court Justice, Sandra Day O'Connor with the first and second "Alice Paul Pioneer Achiever Award" at separate ceremonies at the historic Sewall-Belmont House.

Alice Paul was born January 11, 1885 in Morristown, New Jersey, and died July 9, 1977.●

NOMINATION OF JOHN T. NOONAN TO THE NINTH CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

● Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, the nomination of John T. Noonan to the ninth circuit court of appeals presents the important question of whether an advocate of a controversial issue can put aside his personal beliefs in order to apply the law and the Constitution fairly and equally to all who may appear before him. Because Professor Noonan's history of vigorous advocacy of one side of the abortion controversy raised this issue, I discussed this difficult question with him at his confirmation hearing on November 6, 1985.

I would like to share with my colleagues, a transcript of the portion of that hearing that contained our discussion.

The transcript follows:

EXCERPT—CONFIRMATION HEARING OF JOHN T. NOONAN, SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE, NOVEMBER 6, 1985

Senator MATHIAS. As a student of Dr. Samuel Johnson, you will be familiar with the career of Edmund Burke. You may remember that Edmund Burke said that "A representative owes to his constituents his industry, his knowledge, his experience, his communication, his intercourse, but most of all he owes his judgment." And if he submits his judgment to theirs, then he is depriving his constituents of the thing which is most important that he owes them.

That's a rough paraphrase, but not too far from what Burke said.

We are in a little paradox here, because Senator SIMON and I are exhorted by Burke to use our judgment, even as against the wishes of our constituents, whereas you are nominated for a judgeship in which in many matters we would expect that you would not be guided by your personal opinions and judgment but would be guided by the law, and would be applying the law as it is written and as it is understood by the superior courts.

And I am sure it is not new to you to have heard what Ms. Rogers just testified, the concern that you have very strong opinions, particularly in the field of population control, birth control, family planning, abortion, in which it would be difficult for you to apply the law, if the law were in fact contrary to strongly held personal views of your own.

How do you feel about that?

Mr. NOONAN. Senator, I feel there is a very sharp difference between the role of advocate and the role of judge. I suppose Burke is as good an example as anyone of an advocate who was wholehearted and even passionate in his advocacy, and I would have felt as doing less than I could if I had been less than wholehearted in the causes in which I have been an advocate.

But when one takes off the garb of an advocate and puts on that of a judge, it's a very different role. And I would be surprised and ashamed if I became an advocate as a judge. I feel a strong constraint to follow the law, to follow the precedents—and that is something very different from my role as advocate.

Senator MATHIAS. If a case were before you—and I want to be careful about this, because I think it's unfair to ask a judicial nominee to prejudge what he or she would do in a given case—but if a case right on the point of Roe versus Wade were before you, do you feel that you could participate objectively in such a case, or do you feel that it would be better to recuse yourself in such a case?

Mr. NOONAN. I feel, if the case was within the area of Roe against Wade, or one of the other Supreme Court precedents, of which now there are several in the abortion field, that I would not have any choice but to follow the precedent. And as someone who has spent a lot of time teaching legal ethics to students, I would feel absolutely delinquent if I couldn't follow the law.

I think that answers that question.

Senator MATHIAS. Of course, with courts, as with legislators, there is also the question of the perception of what you do as well as what you do. And there are cases in which Members of the Senate may recuse themselves from participating, even though they may be confident that they can render a conscientious decision on the subject, but because there is some perception of the interest on their part, that they would, under the Senate Rules, ask to be excused from voting on that subject.

Mr. NOONAN. Well, I think that's absolutely correct, and, of course, I would take very seriously any representation that someone did not think that they could receive a fair hearing.

Now, I do think—and I've thought about this a good deal—that the American tradition is not trying to insulate judges from prior political experience or prior political stands. It's very different from the Italian tradition of the German tradition where judges make a career and are thereby pure of any partisan positions before they go on the bench.

But to think of someone from academe—and I am afraid I will have to use examples from the Supreme Court, because they are known to me and known to everyone, but I think of Felix Frankfurter who took a very strong stand on labor injunctions and criticized them very severely, and yet certainly didn't feel disqualified from deciding cases involving labor injunctions after he want on the bench. Or to take a person even more eminent in the realm of civil rights, I think of Thrugood Marshall. I do not believe that Justice Marshall felt that he was disqualifed from deciding cases involving the civil rights of minorities because he had been the whole-hearted and even passionate advocate of minorities before he went on the bench.

Senator MATHIAS. You almost stated a case for Dr. Johnson's famous observation: "Sir, a man is not upon oath in lapidary inscriptions." and I suppose "lapidary inscriptions" fall within the general rule of advocacy.

When should a judge recuse himself, as an academic matter?

Mr. NOONAN. Well, it's very clear, of course, theat where he has a financial interest, where he has a personal interest and a relationship.

Sentor MATHIAS. Clearly. That was the rock on which Judge Haynesworth's ship foundered.

Mr. NOONAN. Oh, yes. Then I think, after that, one has to look at it case by case. I do think there is a certain danger that we all realize in our common law tradition of making broad statements—and you wait till you see the case, the contours, the briefing, before you actually say, well, in this case someone is too involved to decide.

But I do believe that everyone is entitled to an impartial judge and to a judge who they feel to be impartial.

Senator MATHIAS. You have mentioned Thurgood Marshall. It is my understanding that he does in fact recuse himself in any case in which the NAACP Legal Defense Fund is a party. Is that your understanding?

Mr. NOONAN. I have actually not searched his record, but I have certainly seen his votes on a number of cases involving the civil rights to minorities.

Senator MATHIAS. I think when the NAACP Legal Defense Fund is a party, he does not participate.

Mr. NOONAN. I think that is certainly an excellent precedent which I would be quite prepared to follow.

Senator MATHIAS. Would you feel that you would follow that precedent in cases in which Americans United for Life were——

Mr. NOONAN. Right, I think that would be a very fair way to look at it, because I have been a director for a number of years, and Americans United for Life has been the legal arm of this particular cause.

Senator MATHIAS. The statute, of course, requires disqualification in any case in which a judge has a substantial interest, has been of counsel, has been a material witness, or is so related to or connected with any party—so it does seem to me that that would be a reasonable rule.

Mr. NOONAN. I think that's a good line, and I would be absolutely ready to follow it.

Senator MATHIAS. One of your seminar courses, I understand, is on being a judge, on judges.

Mr. NOONAN. That's right, Senator.

Senator MATHIAS. And that one of the topics of discussion is what makes a great judge. And if you understand the answer to that question, I think we ought to trade places.

Mr. NOONAN. Well, having looked at ten figures from English and American judicial history, nine of whom at least are generally rated as great, I have tried to form a composite image. But it's very difficult to——

Senator MATHIAS. What are the common qualities of a great judge?

Mr. NOONAN. I think one is courage, another is power of expression and clarity of expression, another is willingness to be immersed in the facts, and another is caring about the law, caring about the result. Those are four major qualities.

Senator MATHIAS. Let me urge Senator Simon to join in this at any point at which he wishes to do so.

But let me ask you this question: Where would you place responsibility to younger members of the Bar? Is one of the qualities of a great judge to set an example, to be a model, a teacher, to the oncoming members of the Bar?

Mr. NOONAN. Well, it's my conviction that a great judge is a teacher, that opinions are very much the way that people like Marshall and Brandeis, to name two absolutely preeminent ones, the way they have shaped both the law and lawyers.

And I suppose the written communication is very important, and then, of course, the way they have actually lived their lives—that's important.

Senator MATHIAS. Well, the style of life—in John Marshall's day, of course, when they were riding on circuit and the judges and the lawyers rode together, there was opportunity for a very direct impact on young lawyers. Circumstances of life are somewhat different today, and a little more difficult for a judge to have that kind of a personal relationship with young lawyers.

But I am encouraged to hear that you think that it's an important aspect of life.

Mr. NOONAN. I think I do, Senator.

Mr. MATHIAS. I want this dialog to become a part of the RECORD so that those who are troubled by Professor Noonan's nomination will be aware of the important assurances that he made to the Senate Judiciary Committee. I am satisfied with Professor Noonan's responses and plan to support his confirmation. It is readily apparent that the nominee is a thoughtful and competent expert in jurisprudence who undoubtedly has the intellectual capabilities to hold a seat on the circuit court. He is, I believe, sensitive to the importance of treating fairly every litigant who will come before him, and to the need to step aside in that limited category of cases in which his participation would cloud the atmosphere of fairness.●

THE MILITARY MEDICAL SYSTEM

● Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, during this year I have expressed concern about the problems in the military medical system. At this time I will not recount all the details about problems with licensing and credentialing of physicians, shortages of critical specialists, interservice rivalry, and an overburdened system. All of these problems have led many servicemen and servicewomen to believe they and their families are treated as second-class citizens.

Fortunately, we have seen some progress in addressing the very real problems plaguing the military medical system. I have been particularly pleased with the efforts of the Assistant Secretary for Health Affairs, Dr. William Mayer. The steps he has proposed, if implemented, should help to alleviate the current crisis of confidence that exists in the system.

My primary concern however still remains the issue of accountability in the system. Too often the reports and anecdotal stories have revealed an organization where everyone is in charge but no one is. In my desire to bring greater accountability to the system, I introduced S. 489, a bill to amend the Feres doctrine to allow active duty military personnel to sue for medical malpractice. I am encouraged that the Department of Defense has begun to consider alternatives to address the issue of accountability. As I have stated before, I am open to serious alternatives that seek to bring greater accountability to the system as well as provide our service men and women the opportunity to have their case fully reviewed.

At this time, I would like to share with my colleagues two articles discussing the problems of military medical care.

The first, by Alan Parachini, appeared in the November 10, 1985 edition of the Los Angeles Times. This article about a former Navy dentist highlights the better feelings of neglect and inadequate review felt by military personnel because the Feres doctrine prohibits lawsuits for medical malpractice.

The second story appeared in the Atlanta Constitution on November 24 written by Jim Stewart. I think this article summarizes well the current problems existing in the system. Jim Stewart has covered the military medicine issue for over 4 years. He is a knowlegeable reporter in this area and his insights into the military medical system have been on target

I ask that these articles be printed in the RECORD.

The articles follow:

EX-NAVY DENTIST BLAMES SERVICE FOR HIS AILMENTS

(By Allan Parachini)

WASHINGTON.—Dr. Ed Lampitt, a Missouri dentist who is deaf in one ear, blind in one eye and partially paralyzed on one side of his body, blames the Navy health care system for his condition. On the face of it, it would seem he has a reasonably good case for a medical malpractice suit.

But in a form-letter notification, the U.S. Supreme Court has already told Lampitt's San Diego lawyer that the suit will never be tried because Lampitt was on active duty when catastrophe struck.

Last summer, the Supreme Court sent the curt notification to James Milliken, the lawyer representing Lampitt in his battle with the San Diego Naval Hospital, saying that it refused to hear an appeal of two lower court rulings that Lampitt could not sue the Navy over his care under terms of a 1950 high court ruling. That verdict, in a case called Feres vs. U.S., established the doctrine that stripped active duty service personnel of any right to take court action against military doctors.

Only four years before, U.S. citizens had been given the right to sue the government. In the Feres case, the high court was trying to resolve questions about how the new laws applied to military personnel. The plaintiff in Feres (pronounced "fairies") was the widow of an Army enlisted man who burned to death in a barracks fire. Two companion cases involved medical care. The collective decision established what has come to be called the Feres Doctrine.

WREAK HAVOC WITH THE SYSTEM

In essence, the doctrine holds that if service personnel had the right to sue, they could play havoc with the structured system of military discipline by filing court actions against their commanders whenever they were given orders they did not like.

Lampitt's ordeal began in 1970 when, as a pilot trainee, he was washed out of flight school because there was something apparently wrong with his hearing. A flight surgeon, Lampitt recalled, told him he should simply stop listening to rock music. "Therein lies the first inkling that something was wrong," Lampitt said.

Within a year, he left the Navy but rejoined when he started dental school and applied for a Navy scholarship. He was still having hearing problems but had learned to compensate. As time went on, he noticed he was having trouble with his balance, too, but in repeated visits to Navy physicians, Lampitt was assured that nothing was seriously wrong.

It was not until 1978—eight years after the initial examination—that Lampitt learned the truth. He had a slow-growing tumor—a rare, noncancerous variety called acoustic neuroma—between his right ear and his brain. Had it been discovered in 1970, Navy doctors would testify under oath later, Lampitt's tumor could have been easily removed. But the delay had allowed the tumor to grow so big that Lampitt's life was in danger.

By then, he was stationed aboard the San Diego-based repair ship Jason. When the diagnosis was finally made, Lampitt's case came under the purview of Dr. Lance Altenau, Lampitt's San Diego Naval Hospital neurosurgeon, who called in a civilian consultant, Dr. Jerald V. Robinson, the only acoustic neuroma specialist in the city.

Court and Navy records show Altenau and Robinson agreed two operations would be necessary. Both doctors participated in the first sugery, which went uneventfully in February, 1979, and when a second surgery was scheduled in mid-March, both Lampitt and Robinson said in sworn court documents, it was their understanding Robinson would be there. He wasn't. In an affidavit, Robinson said Altenau's office didn't call to notify him until the night before the operation was scheduled. He was already committed to other operations.

In a telephone interview from San Diego, where he is now in civilian practice, Altenau told a different story. He said he was told by his secretary that Robinson would attend and that, when Robinson was not there when it was time for the surgery to begin, he assumed Robinson was en route, began the case and then had to press on alone.

On the operating table, Lampitt's condition quickly deteriorated. The tumor had grown into his brain stem and, as the surgery continued, brain tissue affecting Lampitt's hearing, vision and movement was extensively damaged. It would require a court hearing to determine fault since some acoustic neuroma surgeries have poor outcomes—no matter what—and there are disagreements among doctors involved about whether Lampitt's problems were preventable or unavoidable.

It was months before Lampitt could propel himself even in a wheelchair and he was left permanently blind and deaf on the right side. His paralyzed right eye deteriorated, Lampitt said, because nurses and corpsmen failed to keep the cornea moist.

Eventually, the Navy permitted Lampitt to have a civilian operation in which a spring was implanted in his right eyelid so he could blink but the Navy refused to permit a cornea transplant—a decision that Lampitt's ophthalmologist, Dr. Robert Levine, said in a telephone interview he found mystifying. "It really is worth a shot," Levine said. "There (still) is a reasonable chance it would succeed." Lampitt said that when he told his superiors he wanted to pay for the cornea surgery himself, they told him they would court-martial him if he had the operation.

UTTER DISBELIEF

The final straw came when a Navy medical review board ruled that Lampitt was fit to return to active duty. The decision so enraged Rear Adm. J.J. Thomas Jr., head of the Navy Dental Corps regional office, that he filed a harsh memorandum saying he viewed it with "utter disbelief." After a second hearing, the Navy reversed itself and awarded Lampitt an 80% retirement disability pension. In 1981, 11 years after his tumor should have been recognized, a Navy medical consultant testified in the second hearing, Ed Lampitt got his disability discharge.

He filed suit, knowing he would almost certainly lose the fight under the Feres Doctrine because, he said, "I realized the situation I had been through, and I realized the travesty of justice of not allowing people to do anything about this. I am trying to prevent the next 18-year-old kid (who has a medical problem in the service) from ending up in the grave. I realize this is an ongoing problem, not an occasional one."

The Pentagon, defending Feres today, has argued repeatedly in the last six months that chaos would result from granting servicemen the right to sue if they are mistreated by doctors and that letting them take such claims to court would cause morale to drop. Pentagon top officials also contend that because a serviceman who is injured by military doctors can become eligible for a disability discharge that pays modest pension benefits for life, money compensation isn't necessary.

The Defense Department position angers Ed Lampitt, whose disabilities have made it impossible for him to obtain health insurance that could pay for the cornea transplant.

Slowly, he has recovered from the effects of the paralysis so he can earn a living practicing dentistry, but any further serious health problem could ruin him financially, he said. (His Navy pension is $1,758 a month.)

Lampitt's story is not unlike those of dozens of former service personnel who say they have been victimized by military medicine. An outpouring of such tales during the last several months has already prompted the House to pass a bill that would reverse the Feres Doctrine and grant servicemen the right to sue for malpractice under certain conditions.

Under the House measure, sponsored by U.S. Rep. Dan Glickman (D-Kan.), military personnel could sue if they had suffered provable physical injuries during medical treatment. That would prevent, Glickman said in an interview here, litigation resulting, for instance, from a physical examination in which a doctor ruled a prospective pilot unfit for flight training. Also prohibited would be any litigation related to wartime treatment. Only medical care rendered in the continental United States would be covered.

PASSED OVERWHELMINGLY

Glickman held a series of hearings on the House measure before it passed overwhelmingly last month. In the Senate, a similar bill sponsored by Sen. Jim Sasser (D-Tenn.) is bottled up in committee and, according to Sasser aides, is unlikely to emerge for floor debate this year. There has been speculation that, as the Senate races to adjournment between now and Christmas, an attempt may be made to attach the Sasser bill as a rider to one of the Defense Department appropriations measures that still must come up for final action.

Glickman and Sasser dismiss Pentagon arguments against the bill as unrealistic. In an interview, Glickman noted that the spouses and children of active duty personnel already are permitted to sue, as are retired military personnel and their immediate families who are allowed to use military health facilities for all of their health care.

Sen. Pete Wilson (R-Calif.), who has also held subcommittee hearings on the general problems of military medicine, and Glickman both said they are certain President Reagan would veto the bill if it passed the Senate. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger—as well as top medical officials of the Pentagon and all three services—have vocally opposed it. I71[From the Atlanta Constitution, Nov. 29, 1985]

MILITARY MEDICINE EXPECTED TO DELIVER HEALING AMID WAR, KILLING

(By Jim Stewart)

WASHINGTON.—A smiling Army nurse in Wurzburg, West Germany, carried my eldest son from the delivery room 15 years ago wrapped in a soft white cloth laundry-marked "U.S." No finer care could have accompanied him into the world.

I later met the doctor who delivered him. He was a young man who, like myself, had been swept into the service by the Vietnam War. Like other drafted physicians I came to know, he was very unmilitary-like. He wore tennis shoes with his dress green uniform when it pleased him and frequently would neglect to pin on the silver bars that denoted his rank as a captain.

It was in Vietnam a year later that I had another close experience with Army doctors. After running out of my own hygienically sealed C-rations in the field with Vietnamese troops, I accepted an offer to share their food. My unappreciative gut was squeezing blood from itself by the time I was helicoptered to the DaNang Army Hospital a day later.

Such pain seemed inconsequential compared to the scene that greeted me in the Quonset hut that served as the emergency room. There, GI doctors were bustling over a group of grievously wounded Vietnamese civilians, some of them children. Still, I was seen to quickly and released three days later with good-humored care.

Like most people who have come under its wing, I have positive memories of military medicine. It birthed my eldest son and cared for me in distress. If the lines were long and the system impersonal, patience was rewarded with having no bill to pay in the end. It seems much the same today for most people in the armed forces with whom I have spoken.

But the current crisis of confidence in military medicine doubtless has some of its roots in patients who have not received good care. And the litany of anecdotal evidence has been depressing.

Like the stories surrounding an antiquated Army hospital in Georgia where a surgeon once looked up to discover a bird flying loose in the operating room.

Or the Air Force heart surgeon who mistakenly hooked up a patient to the heart-lung machine backward with predictable results. Or the Army doctor who gave a hemorrhaging patient in a room with no buzzer system, a bicycle horn to honk if she needed help. She was left alone and bled to death.

Discerning students of malpractice would recognize that the same things, or worse, could happen in a civilian setting. The problem is not how to come to grips with flashy headline horror stories. It goes substantially deeper than that.

Essentially three structural flaws have dangerously come of age for military medicine:

First, there are simply not enough medical specialists in the armed forces. The end of the draft has seen to that. Thanks to a generous scholarship program, there are more than enough general practitioners. But trained surgeons, anesthesiologists, radiologists and psychiatrists—to name a few—are not joining the services because they can make three times as much in civilian practice.

And the services have trouble training their own specialists because of a lack of senior experienced people. In short, who trains the trainees? At Bethesda Naval Hospital last year Navy heart surgeons were trained by a physician now ordered court-martialed for five surgical deaths. The Army surgeon borrowed to replace him quit, and Bethesda closed its heart program.

Second is inter-service hostility—not to be confused with good-spirited rivalry. Enough of these people genuinely disdain one-another to the point that health care suffers.

Few congressmen believed the technical excuses recently offered for why the Army and Air Force bickered over who would care for wounded Marines after the Beirut bombing, or why Navy ships would not allow Army helicopters to land with casualties during the Grenada invasion.

Each service's medical branch operates as if the others did not exist. Hospitals overlap and one service's personnel and equipment shortage is another's surplus. The only thing the services readily share is a distrust for civilian leaders in the Department of Defense—who once resorted to hand-delivering health-care directives because the services kept claiming they never received them.

At the height of the scandal over the surgical deaths at Bethesda Naval Hospital, one senior Army physician/administrator spoke with absolute candor when he told this reporter: "Those stiff-necked S.O.B.'s are finally getting theirs."

Third, the medical services have an almost impossible dual mission: first to be ready for war and second to care for a mixed bag of 10 million servicemen and women, their dependents and retirees. The range of cases runs from combat trauma among 19-year-olds to cancer surgery on the president of the United States.

The problem here is the same old story as elsewhere within the military: new construction, more personnel and gee-whiz machinery—those material goals that result in greater bureaucracy—have many champions. Readiness, the No. 1 priority, has virtually none.

For an example, look who the services until recently gave all responsibility for coordinating medical readiness in the European Theater: a colonel whose primary assignment was negotiating real estate contracts with local governments.

According to one former senior health official, the fundamental trouble with military medicine, and a great many other Pentagon programs, is that no one's in charge.

Assistant secretaries of defense for health usually stay around for less than two years and then leave for more money. The job pays only about $70,000.

"There's this great big body over there with no brain running it, no lasting nervous system. Those theoretically running it come and go too quickly," the official said. "The guns that can't shoot straight, the ideas that don't work; they all bide their time until there's a changing of the guard and then they're trotted out again."

At bottom it remains a system with an extraordinary mission expected to deliver compassion and healing within a machine designed for war and killing. The incongruity remains and so does the challenge to make it work properly.

WEEKLY BUDGET SCOREKEEPING REPORT

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I hereby submit to the Senate the budget scorekeeping report for the week of December 9, 1985, prepared by the Congressional Budget Office in response to section 5 of the first budget resolution for fiscal year 1986. This report also serves as the scorekeeping report for the purposes of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act.

This report replaces the report printed in the RECORD yesterday which was prepared prior to receipt of estimates for House Joint Resolution 187, the Compact of Free Association.

The report follows:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, December 17, 1985.

Hon. PETE V. DOMENICI,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The attached report shows the effects of Congressional action on the budget for fiscal year 1986. The estimated totals of budget authority, outlays, and revenues are compared to the appropriate or recommended levels contained in the most recent budget resolution, S. Con. Res. 32. This report meets the requirements for Senate scorekeeping of Section 5 of S. Con. Res. 32 and is current through December 16, 1985. The report is submitted under Section 308(b) and in aid of Section 311(b) of the Congressional Budget Act.

Since my last report we have added estimates to the current level of budget authority, outlays and revenues for the Compact of Free Association, H.J. Res. 187.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

RUDOPLH G. PENNER.

RESTRICTIONS ON JEWISH CULTURE IN THE SOVIET UNION

● Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, the National Conference on Soviet Jewry's most recent leadership report focuses on the important issue of government-imposed restrictions on Jewish cultural activities in the Soviet Union.

The report notes that, while it is official Soviet policy to encourage the development of various national cultures within its borders, in practice, the long-range policy of that Government is to "throttle the growth or development of Jewish culture."

While not surprising, the revelations of the NCSJ report are all the more disturbing in light of the continuing low level of Soviet Jewish emigration.

Soviet violations of the rights of its 2½ million Jewish citizens, in defiance of its international commitments, must not go unnoticed. The National Conference on Soviet Jewry makes an important contribution to that effort by highlighting the ongoing abuses in its leadership report, which I commend to the attention of my colleagues. I ask that the text of the report be printed in the RECORD.

The text follows:

RESTRICTIONS ON JEWISH CULTURE

The Soviet Union is a multi-national state, with over 100 recognized nations and nationalities. It is Soviet policy to encourage the development of the various national cultures as stated in its own law. The 1977 Constitution grants equal rights to citizens of different nationalities including, specifically, "cultural life." Moreover, the "Violation of Equality of Rights of Nationalities and Races" is regarded as a special crime.

International obligations the USSR has assumed under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights also commit it to facilitate the maintenance and development of national cultures. The Covenant specifically requires signatories to ensure that "ethnic, religious or linguistic minorities" shall be permitted "to enjoy their own culture, to profess and practise their own religion, or to use their language."

The 1975 Helsinki Final Act reinforces obligations, not only by a general undertaking of the participating States in Principle VII to "fulfill their obligations as set forth in the international declarations and agreements in this field. . . ." (an undertaking subsequently incorporated into the USSR Constitution), but also by specific references to national minorities, and by declaring that the participating States "will afford them the full opportunity for the actual enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms and will, in this manner, protect their legitimate interests in this sphere."

The Act also asks participating States to recognize "the contribution that national minorities or regional cultures can make to cooperation among them in various fields of culture, . . . (and) . . . when such minorities or cultures exist within the territory, to facilitate this contribution, taking into account the legitimate interest of their members."

The Jews are one of the recognized nationalities in the Soviet Union; in fact, they are a major one, ranking sixteenth in size among more than 100 Soviet nationalities. How far, then, are international obligations implemented in regard to Soviet Jewry? What is the state of the Jewish minority culture in the Soviet Union today?

There are still no Jewish schools in the USSR, not even in the so-called Jewish Autonomous Oblast (Region) of Birobidzhan. There exist only two press organs: The Birobidzhaner Shtern, a Yiddish newspaper of four pages which appears five times a week in Birobidzhan in 1,000 copies; and the monthly Yiddish literary journal Sovetish Heymland, published in Moscow in 7,000 copies, of which apparently half are sent abroad. Not a single one is permitted in the Russian language, spoken by 97.03% of Soviet Jews.

In the years 1977-1979 there was a slight improvement in the publication of Yiddish books. An average of six were published annually as against the annual average of three books during the preceding nine years. But this is still only a minuscule contribution to maintaining Jewish culture. It is worth comparing the average of six books published annually for two million Jews with the corresponding figures (for the year 1978) relating to some other Soviet nationalities: 46 books for 622,00 Maris, 70 for 542,000 Ossetinians and 166 for 1,371,000 Bashkirs.

On the other hand, the number of Russian translations of Yiddish books (which would be more important since, according to the 1979 census, 80.41 percent of Soviet Jewry no longer speaks Yiddish) has radically declined: in the years 1959 to 1970 an annual average of 25 translated volumes were published (in no year less than 20); in 1971 to 1975 an annual average of 14; while in the years 1976, 1977 and 1978 their number was 7, 10 and 9 respectively. Similarly, translated items of Jewish literature and literary criticism are also gradually disappearing from non-Jewish Soviet journals; in 1959 to 1968 their annual average was 51, in 1969 to 1975 it was 50, but in the years 1976 to 1978 such items dropped to an average of 14 per annum.

In 1977 there was only one professional Jewish theater, the Moscow Jewish Dramatic Ensemble which, however, is a travelling company without a building of its own. In 1978 permission was given to form a Jewish Chamber Musical Theater. This was undoubtedly a concession a Jewish demands in the USSR and abroad, but approved under peculiar conditions: though the theater could travel within the country, it had to be legally based in remote Birobidzhan, where, according to the 1979 census, only 10,166 Jews (or half-a-percent) of Soviet Jewry live. Birobidzhan is also far from the traditional Jewish population centers of the Western regions in the USSR.

The sporadic performances by both theaters have been enthusiastically welcomed by Jews, but their activities are extremely restricted. For instance, the Moscow Ensemble could not perform in Moscow from the summer of 1974 until December 1978; no Jewish theatre could visit Minsk until 1978; and Leningrad, Kiev and Kharkov are still out-of-bounds.

There still does not exist any other Jewish cultural institution, lecture course, publishing house, artistic establishment, etc., with the sole exception of the Sholem Aleichem Library in Birobidyhan. In 1979, a memorial museum to Sholem Aleichem was established in his birthplace, Pereyaslav-Khmelnitsky.

Under these circumstances Soviet Jews, anxious to preserve a national cultural heritage, hope to obtain the necessary tools from abroad. Such efforts are legitimate and encouraged in the Helsinki Final Act, notably in Basket Three, which aims at facilitating "freer and wider dissemination of all kinds"; and in the section on Cooperation and Exchanges in the field of Culture, which seeks "to develop contacts and cooperation among persons active in the field of culture," "to encourage contact and communications among persons engaged in cultural activities," "to promote access by all to respective cultural achievements," etc. Moreover, the contribution of national minority cultures to cooperation in the cultural field is especially emphasized.

In spite of this, attempts to send Soviet Jews books or teaching manuals on subjects like Jewish religion, law or ethics, history, art, literature, the Holocaust, or belleslettres, children's books, song books, dictionaries and language books for the teaching of Hebrew, have been thwarted by the authorities. Such books are either confiscated or simply disappear. Among the books barred were those of the Nobel laureates Isaac Bashevis Singer and Saul Bellow, the UNESCO publication Social Life and Social Values of the Jewish People, the Holocaust novel Le Dernier des Justes by Andre Schwarz-Bart, and studies on Jewish history by such distinguished historians as Shmuel Ettinger and Cecil Roth. The confiscation of materials and the disappearance of letters indicate interference with the privacy of mail and communication, which is guaranteed under international agreements and in the Soviet Constitution.

The long-range policy of the Soviet Union is, therefore, to throttle the growth or development of Jewish culture. This can only accelerate general assimilationist trends and, simultaneously, intensify the religious and cultural resistance of Jewish activitists. Either course will generate new tensions for Soviet Jews.●

RETAINING THE DEDUCTION FOR STATE AND LOCAL TAXES

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, on December 3, 1985, the House Ways and Means Committee introduced H.R. 3838, "The Tax Reform Act of 1985," which would make comprehensive changes to our current tax law. The thrust of H.R. 3838 is to apply lower marginal rates to a greater amount of income. In considering what deductions, credits, and exclusions could be eliminated to allow rates to be lowered, the Ways and Means Committee considered eliminating the deduction for State and local taxes. The committee eventually decided to retain the full amount of the deduction.

Because the deductibility of State and local taxes may again be debated, I would like to bring attention to an article written by Dr. Martin Feldstein which appeared in the November 20, 1985, issue of the Wall Street Journal. Dr. Feldstein—a past chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and a man known and respected by a great many people—suggests that eliminating the deduction for State and local taxes may lead to a decrease in tax revenues, not an increase in tax revenues. The reason is that if the deduction is eliminated, States and cities would increase their reliance on business taxes and fees, which are generally deducted more frequently and at higher rates than State and local taxes.

Dr. Feldstein's article, "A Tax-Reform Mirage," deserves careful study by each of us. In addition to questioning the presumption that eliminating the deduction for State and local taxes will raise revenue, the article illustrates a point I have been making for some time: changes in our Tax Code can cause unintended and unexpected consequences and thus should be made only after a careful and studied process. I ask that Dr. Feldstein's article be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Nov. 20, 1985]

A TAX-REFORM MIRAGE

(By Martin Feldstein)

The administration's case for eliminating the deductibility of state and local taxes is based on a fiscal illusion. The Treasury claims that eliminating deductibility would yield a substantial increase in tax revenue that could be used to finance a reduction in personal tax rates. In fact, the likely increase would be far smaller that the Treasury predicts and could actually turn out to be a net loss of revenue.

How is this possible? The reason is quite simple. If the deductibility of personal income, sales and property taxes were eliminated, states and cities would increase their reliance on business taxes and on fees. Deductible personal taxes now account for less than two-thirds of the revenue raised by state and local governments. If deductibility were eliminated or substantially reduced, this share would decline in favor of more business taxes and fees.

A SHIFT TO BUSINESS LEVIES

Businesses must, of course, be allowed to include state and local taxes with the other costs that they deduct in calculating their federal tax liabilities. In addition, many of the fees collected by state and local governments are paid by corporations and are also deductible business expenses. The significance of this is that while all businesses deduct their payments to state and local governments, most individuals do not itemize their deductions. Moreover, even those individuals who do itemize their deductions have tax rates that are generally lower than the 46% tax rate at which corporations take their deductions.

The net effect of eliminating deductibility therefore would be to shift a portion of the finance of state and local governments from individuals—where each dollar of state and local tax payment has a relatively small impact on federal tax receipts—to corporations where those same state and local tax payments have a much larger impact on federal tax revenue. If eliminating deductibility causes a large enough shift from personal taxes to business levies, the Treasury actually would lose money by eliminating deductibility.

An example will indicate how this could occur. Consider a state that, together with local governments within that state, now collects $10 billion a year in taxes, of which $6 billion comes from personal income, sales and property taxes. The national experience indicates that about 50% of these potentially deductible state and local personal taxes do get deducted and that the marginal tax rates at which these deductions are taken average 27%. Applying these national averages to the $6 billion implies that $3 billion of taxes is deducted and that these deductions reduce federal income tax liabilities by $810 million.

Eliminating deductibility would make reliance on personal taxes less attractive to the state and local governments relative to business taxes and various fees. If the state and its local governments shift $1 billion of the $6 billion now paid by individuals to taxes and fees paid by business, their tax deductions would rise by $1 billion. Since businesses pay federal tax at a 46% rate, this would reduce federal tax collections by $460 million, offsetting more than half of the Treasury's gain from increased personal taxes. And if state and local governments were instead to shift $2 billion of the $6 billion now paid by individuals, business tax payments to the federal government would fall by $920 million and the Treasury would actually have less revenue than under the present system.

The prediction that a change in deductibility would cause state and local governments to increase their use of other revenue sources is not only common sense but is supported by statistical evidence. I recently completed a study at the National Bureau of Economic Research that indicates that the current differences among states in the proportion of taxpayers who itemize and in the average tax rate of itemizers has an important effect on the way that states and local governments finance their spending. The statistical estimates imply that eliminating deductibility would cause enough of a shift in the mix of state and local revenue sources to cut the Treasury's propective revenue gain by more than half. Although there are, of course, many complexities in interpreting the statistical evidence, the clear implication is that the federal revenue effect of eliminating the deductibility of state and local taxes is uncertain at best.

Eliminating deductibility of state and local personal taxes is critical to the administration's tax plan because the projected revenue gain from the elimination of deductibility is the largest single source of increased revenue in the administration's plan. The Treasury predicts this change in tax rules would raise amounts that increase from $33 billion in fiscal year 1987 to $40 billion in 1990. Indeed, in 1990 it accounts for more than 85% of all additional revenue raised from individuals by broadening the tax base. The Treasury projects that this increased revenue would finance 55% of the personal rate reductions, with most of the remainder financed by the increased taxes on corporations.

OTHER ISSUES INFLUENCE DECISION

There are, of course, other issues that must influence the decision about whether to change the current deductibility of state and local taxes. Some argue that the deduction should be retained to avoid double taxation of income. Others argue that it should be eliminated to avoid the distorting effect of deductibility on spending by state and local governments. But I suspect that the principal reason it is being considered is that it looks like the only way to raise substantial tax revenues with which to finance reductions in personal tax rates. Unfortunately, that is a fiscal illusion on which it would be reckless to rely.●

S. 1950—TOBACCO ADVERTISING

● Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I introduced S. 1950, Disallowance of Deduction for Tobacco Advertising Expenses, on December 16, 1985. The bill was not included with my remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at that time.

I ask that the text of my bill be printed in today's RECORD.

CONGRESSIONAL CALL TO CONSCIENCE

● Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I rise today once again to join my colleagues in speaking out against the increasingly brutal and inhumane treatment imposed on religious dissidents and refuseniks in the Soviet Union. I am happy to participate in the Congressional Call to Conscience for Soviet Jews and Christians organized so ably by my good friend and colleague from Minnesota, RUDY BOSCHWITZ. It is ironic that Secretary Gorbachev, in responding to inquiries about the treatment of Jews and religious minorities in the Soviet Union, had the effrontery to claim that Jews are treated as well or better in the Soviet Union than anywhere else in the world. The facts speak differently. Sadly, we are hearing more and more accounts of harassment, intimidation, and brutality against those wanting to emigrate and those wanting only to practice their religion freely and without hindrance. Even though the Soviets have allowed Yelena Bonner to leave temporarily for medical treatment—and thus only barely meeting the minimum requirements demanded by humanity—their continuing maltreatment of Andrei Sakharov stands in clear contrast to this thinly veiled propaganda stunt.

Mr. President, we all know only too well the stories of Sakharov, Nudel, Bonner and other famous dissidents. I am here today to speak out once again on behalf of a family not so famous and not so well known to the West. It may be accurate to say that this family is more deserving of our attention because their story is not well known, because the Soviets don't have to face world opinion every day on their behalf, because they are not regularly called upon to answer for what is a regular policy of civil and human rights abuses in their country.

Mr. President, today I wish to speak about Alexander (Sasha) Wainer, his wife Marina, their daughter Yana, and Marina's parents. In what has become an almost stereotypical story, the Wainers applied for exit visas in January 1979; soon thereafter Sasha was fired from his job as a chemical engineer. A pattern of regular harassment followed. Sasha has not been able to gain employment in his profession, even though he is fluent in English and obviously of great value because of his technical expertise. Sasha has been forced to hold lesser jobs such as a night guard and elevator operator, and even these have been only on a temporary, occasional basis. Marina Wainer is a trained biologist and we can only guess what intimidation the Soviets have used against her. Typically, the Soviets have also refused on five or six separate occasions exit visas for Marina's parents. The Wainers have a daughter, Yana, born in 1981 and are expecting a second child soon. Should the Wainers not be allowed to exit in the next few years, what kind of life can they expect for their children, the children of refuseniks, the children of Jews? History does not bode well for them.

It is well known, Mr. President, that peak emigration over the past 20 years came in 1979, when some 51,000 Jews were allowed to leave the Soviet Union. That number was reduced by more than half the following year and reduced to fewer than 900 in 1984; this year looks no better. We have heard that Secretary Gorbachev is a different kind of leader, one who knows how to play to the Western press and how to make grandstand plays to benefit the Soviet Union. I say here today that no matter what propaganda ploys Mr. Gorbachev utilizes, this Senator and this body will never believe that he personally or the Soviet regime collectively is serious about peace and working constructively with the West until the treatment of Soviet Jews changes for the better, until emigration statistics increase and until human rights for all religious minorities—Christian and Jewish—are guaranteed and protected.

Mr. President, at this time of thanksgiving and celebration, it is difficult and perhaps unpleasant to think about people and circumstances halfway around the world. We are truly lucky to live in a country governed by democratic principles and protected by the rules of law, and for that reason I think it is valuable to focus on a part of the world where those simple freedoms are unheard of, where mockery is made of law, where something as ordinary as religious worship can be a crime. Jews, Pentecostals, Lutherans, Catholics—all are treated with equal contempt and disregard by the Soviet police state. We talk about the sovereignty of nations but that does not relieve us of the burden of responsibility of working for fundamental human rights in all countries. We are under the obligation of our founders to speak out on behalf of the oppressed and disenfranchised people of the world. Mr. President, I stand proudly today for all those in the world who cannot speak freely, pray freely or live free of constant repression, and I encourage my colleagues to join me in this worthy call to conscience.●

HERBERT LIEBENSON RETIRES AS PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL SMALL BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, as a member of the Senate Small Business Committee, I invite the attention of the Senate to the retirement of Herbert Liebenson as president of the National Small Business Association [NSB]. I am pleased to point out that Herb Liebenson is a native of Chicago, and was educated at two Illinois institutions: Roosevelt University and the University of Chicago. He came to Washington and worked for the United Mine Workers Union and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce before settling in at NSB, the first organization devoted exclusively to small business to establish a Washington office.

A long-time legislative mainstay at that association, and its president since 1980, Herb Liebenson has been a leading advocate of small business for 25 years. I know that he is widely respected personally for his ability and character. Further, the NSB, under his leadership, is broadly respected on the Hill for its consistently responsible and constructive positions in support of legislation serving the best interest of the small business community.

One example of this constructive role is the creation of the Small Business Legislative Council [SBLC] in 1976. This organization is a coalition which has now grown to nearly 90 national associations having predominately small business membership. Mr. Liebenson was instrumental in the founding of SBLC, and served as its executive director until September 1, 1985, when SBLC became an independent small business organization.

Because of his experience in labor relations, pensions, Social Security and small business matters, as well as his personal qualities, Mr. Liebenson has frequently been selected to serve on such bodies as the SBA Advisory Committee and the Advisory Committee to the Executive Director of the 1986 White House Conference on Small Business.

He will continue to be active as a consultant to NSB and will be chairman of "Technology for New Products and Jobs," a foundation formed to transfer technology to small and medium-sized enterprises.

We thank Herbert Liebenson for his many contributions to the legislative process, and regret that we will be working less with him in the future than in the past. However, his retirement has been richly earned. He leaves an organization which is financially strong, growing in membership and great in potential for the good of small business enterprise. We are also pleased to see that Jerry Gulan, who has long been NSB's able executive vice president, will be functioning as the association's chief executive officer.●

SOVIET ATTACKS UPON AFGHAN CHILDREN

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, the brutal war in Afghanistan will be entering its seventh year on December 27. The most tragic victims of this war are the thousands of children who have been murdered, tortured, crippled, or driven into neighboring refugee camps. An entire generation of Afghan children is growing up in a land ravaged by human rights violations and continued violence. The Afghan children are not innocent bystanders in this war, accidentally harmed by the conflict around them. The Soviet Union has singled out children, by dropping boobytrap toys. This savage behavior has been thoroughly documented by the report of the special rapporteur to the United Nations.

An article in the New York Times, on December 10, 1985, entitled "Soviet Toys of Death" poignantly describes the ruthlessness with which the Soviet Union has conducted the war in Afghanistan. I ask that the full text of this article be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the New York Times, Dec. 10, 1985]

SOVIET TOYS OF DEATH

A powerful antiwar poster that Americans saw everywhere in 1970 showed bodies heaped in the Vietnamese village of My Lai. The caption was terse, taken from an inquiry into the massacre perpetrated by Americans: "Q. And babies? A. And babies."

No such posters draw attention to the ghastly, deliberate crippling of children by Soviet invaders in Afghanistan. Indeed, having grown skeptical of Presidential anecdotes, some Americans may wonder if Ronald Reagan was talking through his evil empire hat when he accused Russians of sowing insurgent areas with bombs disguised as toys. The evidence isn't anecdotal. The evil is real.

It lies exposed in a report to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. This inquiry, the first ever by the U.N. into abuses charged against a Communist state, seems to have been scrupulously conducted by an Austrian legal expert, Felix Ermacora. Barred from Afghanistan, he gathered incontrovertible testimony of the slaughter of civilians from Afghans who fled to Pakistan.

The report asserts: "The most horrible type of incident was that caused by the explosion of antipersonnel mines and especially of children's 'toys.' Many witnesses testified that children had been very seriously wounded, having their hands or feet blown off, either by handling booby-trap toys they had picked up along the roadway, or by stepping on them. . . .

"The types of booby-trap toys encountered include those resembling pens, harmonicas, radios or matchboxes, and little bombs shaped like a bird. This type of bomb, consisting of two wings, one flexible and the other rigid, in the shape and colors of a bird, explodes when the flexible wing is touched.

"The Special Rapporteur was also able to obtain a number of photographs, especially those of children between 8 and 15 years of age, with hands or legs blown off, either by handling boody-trap toys or during the explosion of mines."

The generalized horror of a war that has claimed 500,000 lives since 1979, there is thus added the special horror of toys of death. No wonder the Soviet bloc tries to defame the messenger. It contends that Mr. Ermacora is pro-Nazi because he served Hitler's army, as a private. Tellingly, the Soviet Union found nothing wrong with his credentials when he presented reports about human rights abuses in Chile and South Africa.

The issue isn't Mr. Ermacora, but the validity of his charges. If they are false or exaggerated, why not open Afghanistan to independent observers? As long as this dirty war is sealed from sight, someone should photograph those maimed youngsters and plaster posters everywhere, with the capton: "Q. And children? A. Yes especially children."●

YOUNG ASTRONAUT PROGRAM

● Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am extremely pleased to have introduced, along with my colleague from Utah [Mr. GARN], a bill which would provide for the striking of medals to commemorate the Young Astronaut Program. The bill was introduced earlier this year in the House and currently has over 88 cosponsors.

Many Senators know that the Young Astronaut Program was created as a National Education Program for elementary and junior high school students designed to promote the study of math and science to increase awareness about high technology and aerospace education. I am particularly pleased to be an honorary co-vice chairman with Senator GARN of this worthwhile program.

The Young Astronaut Program is a nonprofit, private sector initiative dependent on the sponsorship and support of individuals, associations, and corporations for financing. The striking of a medal would allow the Young Astronaut Council to sell the medals and use the income to sponsor extracurricular activities in schools throughout the United States and provide new curriculums for teachers to teach.

The striking of this medal will not be done at any expense to the U.S. Government. All costs incurred by the Secretary of the Treasury will be covered by the Young Astronauts Council.

51-059 O-87-35 (Pt. 26)

I have had the pleasure of meeting with some "Young Astronauts." It was gratifying to listen to them speak so intelligently about space and other scientific matters. Their faces lit up when they told me about the various programs they had participated in because they were "Young Astronauts." These young people have been inspired to learn more about something that too many of us tend to take for granted—the opportunities that exist through utilization of space. The striking of this medal will help ensure that these types of experiences and opportunities for young people continue.

I am doubly pleased that my State of Ohio is leading the Nation in the number of chapters which have been established.

Mr. President, I understand this bill was entered in the RECORD yesterday, and I hope my colleagues consider cosponsoring it.●

SOVIET HUMAN RIGHTS

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, yesterday Senator MATHIAS came to the floor to praise the courageous action by five rabbis who have accepted 15 days' imprisonment in a Federal penitentiary as a means of dramatizing the plight of Soviet Jews. I want to associate myself with those remarks.

The rabbis' action is serving as a powerful message to Soviet leaders of the depth of concern in this country for the mistreatment of those in the Soviet Union who merely want to practice their faith. People like Roald Zelichonok, a Leningrad refusenik, are suffering in Soviet labor camps for simply trying to preserve Hebrew culture and pass it on to the younger generation. The Soviet Government will neither grant these people the right to practice their religion without interference nor allow them to emigrate to a country which guarantees such rights.

By demonstrating at the Soviet Embassy, the rabbis carried out an act of civil disobedience consistent with an honored tradition in this country. Daily similar actions take place at the South African Embassy to protest apartheid in that country. Few, if any, of those demonstrators have faced prosecution, and I personally find it troubling that prosecution was as vigorously pursued and such a stiff punishment has been administered in this case. I, therefore, join Senator MATHIAS in urging the President to consider exercising his power to commute the sentences the rabbis are now serving. Such an act would show compassion, while still allowing such legal issues as selective prosecution to be adjudicated in the courts through appropriate appeals.

Let me conclude by expressing my deep respect for the decision which these rabbis have made to accept imprisonment in this instance. They have once again focused national attention on the need for improvement in Soviet human rights policy if our relations with that country are ever to take a marked turn for the better.●

ANTI-ARAB ATTACKS ARE DESPICABLE

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, in recent months there has been a rising crescendo of violence directly or indirectly affecting officials and facilities of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee:

In August, a pipe bomb exploded in front of the committee's Boston regional office, and two police officers were injured.

In October, a wire bomb placed at the committee's regional office in Santa Ana, CA, was tripped by the office director when he came to work in the morning. It killed him and left his wife a widow and his three young children fatherless.

In November, fire erupted in a building here in Washington which housed the committee's national office, causing substantial damage.

In addition to these attacks, there have been over the past several months numerous verbal assaults on the committee by telegram, telephone, and letter.

Such attacks—especially those that destroy and injure life and property—are despicable. I have asked the FBI for a full and prompt investigation of the violence that has occurred. Our Government must make clear that it intends to root out such terrorism.

Mr. President, in addition to doing what we can in our official capacities to combat attacks against such organizations, it is important for us to reaffirm personally to our American-Arab friends and neighbors our revulsion at the attacks upon them, and our commitment to preserving their right to organize and speak out on their own behalf. This right belongs to every American, and when an effort is made to violently intimidate any of us into silence, the rest of us must rise up in protest.

At this season it is particularly appropriate—indeed urgent—for those of us who embrace the Biblical imperatives to pursue peace, and to demonstrate good will to all, to say to our fellow Americans of Arabic origin: We wish salaam aleikum. We will not tolerate violence against you.●

TOM McINTYRE'S BARGAIN HOUSES

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I would like to share the story of an entrepeneurial Massachusetts resident with my colleagues in the Senate. TOM MCINTYRE's determination has turned an idea into a reality. I ask to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a copy of the article, "Bargain Houses—no speculators need apply", which appeared in the Boston Globe.

The article follows:

BARGAIN HOUSES—NO SPECULATORS NEED APPLY

(By David B. Wilson)

(South Boston. New, archtct-dsgn, brick-frnt, 2br town houses, pkng, off Xway 6 mins to Park Street, walk to beach, $68,900. Bricklayers & Laborers Non-Profit Housing Co. Inc.)

No such ad will appear in the Globe because, by spring, when the BLNPHC is ready to sell these 18, sunny, special places, the word will be around and they will all be taken.

And if you don't live in the neighborhood—that's the key word—of Andrew Square, forget it. Tom McIntyre didn't lay up all that brick for yuppie speculators. He did it for what he calls "the two-dollar bettors."

You do not mess with TOM MCINTYRE. He is international vice president of Local No. 3 of the Bricklayers Union. You do not get to be that and stay that by avoiding or losing fights. He is Mission Hill Irish, silver-haired, black-browed, tough, decisive, the kind of man other men will follow. He also is an idealist with a creative imagination, language to which he would no doubt object.

Like the wheel, great ideas are simple. MCINTYRE's was, is, this: Boston is desperately short of housing. Housing costs too much because land costs too much. People can't afford to live where they grew up, formed families. The city owns a lot of land, abandoned schools, burn-outs, tax-title takings, vacant lots strewn with rubble and broken glass, going to waste.

The way to produce housing that neighborhood people can afford is to build it on city land conveyed for $1 to a nonprofit developer. A bank that enjoyed the union's pension business ought to be interested in financing. Union craftsmen, paid scale, working for a unionbacked outfit, could do the work. And the buyers would get a double discount—the land cost and the developer's profit.

This is pretty radical stuff, you know. No federal funds. No limited partnerships. No sales commissions. No syndicated tax shelters. No complex gimmickry, publicity campaign, extended planning procedures, environmentalist tedium, hearings, seminars, workshops, committees, reviews. Just do it. But you need an architect.

Bill Rawn is an architect. Matter of fact, he is The Architect in Tracy Kidder's best seller, "House." Through Ed Lashman, a mutual friend, McIntyre found Rawn. One night last January they had dinner at Amrhein's on West Broadway and discovered that they liked each other's style and ideas.

It helped—a lot—that McIntyre had been with Ray Flynn early in the 1983 election. It helped that Arthur Cola and Pat Walsh of the Laborers Union were willing to get aboard. It helped that Billy Bulger had gone to the Andrew School. It helped that Dave Mirabassi was willing to take charge as general contractor and that attorney Valerie Swett was fascinated by the legal issues.

Bill Rawn delivered plans a month after the Amrhein's dinner. A month later, McIntyre had cost estimates from Mirabassi. In May, the city issued requests for proposals for the old Andrew School site. In June, to the surprise of almost no one, the BLNPHC was chosen. It took title in August and broke ground Sept. 9. In May, people will be living in the houses.

Boston is not supposed to work that way. In Boston, people love to fight, brood upon ancient wrongs, to chew over issues, to debate important principles, to punish and reward old foes and friends, to convene and consult and pick nits. Instead, Tom McIntyre, the Mission Hill Kid, and Bill Rawn, the post-modern 1st Yalle, Harvard Law Graduate and oncoming national celebrity, and their friends, went out and built 18 houses.

You can see them today, framed in and rough-plumbed, their bay windows shining out on Dorchester street, with the fine, clean smell of new lumber blending with the sour scent of mortar. It is the fragrance of progress and growth. Thousands of empty lots in this city could use a little of it.

Valerie Sweet has written deed restrictions designed to prevent speculation, and she thinks they will work. The houses, of course are worth on the open market two to three times their expected price.

Tom McIntyre may have discovered a no-lose game. The union gets work and jobs for apprentices and badly needed public relations. The neighborhood gets some protection against gentrification. A development model has been established. Ray Flynn looks great. The city gets taxes and neighborhood stability Bill Rawn gets an exciting commmission. Valerle Swett breaks new ground in her profession. And people get places to live. Each new unit, just about, creates a corresponding vacancy.

If it all does not work out exactly as planned, well, somebody tried. Right away. Now, Tom McIntyre's way.●

CANCER PATIENCE

● Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I want to bring to the attention of my colleagues an editorial which appeared in the Wall Street Journal on December 16, 1985 entitled "Cancer Patience." It refers to the recent breakthrough in cancer treatment known as interleukin-2 and asks the question "What is wrong with letting dying or seriously ill patients gain physician-supervised access to promising therapies even before the very last "i" is dotted years hence by the Food and Drug Administration's official approvers?" It might be well for the Senate to consider such changes to benefit the terminally ill.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of the editorial be printed in the RECORD.

The editorial follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Dec. 16, 1985]

CANCER PATIENCE

In its Dec. 5 issue, The New England Journal of Medicine published an article officially confirming reports that a government researcher had achieved remarkable results treating patients with a new procedure involving the drug interleukin-2. What happend next was predictable. Thousands of calls poured into the National Cancer Institute from the usual, desperate people—cancer victims facing death. Very quickly they learned that would have to swallow a familiar, bitter pill: General availability of the procedure is probably five years away. Though made by 11 companies, IL-2 is available only to researchers. There is practically no way to get this treatment if you merely want to take a flyer on saving your life.

Dr. Steven Rosenberg's technique is called LAK-cell therapy. It involves extracting white "killer" cells from a patient's blood and mixing those cells with interleukin-2, a biological substance that stimulates one's disease-fighting immune system. This admixture creates lymphokine-activated killer (LAK) cells, which are then reinfused several times into the patient, along with yet more IL-2. Dr. Rosenberg's 25 terminally ill patients had advanced cancer that had spread and was no longer responding to radiation or chemotherapy. Tumors in 11 shrunk by at least 50%, and there was one complete regression. One director of cancer trials told us that by treating virtually hopeless cases, Dr. Rosenbert is "going after the hardest model imaginable. Eleven out of 25 responses is astonishing.You usually do 19 patients with these trials and if you get four, that's significant. . . . That's why NCI got so excited."

Accordingly, the Cancer Institute late last week convened representatives of cancer-research centers to discuss an expansion of Dr. Rosenberg's experiment. Most likely, the institute will have to reprogram some of its $1.3 billion budget to support this work. Dr. Rosenberg's approach is going to receive a fair test. Proponents of other promising techniques might argue that the Cancer Institute is using its muscle to reroute the flow of research funding on behalf of a favorite son, but that's how the federal-subsidy game gets played. Incidentally, the expansion of the Rosenberg protocol to other NCI-funded centers will bring it to more cancer patients.

But in this and other research protocols, the more interesting but less attractive game is, "Who gets treated?" If you want the most advanced treatment, the trick clearly is to get yourself into a research protocol.

People magazine, in an interview with Hamilton Jordan, Jimmy Carter's chief of staff, has just given us a glimpse of how this is often done. Mr. Jordan has just announced that he suffered from lymph cancer, presumably with a less serious case than those treated by Dr. Rosenberg, but that treatment at the National Cancer Institute has almost completely eliminated the tumor.

"I have a lot of doctor friends," Mr. Jordan said, "and in 24 hours I had called seven or eight major medical centers around the country. a majority of people I talked with said, 'If I had what you have, I'd go to the National Cancer Institute.' NCI has two protocols on my type of lymphoma that they are testing against each other. NCI said it would accept me in the program not because I used to be somebody important, but because I had the disease they were studying. I told them I would be there the next morning. They offered to have someone pick me up at the airport, but I declined. 'I just want to be treated like Joe Smith,' I told them."

Is there no humane alternative to this approval process? Almost without exception, the research community will say, no, that this is the tough but inavoidable dilemma of their system. One prominent dissenter is Dr. Robert Oldham, a former NCI official now trying to create a private-sector alternative for giving cancer patients access to sophisticated experimental therapies. By stepping outside the system, Dr. Oldham has made himself a fairly controversial figure in the research community. He says the research community should be "worrying less about the toxicity for patients who are faced with a few months of life, and placing more emphasis on the application of new technology to clinical problems. Already, there are reasonable approaches that could be instituted in the clinic to bring new technology more rapidly to the patient."

To this end, Dr. Oldham has founded a for-profit corporation, Biotherapeutics, in Franklin, Tenn. The idea is to bring experimental therapies to cancer patients, and have them foot the bill. Cancer patients themselves—not tax revenues for philanthropy or industry R&D—become both the funders and the direct, immediate recipients of whatever benefits such research may offer.

Through Cetus Corp., a supplier of Interleukin-2, Dr. Oldham has already succeeded in obtaining formal government approval to treat patients with essentially the same LAK-cell therapy used at the National Cancer Institute by Steven Rosenberg. If resources permit however Dr. Oldham should be able to expand the treatment availability beyond the traditional limits of a formal clinical trial, as well as tailor the treatment to a patient's particular requirements. Two have already started, and one more patient will be added this month, and Biotherapeutics hopes to take on two or three weekly next year. Treatment is administered by Biotherapeutics' physicians at Baptist Hospital in Memphis, and the cost of the patients' contract is $19,400.

Biotherapeutics will, of course, also have to reject many applicants, just as the federal or university research centers do, since all have finite resources. But, "If we see some responses of the order reported at NCI," says Dr. Oldham, "we'll do our level best to double capacity." In turn, expansion should bring cost economies.

"Whether the responses last or derive real clinical benefit," says Dr. Oldham, "will be seen over time." Clearly, the patients paying for treatment at Biotherapeutics are assuming a personal and financial risk; some cancers haven't responded at all to LAK-cell therapy. But surely there are informed cancer patients in this country who want nothing more than the chance to assume that risk.

We continue to wonder why the medical research and regulatory establishment is so adamantly opposed to serving this population of patients. What is wrong with letting dying or seriously ill patients gain physician-supervised access to promising therapies even before the very last "i" is dotted years hence by the Food and Drug Administration's official approvers? Our strong sense, from discussions and correspondence with defenders of the status quo, is that largely they don't want to invest the time and effort that would be required to change the protocols of a delivery system that in fact operates satisfactorily—for the researchers.

In the past 18 months, however, we have seen AIDS patients mount a revolt against that status quo, largely by bootlegging unapproved drugs into the country and bringing intense pressure on public officials, newspapers and local TV stations. The Food and Drug Administration is now proud of its fast-track system for giving "compassionate-use" permissions to experimental AIDS therapies. Would this have happened if the dying had kept quiet?

Cancer patients are not unique. Earlier this year, a multicenter test of a blood-clot dissolver (tissue-type plasminogen activator) was suspended after the evidence overwhelmingly demonstrated the drug's benefits. It is a drug that could be administered to heart-attack victims by rescue squads, thereby reducing the long-term damage done to the victim's heart. Blue Shield of California recently announced that the use of TTPA should be made acceptable medical practice. The potentially life-saving drug, however, is far from FDA approval. It isn't available, though in 1983 there were $676,000 hospital admissions for acute myocardial infarction. We asked one of the most prominent members of the U.S. medical establishment if he would want someone to inject him with TTPA if he fell down in his office with a heart atack that day. "Well, I guess I would" he replied.

The current, rapid pace of biomedical discovery suggests this issue is going to come up repeatedly over the near term. Monoclonal antibodies, tumor necrosis factor, colony-stimulating factor—there and other odd-sounding cancer therapies are now or soon going to be tested in humans. And while companies creating these products give unusual praise to the people running the FDA's biologics bureau, there is no reason to believe the approval system will accommodate the immediate needs of the nation's terminally ill cancer victims.

It remains to be seen whether the presumed beneficiaries of modern medical research will continue to sit still for this depressing status quo. Congress, under no pressure, shows no interest. But those thousands of calls that streamed into the National Cancer Institute within hours of Steven Rosenburg's good news suggest the existence of a real and well-motivated constituency. If the research and regulatory community doesn't consider some way of adapting itself to speed up patient-access to promising therapies, then cancer's curators shouldn't be surprised if sick people soon start assaulting a system that for all its achievements, prescribes little more than patience.●

1986: PROMISES DONE; PROGRAMS TO COME

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, as we approach the end of the year, it's appropriate to take a look at a few of the issues that have dominated 1985 and are likely to remain major concerns in 1986.

First, there is our economic well-being, symbolized by the need to reduce Federal deficits. And second, there is our physical survival, symbolized by our need to achieve a mutual and verifiable agreement with the Soviet Union to reverse the nuclear arms race.

In 1985, we made progress in both areas. But that progress did not produce a product—it did not implement a policy. Instead, our progress took the form of a promise: 1985 produced a solemn pledge that specific action will be taken in 1986.

On the economic front, Members of Congress realized that they could no longer be content with giving speeches—or listening to the President give his speeches—denouncing the Federal deficit while watching that deficit grow year after year. Eveyone knows that a growing deficit threatens the economy. This year, Congress initiated action to deal with the threat. We created a system which promises that the deficit will be reduced. The balanced budget act we just adopted is a solemn, legally binding commitment; it guarantees that action will be taken to reduce the deficit and achieve a balanced budget by 1991. In a sense, it is the "Truth or Consequences Act of 1985"—we either face up to the truth that we can't go on endlessly borrowing against the future to pay for what we are buying now, and take decisive action to deal with that reality, or we will have to face up to the consequences of across-the-board spending cuts.

Most people have focused on those so-called automatic across the cuts. But those cuts are not really automatic. They only occur if the President and the Congress can't agree on a better way to reduce the deficit by the specified mandatory amounts. And there are better ways.

Although we're willing to have every program automatically cut across the board if the only alternative is a growing deficit, we would rather reduce spending by voluntarily and selectively cutting the budget, making cuts that will still preserve those defense programs we really need and still protect domestic programs that improve the quality of life in our society. And cutting spending isn't the only way to cut the deficit. I know that the President says he is against a tax increase—but we can raise more revenues without resorting to a general tax increase. Just one example: Why can't we strengthen the minimum tax on those profitable corporations and wealthy individuals who now aren't paying anything in taxes? That could raise about $10 billion a year, and that money could go toward balancing the budget.

Look at it this way: Deficits are a kind of Gordian knot tied around our economy. We have to escape that knot. We will cut it, if we have to, with automatic across-the-board reductions in spending. But we'd be better off if we could agree to untie it with a balanced plan that better protects our national interests and better preserves our national values. One way or the other though, deficits will be reduced. The promise has been made; only the specific program for achieving the promise has yet to be hammered out.

The same sort of "promise-done; program-to-come" situation exists when we look at the second major issue of 1985: putting the brakes on the ever-accelerating nuclear arms race.

Over the past few years, the Congress has done what it can to persuade the President to negotiate an arms control agreement. And this year, we made progress. The President finally sat down and talked with the Soviet leader, Mr. Gorbachev, and they are scheduled to meet again next year.

Their summit this year was promising; but it yielded no specific results—no agreements, no reduction in nuclear weapons. Next year, promising will not be good enough. Next year, we'll need specific action.

We will begin to find out what kind of action we will get in January, when the President must decide what to do about the SALT II Treaty. The President can declare the treaty null and void—pushing us toward the greatest void of all—or he can continue to observe the terms of the treaty. If he sticks with the SALT II Treaty, we will be well served. After all, it is that treaty—and its restriction on nuclear warheads—which keeps the Soviets from adding over 6,000 nuclear warheads to their existing missiles. With the SALT II Treaty in place, we can make progress in other efforts to curb the arms race. As the Congress has urged, the President should declare his strong support for the Anti-ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty which has prevented a defensive arms race for almost 25 years. He should also resume negotiations for a Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, and initiate talks to ban the deployment of weapons that can destroy satellites in space.

These, then, were the two big issues of 1985; economic security at home, security from nuclear annihilation worldwide.

In 1985, the American people may have been satisfied with promises. In 1986, nothing less than performance will do.●

PATENT FEES FOR SMALL BUSINESS

● Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I would like to discuss briefly legislation that is of vital concern to small businesses, independent inventors, and nonprofit entities in this Nation.

Mr. President, Public Law 97-247, established at the Patent and Trademark Office in the Department of Commerce a two-tiered fee schedule to allow small businesses, independent inventors, and nonprofit entities to pay 50 percent, rather than 100 percent, of the cost of patent user fees. Under the law small firms pay $400 in filing and issuance fees and $1,200 in maintenance fees. The maintenance fees are paid 3½, 7½, and 11½ years into the life of the patent, thereby representing costs to the patent holder of $200, $400, and $600, respectively. This fee schedule is set forth by statute and requires one consumer price indexing adjustment every 3 years. Congress enacted the legislation, Mr. President, to ensure that the exhorbitant costs associated with the actual processing of patent applications would not preclude small businesses, independent inventors, and nonprofit organizations from applying for U.S. patents.

I have a particular reason for calling the Senate's attention to Public Law 97-247, Mr. President. The "small inventor subsidy," as it is commonly referred to, expired on September 30, 1985, and the measure that will reauthorize this two-tiered fee schedule for fiscal year 1986 has not come before the Senate. Because House Report No. 97-542 provides that funds made available by fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985 appropriations are to be used for the small entity fee reduction without fiscal year limitation, the Patent and Trademark Office [PTO] has been using unexpended appropriated funds to continue the 50-percent reduction in fees for small entities. While approximately $3.9 million were carried over from the previous year, these funds will be depleted by the December recess. Therefore, small businesses, independent inventors, and nonprofit entities will be required to pay the full costs of patent user fees in 1986, unless the small inventor subsidy is approved by the Senate.

Mr. President, there is a bill, H.R. 2434, the Patent and Trademark Office authorization bill, that was passed by the House of Representatives and referred to the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights, which would reauthorize the small inventor subsidy for fiscal year 1986. H.R. 2434 specifically provides that funds made available under this act would be used to reduce by 50 percent the payment of fees under sections 41 (A) and (B) of the United States Code, by independent inventors and nonprofit organizations, as defined in regulations established by the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks and by small business concerns in section 3 of the Small Business Act. This measure is still pending before the subcommittee because there are issues to be resolved regarding, both PTO expenditures and funding. These unresolved issues, Mr. President, do not involve the reauthorization of the small inventor subsidy.

Mr. President, the record is clear that small innovative firms and independent inventors cannot afford to pay the full costs of patent user fees without this subsidized fee schedule. Accordingly, it is imperative H.R. 2434, which would continue this two-tiered fee schedule, be reported out of committee. Therefore, I urge the Subcommittee on Patents, Trademarks and Copyright to act immediately on this measure so that the high costs associated with the actual processing of patent applications will not preclude small businesses, independent inventors, and nonprofit organizations from applying for U.S. patents.●

WALT DUNLEVY

● Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, earlier this week, one of northern Kentucky's favorite citizens, Walt Dunlevy, passed away. Hundreds of Kentuckians gathered today at St. Thomas' Catholic Church in Fort Thomas, KY, to eulogize Walt's life.

Mr. President, I cannot begin, in this context, to adequately communicate the loss this represents to the people of my State. Walt was the kind of person who had a positive influence on so many. His contribution to family, community, and State can only be described as remarkable.

For the past 14 years, Walt served the Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce as its president. Among the many innovative measures supported by Walt was the TANK blue ribbon committee which, from 1976 to 1977, worked for the passage of a local tax initiative. It was because of this effort that the Transit Authority of Northern Kentucky was able to remain fiscally sound.

Walt was also instrumental in forming the Northern Kentucky Port Authority and the Northern Kentucky Convention and Visitors Bureau. And it was largely because of Walt's leadership that the northern Kentucky chambers were consolidated.

You can also see Walt's innovative spirit in the establishment of the Eggs 'n Issues monthly breakfast and Threshold 21 Program. This latter program helped to fund much of the chamber's work.

Recently, Walt completed a 2-year term as a member of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce Committee and served as a member of the U.S. Department of Commerce District Export Council. He was also past president of the Kentucky Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives and a member of the national chamber's public affairs committee.

Mr. President, Walt's professional accomplishments are impressive but perhaps the following piece, which Walt wrote in 1975, tells us more about Walt Dunlevy as a person than any catalog of achievements:

AMERICA'S ANATOMY

AMERICA IS PEOPLE . . .

What we are not, what we say we are:

Not so much what we visualize, but what we acutalize;

Not only our willingness to acknowledge shortcomings, but a mature appreciation of our accomplishments;

Not what we are in public, but what we practice in the mirror of our most private forum:

The strength of the weak, because of their bond with the strong.

AMERICA IS FAITH . . .

Not what we profess to believe, but what we believe by profession;

Not the weakness of the poor, nor the strength of the rich, but the opportunity of each to reach higher;

Not so much for social and racial policies, but our tolerance, understanding, faith in God and in the dignity of man.

AMERICA IS ITS GOVERNMENT . . .

Not a government that shares its wealth with the common man, but a system of self government that guarantees individual freedom, and through incentive, holds out the "keys of economic opportunity" to every citizen;

Not just for what is right, but for wrongs that are righted.

AMERICA IS ITS SYSTEM OF ENTERPRISE . . .

Not simply its benchmark of productivity, but the products of that productivity shared in response to the challenges of our changing society;

Not only for our economic gains, but for the gifts of social benefit these have given us and the peoples of the world.

AMERICA'S FLAME OF FREEDOM . . .

Is not eternal, is not guaranteed. Its flame is lashed by the winds of intolerance, selfishness, and greed. Its light is dimmed by our misguided shame to be patriots.

We must know that freedom's greatest test is yet to come, and America's greatest horizon yet to be explored—Let us be proud to be called Americans; but let us cherish forever the rights we possess as free men.

Mr. President, the people of Kentucky will miss Walter Richard Dunlevy, but we will enjoy the benefits of his extraordinary life for decades.●

WALT DAVIS RETIRES: THE END OF AN ERA

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, this month Walter J. Davis will retire from AT&T after working for the company for close to half a century. Walt was the New Jersey manager for Government relations for AT&T.

Mr. President, the breakup of AT&T has wrought a great many changes. While there are promises of increased efficiency and increased innovation, the breakup has wrought a great deal of confusion. It was Walt's job to help explain the most complicated business transformation in American industrial history. It was Walt's job to convey to policymakers the interests of the company that gave the United States the best telecommunications service in the world. Walt did his job well. He was available and well informed. He was a loyal and staunch advocate for the company he represented.

Walt Davis started his career with the Bell System back in 1937, as a messenger for New Jersey Bell. He has been an installer, repairman, line foreman, and plant service supervisor. He knew the telephone company from the line to the office.

Except for service in the Navy during World War II, he spent his entire career with the Bell System and AT&T. Mr. President, that kind of loyalty to a company is something that AT&T promoted over the years and for which it was well-known. It is something that will be increasingly difficult to foster in this new era.

I do not think I betray any confidences by saying that Walt, like many Bell System employees, was no advocate of divestiture. Watching a company he knew and loved undergo such a momentous and painful transition, watching the people who made that company great experience even more profound changes and dislocations, was a difficult thing. But, throughout the transition, Walt continued to represent well the new AT&T.

Mr. President, Walt Davis combined his career with AT&T with a commitment to public service. He served as mayor of Bloomfield from 1966 to 1971. During that time, he served as first vice president of the New Jersey Council of Mayors. He has served as chairman of the Bloomfield Heart Fund, and general chairman of the United States Way of Bloomfield.

Walt Davis' retirement marks the end of an era. I wish him well in his future endeavors.●

RAILROAD REHABILITATION

● Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I placed language in the Transportation appropriations earmarking $5.5 million under the 505 program for rail lines in South and North Dakota. I want to clarify that the directive in the conference report that $5.5 million in section 505 funds be spent in rehabilitating the lines from Pierre to Rapid City and from Aberdeen to Oakes is to be construed as permitted the Federal Railroad Administration flexibility to allow all or part of the $5.5 million to be expended on rehabilitating other portions of the larger rail system from Rapid City to Winona, including branch lines to Onida, Mansfield, and Watertown, SD, Oakes, ND, and Plainview, MN.

Mr. President, I thank you for allowing me this time to make my intent clear.●

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me first announce that there will be no more rollcall votes tonight.

I asked Senator THURMOND about a piece of legislation. But that cannot be cleared, as I understand it, until the distinguished minority leader has consulted with Senator NUNN.

It relates to the housing allowances to families of the servicemen who were killed in the tragic airplane crash in Gander, Newfoundland. Perhaps we can dispose of that legislation tomorrow.

I know of no other matter that we can do. We can do the wrapup tomorrow morning, if it is all right with the distinguished minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Yes. Will the distinguished majority leader yield?

Mr. DOLE. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I am confident that there will be no problem in clearing the subject matter to which the distinguished majority leader has addressed his remarks.

I support the resolution which Mr. THURMOND is pressing. I am sure there will be no objection from this side.

I feel, out of respect for the ranking member of the Armed Services Committee, that I should at least talk with him about it. So I think there will be no problem in the morning.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I certainly understand the distinguished minority leader's concern, I think as long as we do it. I know Senator KENNEDY has an interest, Senator NUNN has an interest, and I am certain all Senators have an interest in this.

It is a question of working out whether it is 2 months, 3 months, or more.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY

ORDER FOR RECESS UNTIL 10 A.M.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that once the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until 10 a.m. on Wednesday, December 18, 1985.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, following the two leaders under the standing order, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m., with statements limited therein to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, following routine morning business, the Senate can be expected to turn to any of the following items: The conference report to accompany the reconciliation bill, the conference report to accompany the farm bill, the conference report to accompany the continuing resolution, and, again, there are other resolutions pending which can be taken up if time agreements can be reached. The distinguished Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH] is trying to bring up a trade bill but I have indicated to him that without time agreements it would be most difficult.

Mr. President, I would expect one or two votes tomorrow and, as far as this Senator is concerned, I see no reason why we cannot complete our action and adjourn tomorrow evening sine die.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO OFFER LEGISLATION RELATING TO GANDER AIR TRAGEDY

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. I yield.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I would like to signal my intention to offer legislation tomorrow which is very much in the spirit of that which the distinguished Senator from South Carolina has proposed, concerning the families of the crash victims at Gander.

Specifically, to take 1 moment, what Senator THURMOND is offering is legislation that will ease the difficulty of those families, the survivors of the crash victims, by affording them sufficient time to relocate, to determine what they are going to do with their lives and specifically where they are going to do it. The legislation that he is going to offer, and he has in fact introduced it with several cosponsors, cures a serious deficiency in law.

Mr. President, I believe what the law now provides is rather heartless. There should be no dislocation of those survivors if they are in military housing and they could continue to pay fair housing rental.

Mr. President, I think a grateful Nation needs to go further than that. What these young families need, in addition to the kind of housing assistance that Senator THURMOND's bill will provide, is the flexibility that can come only from having adequate cash on hand. These are not wealthy families, certainly not if they have been dependent upon the military income of the victim members of the armed services.

What I will be proposing, Mr. President, and what I would seek cosponsors for at this time prior to introduction, is a bill that will in fact increase the face value of the servicemen's group life insurance policy so as to provide not $35,000 in cash payment but $50,000.

It is also my intention, Mr. President, to seek to make that change in law retroactive so that it will extend back in time in a way as to provide a benefit not only to the families of the current Gander crash victims but all of the families who have suffered similar bereavement since the time of the tragic bombing in Beirut.

In other words, Mr. President, it is my purpose to include families who were bereaved by the loss of the marines killed in the Beirut bombing.

My purpose, Mr. President, in announcing that now is to invite as many colleagues as wish to do so to be cosponsors of that legislation. I would think, frankly, that both Senator THURMOND's measure and that which I will introduce will be measures that virtually every Member of this Senate will wish to embrace.

I thank the Chair. I thank the distinguished majority leader.

BILL HELD AT DESK—S. 1956

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this has been cleared with the distinguished minority leader. I ask unanimous consent that S. 1956 be held at the desk until tomorrow. This is the military dependents proposal offered by Senator THURMOND and others.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 10 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, there being no further business to come before the Senate, I move, in accordance with the previous order, that the Senate stand in recess until the hour of 10 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to and, at 7:24 p.m., the Senate recessed, in executive session, until tomorrow, Wednesday, December 18, 1985, at 10 a.m.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate December 17, 1985:

CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY COMMISSION

Anne Graham, of Virginia, to be a commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission for a term of 7 years from October 27, 1984.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

J. Steven Griles, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

The above nominations were approved subject to the nominees' commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.

THE JUDICIARY

James L. Buckley, of Connecticut, to be U.S. circuit judge for the District of Columbia Circuit.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, December 17, 1985

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Make us aware, gracious God, of a vision of the way that life should be and the road that we should walk. We know our limitations and we become so involved in the things that must be done that we do not see as clearly what ought to be done. Grant us the wisdom to see the eternal from the transient and give us the spirit necessary to be the people you would have us be. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

RETURN OF H.R. 3003 FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING NECESSARY TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read:

To the House of Representatives:

Pursuant to House Concurrent Resolution 247, I am hereby returning the enrolled bill H.R. 3003, "An Act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land located in the State of Maryland to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission," to the House of Representatives for the purpose of making necessary technical corrections.

RONALD REAGAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 17, 1985.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON BANKING, FINANCE AND URBAN AFFAIRS TO HAVE UNTIL 10 A.M., DECEMBER 27, 1985, TO FILE REPORTS ON H.R. 3498, THE STRATEGIC CAPITAL RESERVE ACT OF 1985, AND H.R. 3667, THE COMPETITIVE TIED AID FUND ACT

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs have until 10 a.m., December 27, 1985, to file reports on H.R. 3498, the Strategic Capital Reserve Act of 1985, and H.R. 3667, the Competitive Tied Aid Fund Act.

The gentleman from Ohio, Mr. CHALMERS WYLIE, the ranking minority member, concurs in this request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

PRESERVING AUTHORITY OF SUPREME COURT POLICE TO PROVIDE PROTECTIVE SERVICES FOR JUSTICES AND COURT PERSONNEL

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3914) to preserve the authority of the Supreme Court Police to provide protective services for Justices and Court personnel, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Act entitled "An Act relating to the policing of the building and grounds of the Supreme Court of the United States", as approved August 18, 1949 (40 U.S.C. 13f), section 9(c) of such Act as added by the Act of December 29, 1982 (Public Law 97-390; 96 Stat. 1958), is amended to read as follows:

"(c) The authority created under subsection (a)(2) shall expire one year after the date of enactment of this subsection. The Marshall of the Supreme Court shall report annually to the Congress on March 1 regarding the administrative cost of carrying out his duties under such subsection. Duties under subsection (a)(2)(A) of this section with respect to an official guest of the Supreme Court in any part of the United States (other than the District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia) shall be authorized in writing by the Chief Justice of the United States or an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, if such duties require the carrying of firearms under subsection (a)(5) of this section.".

Mr. GLICKMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so in order to yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN] to afford him the opportunity to explain the procedure that is being followed at this point regarding the bill.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, on December 12 we passed a bill which provided a 3-year extension on the authority of the Supreme Court Police to provide protective services to the Court. That bill was sent over to the Senate. They have amended it to take the 3 years and move it down to 1 year. They have sent it back here, and we have agreed to accept that amendment. It is just a 1-year extension of current law.

Mr. KINDNESS. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would urge that there not be an objection and that the unanimous consent request of the gentleman be supported.

I think the 3-year period is perhaps a little long for the exercise of oversight which ought to occur in the following year, and then it may be possible to make it permanent.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING EQUITABLE WAIVER IN COMPROMISE AND COLLECTION OF FEDERAL CLAIMS

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1890) to provide for an equitable waiver in the compromise and collection of Federal claims, with Senate amendments thereto, concur in Senate amendments numbered 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, and 11, and concur in Senate amendments numbered 3, 7, and 10 with amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments and the House amendments to the Senate amendments numbered 3, 7, and 10, as follows:

Page 1, strike out lines 7 and 8 and insert:

(1) in the section heading by striking out "other than" through the end of such heading and inserting in lieu thereof "and of travel, transportation and relocation expenses and allowances";

Page 2, lines 6 and 7, strike out "travel and transportation expenses or allowances or relocation expenses" and insert "travel, transportation or relocation expenses and allowances".

Page 2, line 8, strike out "January 1, 1985,";" and insert "the date of enactment of this section";".

Page 2, lines 17 and 18, strike out "travel and transportation expenses or allowances or relocation expenses," and insert "travel, transportation or relocation expenses and allowances,"

Page 2, line 25 strike out "and inserting in lieu thereof "including"." and insert "through the end of such item and inserting in lieu thereof "and of travel, transportation and relocation expenses and allowances".".

Page 3, line 6, strike out "" "including";" and insert "" "and";".

Page 3, line 14, strike out "January 1, 1985,";" and insert "the date of enactment of this section";."

Page 3, line 21, strike out "" "including"." and insert "" "and".".

Page 4, line 2, strike out "" "including";" and insert "" "and";".

Page 4, line 10, strike out "January 1, 1985,";" and insert "the date of enactment of this section";".

Page 4, line 17, strike out "" "including"." and insert "" "and".".

House amendments to Senate amendments numbered 3, 7, and 10:

In lieu of Senate amendment numbered 3, insert the following:

Page 2, line 8, of the House engrossed bill, strike out "made on or after January 1, 1985".

In lieu of Senate Amendment numbered 7, insert the following:

Page 3 of the House engrossed bill, beginning on line 13, strike out "made on or after January 1, 1985".

In lieu of Senate Amendment numbered 10, insert the following:

Page 4 of the House engrossed bill, beginning on line 9, strike out "made on or after January 1, 1985" and after line 17 on that page insert the following:

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by section 1 of this Act shall apply to any claim arising out of an erroneous payment of travel, transportation, or relocation expenses and allowances made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act. The amendments made by section 2 and 3 of this Act shall apply to any claim arising out of an erroneous payment of travel and transportation allowances made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

□ 1030

Mr. GLICKMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments and the House amendments to the Senate amendments be considered as having been read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so for the purpose of again yielding to the gentleman from Kansas. I support the request, in fact.

Mr. GLICKMAN. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, this bill was passed earlier, introduced by a former colleague, Sam Hall. It was recommended by the Comptroller General. It would extend the present statutory authority for equitable waiver to include overpayments of travel and transportation expenses and overpayments or relocation expenses.

The Senate has amended the bill to make the provisions of the bill effective as of the date of the enactment. Otherwise, any changes are procedural and nonsubstantive whatsoever. This bill should not be controversial at all, and I would urge its adoption.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, it might be pointed out that the bill would reduce the number of private bills that have to be dealt with in the Congress and appropriately so.

I support the gentleman's unanimous consent request and urge that it be approved.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was on objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CHEROKEE LEASING ACT

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, the Committee on Ways and Means, and the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 1728) to authorize the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma to lease certain lands held in trust for up to 99 years, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so to inquire of the gentleman what is involved in this legislation.

I yield to the gentleman from Arizona for his response.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, S. 1728 would authorize the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma to lease its lands held in trust for up to 99 years. Presently, the Cherokees are limited to a leasing authority for up to 25 years, which has prohibited them from leasing to the Muskogee Port Authority lands surrounding the Arkansas riverbed. The United States, by treaty in 1835, confirmed the Cherokee's land holdings of 14 million acres in what is now northeastern Oklahoma. This land included a stretch of the Arkansas River.

Under the bill's authority, the Cherokees would issue a lease to the Muskogee City's Port Authority on 3 acres of the Arkansas riverbed. This would resolve a dispute which still exists between the Cherokee Nation and the port authority, although in the Supreme Court ruling of Choctaw Nation versus United States it held "that the United States intended to, and did convey, title to the bed of the Arkansas riverbed * * *." The Court also held that the United States had navigational easement under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

The city of Muskogee has appealed a recent decision by the U.S. Court for the eastern district of Oklahoma, in Cherokee versus Muskogee City-County Port Authority, which was decided in the tribe's favor, regarding the port authority's unauthorized use of Cherokee property. Both the city and the tribe are in support of the legislative settlement as proposed in S. 1728 which would dismiss the port authority's appeal and permit them to sign a lease with the Cherokee's for a 50-year lease for $50,000, with an option for an additional 49 years for an additional $50,000.

S. 1728, as passed by the Senate, contains two nongermane provisions affecting certain civil service benefits of former Federal employees who are now employed by an Indian tribal government. The first provision under section 2 of the bill would amend section 105(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Educational Assistance Act of 1975 (Public Law 93-638) by extending the timeframe under which Federal employees who choose, after 1985, to work for a tribal government under a "638" contract may retain their Federal benefits; that is contributions to the Federal retirement fund, health insurance, and so forth. This provision has provided an important incentive in encouraging Federal employees to seek employment with tribal governments, particularly where the tribe assumes, under contract, the operation of program services formerly operated by a Federal agency and where such employee may have the specific expertise from prior employment with the same program. The existing law, for purposes of this provision of providing for the civil service benefits option for former Federal employees, would expire on December 31, 1985. Section 2 of S. 1728 would simply extend that timeframe through to December 31, 1988.

Section 3 of S. 1728 would address the inequities of the former Federal employees who are now employed by a tribal government, and who had taken advantage of section 105(e) of Public Law 93-638. If these employees were to reenter the Federal service they would not be able to continue their contributions to the Federal retirement system, although they had been making contributions while employed by a tribal government. Section 3 would permit these employees to retain their Federal retirement benefits upon reemployment by the Federal Government rather than being forced to enter into the new Social Security retirement plan.

S. 1728 was referred not only to my Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs but also the Committees on Post Office and Civil Service, and Ways and Means after Senate referral to the House. Both committees have reviewed and approved for passage those provisions, sections 2 and 3, which also fall within their jurisdiction. Additionally, the administration is in support of this bill in its entirety.

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
Washington, DC, December 13, 1985.

Hon. MORRIS K. UDALL,
Chairman, Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, Longworth House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing to advise you that although this is not a legislative procedure I like to follow, I will not object to immediate House consideration of S. 1728, the Cherokee Leasing Act.

In addition to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, S. 1728 was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. Section 3 of the bill amends the Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code to allow Federal employees who leave Federal employment and temporarily work with a tribal organization to retain their exemption from social security coverage upon return to Federal service. This provision parallels the treatment provided to Federal employees who temporarily perform military or reserve duty.

Section 3 of S. 1728 is clearly within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. Normally, both the Subcommittee on Social Security and the full Committee would consider and act upon this legislation before it would be taken up by the full House. I have no strong substantive objections to S. 1728, but I would point out that ordinarily this Committee would object strongly to consideration in the House of legislation that neither the Subcommittee nor the full Committee have had an opportunity to review. Nonethelss, in view of the substantive merits of the legislation, and given the press of time, I will yield to this procedure. However, this should not be construed as a precedent for similar action in the future.

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

DAN ROSTENKOWSKI,
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE AND CIVIL SERVICE,
Washington, DC, December 13, 1985.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Please be advised that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has no objection to the consideration in the House of the bill S. 1728, which was referred to this Committee as well as the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Ways and Means on December 9, 1985.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM D. FORD,
Chairman.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for that explanation, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1728

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Cherokee Leasing Act".

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION FOR 99-YEAR LEASE.

The second sentence of subsection (a) of the first section of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the leasing of restricted Indian lands for public, religious, educational, recreational, residential, business, and other purposes requiring the grant of long-term leases" approved August 9, 1955 (25 U.S.C. 415), is amended by inserting ", lands held in trust for the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma," after "the Twenty-nine Palms Band of Luiseno Mission Indians,".

SEC. 3. CERTAIN CIVIL SERVICE BENEFITS FOR FORMER FEDERAL EMPLOYEES WORKING FOR INDIAN TRIBES.

(a) Subsection (e) of section 105 of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450(a)) is amended by striking out "1985" and inserting instead "1988".

(b) Section 210(a)(5)(B)(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 410(a)(5)(B)(i) and section 3121(b)(5)(B)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 are each amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subclause (III),

(2) by striking out "; or" at the end of the subclause (IV) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and

(3) by adding after subclause (IV) the following:

"(V) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after employment (by a tribal organization) to which section 105(e)(2) of the Indian Self-Determination Act applies, then the service performed for that tribal organization shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A); or".

(c) The amendments made by subsection (b) apply to any return to the performance of service in the employ of the United States, or of an instrumentality thereof, after 1983.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

MANY THANKS TO DR. FREEMAN CARY AND BETHESDA NAVAL HOSPITAL

(Mr. BROOKS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Members that about a week ago I had an excellent chance to bleed to death without knowing it, and I went and saw Dr. Cary, I struggled down there, and in 5 minutes, Freeman Cary, the physician for the Capitol, said, "You have three options: You can go to the hospital, you can go to the hospital, or you can go to the hospital."

I took one of his options and went out there to Bethesda and those people there did an outstanding job in the admissions. Dr. Bennett, internist, Dr. Edmunds, resident; and Commander Dons, staff, internal medicine; they are young men and it makes you proud of them; 26, 27 years old. They are professionals and they knew what they were doing. They found out what was wrong with me; fixed it, and as soon as I had about 6 pints of blood and said, "You are going to be all right," and sent me off to a ward. The corpsmen were courteous; the nurses were courteous, they shipped me home and I went on home. I am going to be all right; perfect.

I just want to tell the Members that we in this House are indeed fortunate to have somebody like Freeman Cary over there who has got enough sense to know what is wrong with you and enough guts to tell you to go to the hospital when you need to go. Admiral Cary is a doctor with assured competence tempered by broad experience.

I want to add one more thing: About that Bethesda operation, the captain in charge of it, Captain Amis, they all worked at it. I did not pay a lot of attention to names out there; I was not hustling any votes. Not likely.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say in closing, about that hospital, I am reminded of our dear, beloved Member, the late, Republican Member of Congress named Dewey Short. I remember Dewey, one night, back a long time ago when Members used to do those kinds of things, we were out drinking nectar, and he is holding that glass in his hand and he said, "I do not know what they charge for it, but it is worth every penny." Mr. Speaker, that is the way I feel about Bethesda. Thank you.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1986

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 344, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 344

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, to consider the joint resolution (H.R. Res. 491) making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes, in the House, debate on the joint resolution shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, and all points of order under clause 7 of Rule XVI are hereby waived against instructions contained in a motion to recommit, if offered by Representative CONTE or his designee, containing only the following amendment:

"Effective with the date of enactment of this joint resolution, through twelve o'clock post meridian, eastern standard time, December 19, 1985, none of the funds appropriated by this or any other Act shall be used by the United States Synthetic Fuels Corporation for awards of financial assistance or payments with respect to projects or modules under the United States Synthetic Fuels Corporation Act of 1980."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT], for purposes of debate only, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 344 provides for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 491 in the House. The 1 hour of debate is equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. All points of order against consideration of the joint resolution and against the joint resolution are waived. One motion to recommit is provided. The rule waives clause 7 of rule XVI against instructions printed in the rule if the instructions are offered by Representative CONTE or his designee.

House Joint Resolution 491 provides the necessary funding for the continued operation of the Federal Government through Thursday, December 19, 1985. Yesterday, the House rejected the conference report on House Joint Resolution 465, making continuing appropriations for the remainder of fiscal year 1986. As Members are aware, it is imperative that the House proceed to the consideration of this joint resolution. As a result of yesterday's actions, those programs whose appropriations have not been enacted into law through the normal appropriations process are now without funding. The short-term continuing resolution made in order by this rule will allow the Government to function and afford the Appropriations Committee sufficient time to go back to conference with the other body and report out another conference report for the rest of fiscal year 1986.

Mr. Speaker, the rule that is before the Members provides for a motion to recommit. The rule waives points of order against instructions printed in the rule for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 7 of rule XVI. That rule prohibits the consideration of amendments that are not germane to the bill under consideration. This waiver is necessary to allow Mr. CONTE, or his designee, the opportunity to offer a motion to recommit with instructions pertaining to the Synthetic Fuels Corporation. Specifically, the instructions printed in the rule prohibit the Synthetic Fuels Corporation from obligating funds and making awards or payments for projects or modules for the duration of this continuing resolution. The House has voted on this issue several times in recent years. This motion to recommit will allow the House to again express its position on the practices of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation. It is important to note that the prohibition contained in the instructions printed in the rule continue only for the duration of the continuing resolution—that is through Thursday, December 19, 1985.

Mr. Speaker, it is imperative that we move to the expeditious consideration of this joint resolution.

□ 1040

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it's beginning to look a lot like Christmas. Unfortunately, "CR" does not stand for "Christmas recess."

I just have to wonder, whose bright idea it was last night to stay around here till the ridiculous hours that we stayed and think that we could get through a continuing resolution?

It was preordained that we would make a mess last night, and that is exactly what we did. How many times does history have to repeat itself on continuing resolutions? Every year we do this; over and over we go again. I mean, it is a part of the Christmas season.

So here we are back again with a short continuing resolution. I feel deja vu here. How many times are we going to have to do it?

This short stopgap continuing resolution would carry us through midnight Thursday, and it was necessitated by last night's overwhelming vote against the permanent continuing resolution. I commend the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee for abandoning his earlier short term continuing resolution that would have carried us through Christmas Eve. We could all have been here Christmas Eve singing "Jingle Bells." I know it was not his intention to keep the House around that long, but Murphy's Law has a way of operating in this body. It tends to provide work to fill the allocated time. If we had till Christmas Eve, we would stay to Christmas Eve. So at least the chairman decided that it would be better if we just go till Thursday midnight.

I shudder to think of what we would do if we stayed around here through the rest of this week and right up until next Tuesday night.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 344 is a rule providing for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 491, providing for the continuing appropriations. It calls for consideration in the House instead of in the Committee of the Whole, with 1 hour of general debate divided between the chairman and the ranking member of the committee.

No amendments will be in order, since the previous question is ordered to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit. The recommital motion may be a motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts which prevents the Synfuels Corporation from awarding financial assistance or payments between now and Friday. That will be subject to an additional 10 minutes of debate under the House rules.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of this short continuing resolution. I urge the conferees to get back together quickly and bring us back something that we can pass. But if we wait around here till 10 or 11 o'clock tonight, it could happen once again that we will not have a continuing resolution. I hope that our leadership will consult across the aisle and be sensitive to the Members' concerns on this continuing resolution and on the schedule that we have in the hopefully 1 remaining day or so.

While I am at it, I would just like to remind my colleagues, if any of them have children in school, if any of them would like to be with their families sometime or other: Take a look at next August's schedule. The House is scheduled now not to go out until August 15, according to our calendar, which means you would get about 1 week with your family.

I know we are all thinking about Christmas now and trying to complete our necessary work, but I would urge you right now, any of you in the family caucus who are young enough to have some children in school, you need to talk to your leadership or we are going to be sitting around here next August 15 and 17 and our kids will be back in school the next week.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE].

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule for this short-term extension of the continuing resolution.

I want to thank Chairman PEPPER and the Rules Committee for making in order my motion to recommit with instructions to add a new section to the resolution. This new section simply places a moratorium on spending by the Synfuels Corporation until the Congress has a chance to resolve the issue on a final continuing resolution. The moratorium would extend until the expiration date of the continuing resolution—December 19, 1985. We have to act now before millions and millions are committed in the next few days.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agree to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule just adopted, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 491) making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The text of the joint resolution is as follows:

H.J. RES. 491

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the joint resolution of December 13, 1985 (Public Law 99-179) is hereby amended by striking out "Six o'clock post meridian, eastern standard time, December 16, 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 19, 1985".

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCHEUER). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 491) making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, in line with discussions last evening, we have before us House Joint Resolution 491. It provides for an extension of the last resolution which expired at 6 o'clock on Monday afternoon.

The resolution we have before us today reads as follows: "That the joint resolution of December 13, 1985 (Public Law 99-179) is hereby amended by striking out 'six o'clock post meridian, eastern standard time, December 16, 1985' and inserting in lieu thereof 'December 19, 1985'."

This is a straightforward resolution to hold the Government intact for 4 days while we complete a regular full year continuing resolution.

May I say to my colleagues that with about seven subcommittees involved, with all the issues that were before us, and with many, many legislative provisions that have not been reconciled or decided upon by the legislative committees, we in the Appropriations Committee did the very best we could to bring to you a reasonable bill.

As I pointed out, in about every direction we looked, we were $4 billion to $6 billion below the recommendations of the President and below this year's expenditures. We were below in every area.

But in considering the vote after the joint resolution failed, personally I saw many areas where there needs to be an adjustment. There are three States that are adversely affected because of the drinking age of drivers. These States wrote me, but in the hurly-burly of trying to handle so many things at one time, that was unintentionally ignored.

I find many other areas that I believe should be looked at. Many of our colleagues were afraid that something was being done having to do with salary increases. That is not true, but that did not keep our friends from thinking that was true.

So I expect to recommend to the Speaker that he appoint, in connection with the continuing resolution, the chairmen of the regular appropriation bills the senior members of the committee, as we have done heretofore, to reconsider what has already been recommended and go over each of these bills and see if we can relieve those places where pressure exists and where people are raising questions about them.

So what I am asking the Members to do is to go along with us here for 4 days so we have time to do our regular resolution.

So I urge the Members to vote with us here. Let us hold the line for 4 days, and your Committee on Appropriations will make an effort to correct these places where there seems to be considerable opposition. I hope the Members will support us in this effort.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, by voting down the continuing resolution last night, we have gotten ourselves in a real pickle. That conference report was carefully balanced to accommodate the other body, and the administration. At the moment, it is not clear now how we are going to change that agreement so that it can pass this House at a reasonable time and retain the critical accommodations which we made with the administration and the other body. However, the current continuing resolution expired last night at 6 o'clock and it is clear that we need to pass an extension very quicky to avoid a shutdown of the Government and to give us time to determine whether we can still pass a continuing resolution for the balance of the year.

It is particularly important that we avoid a shutdown of the Government, which would mean furloughs and short paychecks for Government employees who then become innocent victims of our disagreement.

I hope that we will pass this extension after we have approved my motion to recommit to prevent some last-minute contracting boondoggles by the Synfuels Corporation. I understand that the other body would with maybe one exception accept this amendment and we will be back here early this afternoon.

I only want to point out that we enacted the Budget Act in 1974, and the first year under the Budget Act, fiscal 1977, we passed 13 appropriation bills before the start of the fiscal year. Not since that time have we passed all the appropriation bills on time.

I said on this floor more than one time that if I were not a member of the Appropriations Committee I would be leading a revolt in this House against this system where you take all these bills that are not passed, which is not the fault of the Appropriations Committee—I will go into that later—and lump them together in a continuing resolution and tell this House that you are either going to accept that continuing resolution or not and you are not going to have a say on how that continuing resolution is put together. That is wrong. That is wrong and every Member of this House should be down in that well fighting this system.

Now, what is wrong with the system? In 1974, we created the Budget Act and we set another layer up, another bureaucracy right in the House of Representatives.

Now, we cannot do anything on the Appropriations Committee until the Budget Committee passes the budget resolution. Only once have they passed a budget resolution on time.

Now to compound the problem, we passed Gramm-Rudman. You wait until we get back here in January and February. This House will be paralyzed. There will be chaos here in the House.

We have to come up with $11.7 billion on the 1986 bill. We cannot even come up with the figure that they gave us as a target in the budget resolution.

I ask you, I ask this House, where are we going to get another $11.7 billion, when we cannot even meet the target now?

Do you know what is going to happen? Biomedical research is going to get cut. AIDS research is going to get cut. The Coast Guard is going to get it right between the eyes. They already got it under the old Budget Act.

Program after program, UDAG, commerce, community development, housing, everything will go down the drain because this House panicked and passed Gramm-Rudman.

Now, you think things are paralyzed here today. You just wait and see when we get back.

I told you so.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 344, the previous question is considered as ordered on the resolution.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. CONTE

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the joint resolution?

Mr. CONTE. I am opposed to the joint resolution as it is presently written, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CONTE moves to recommit House Joint Resolution 491 to the Committee on Appropriations, with instructions to that committee to report the resolution back to the House forthwith, with the following amendment:

SEC. 2. Effective with the date of enactment of this joint resolution, through twelve o'clock post meridian, eastern standard time, December 19, 1985, none of the funds appropriated by this or any other Act shall be used by the United States Synthetic Fuels Corporation for awards of financial assistance or payments with respect to projects or modules under the United States Synthetic Fuels Corporation Act of 1980.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL].

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

We really do not want to take all this time. I just want to make sure that the Members understand what this motion is.

This is a motion to recommit with instructions, that is, with an amendment that would prevent the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation from signing any contracts until the expiration of this resolution on midnight, December 19.

What this motion is intended to do and the need for it is to assure that the SFC is not going to be expending hundreds of millions of dollars in the interim.

We have had a consensus reached on this and we can zero out the dollars that are in this resolution.

The staff of the Corporation has been working on projects that if they are approved in the interim, we could find that billions of dollars would be spent. The money would be gone and that would not be much of a Christmas present for the taxpayers of this country.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

I rise in strong support of this motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL]. They are absolutely correct. The Corporation will be killed under the regular continuing resolution and the risk is that they will commit us to hundreds of millions of dollars worth of expenditures in the next couple days.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE] who has also worked very hard on this issue.

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I want to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from North Carolina.

I hope that the recommittal motion will enjoy overwhelming bipartisan support.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for yielding. I want to echo his remarks.

We have a chance to save the taxpayers a billion dollars. It is not very often that we have that opportunity and we should support the Conte motion to recommit.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, my motion to recommit with instructions would add a new section to this resolution that would simply prohibit the Synfuels Corporation from making any new obligations or commitments this week.

I realize this is an unusual procedure—attaching a rider to a short continuing resolution—but this is an unusual situation, one that is out of control, requiring emergency action by the Congress.

After 27 years in this House, I've finally seen the ultimate in bureaucratic arrogance. Despite an overwhelming House vote to abolish the SFC and despite tentative agreement to accept the House position in conference, the Corporation scheduled a meeting for today in order to commit millions more in subsidies before Congress has the chance to shut the doors on this wasteful agency. I don't know if the meeting will take place this week or not, but we can't afford to take the chance.

According to a recently released announcement, the corporation will consider and review several pending projects totaling almost a billion dollars in subsidies. That's millions and millions out the door despite the clear intent of Congress that this spending should stop immediately.

If we don't act now, on this resolution, these bandits on the Synfuels Board will award financial assistance to boondoggles like the Seep Ridge oil shale project in Utah. Under the current proposal, the project will receive $184 million in loan and price guarantees to subsidize production at $55 per barrel, more than twice the market rate. Moreover, the Energy Department claims that Seep Ridge will offer no technological advance for synfuels development—the technology is already developed.

The Corporation has other turkey projects warming up and ready to sever. The $900 million Union Oil disaster could be finalized, and the Northern Peat project is still waiting in the wings.

Mr. Speaker, this motion to recommit is designed to put things on hold for this week until the Congress can act on a final continuing resolution and let me emphasize to the House that the conferees on the recently defeated continuing resolution agreed to abolish the SFC, that was the original House position supported by a vote of 312 to 111.

This planned action by the Synfuels Corporation is an outrage. It's an insult to this Congress and to the American people. We can't afford to let those bandits raid the Treasury during this short window of vulnerability.

I urge my colleagues to join me in saving millions and millions of the taxpayers' money by adopting this motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to include for the RECORD two letters: one that I wrote to the Synfuels Board Chairman and one from the administration supporting the abolition of the Corporation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET,
Washington, DC, December 12, 1985.

Hon. JAMIE L. WHITTEN,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR JAMIE: The Administration has been requested to state its position on whether or not funding for the Synthetic Fuels Corporation should be continued.

When the Synthetic Fuels Corporation was created in 1980, oil prices were increasing rapidly and were projected to reach $75 to $125 per barrel by 1990. Experts were also predicting future oil shortages and the possibility of increased OPEC control over our energy future. Since oil prices peaked in 1981, the world energy outlook has improved substantially. Oil prices have declined by over 30 percent and because of world-wide overproduction oil prices may go down even further. In addition, our oil imports have declined by over 25 percent since 1980, and the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, now containing nearly 490 million barrels, provides over 300 days of protection if OPEC halted supplies, as opposed to 17 days in 1980.

The Administration believes these fundamental changes make it impossible for a commercial synthetic fuels industry to develop without enormous budget outlays that would not be offset by any economic benefits.

In addition, passage of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation and our need to reduce the Federal deficit requires us to reduce unnecessary government spending. Accordingly, the Administration no longer believes that continued funding of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation serves any useful purpose. Moreover, the Administration now supports efforts to rescind all funding available to the Corporation and opposes any efforts to use such monies to fund any other programs.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES C. MILLER III,
Director.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS,
Washington, DC, December 16, 1985.

Mr. EDWARD E. NOBLE,
Chairman of the Board, Synthetic Fuels Corporation, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. NOBLE: As the senior House Republican conferee on H.J. Res. 465, the continuing resolution for fiscal year 1986, I wanted to advise you of the conferees' actions with regard to the Synthetic Fuels Corporation.

Although the conference report has not yet been ratified by the full House or Senate, the conferees have at least tentatively agreed that no further funds should be obligated by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, effective immediately. In light of this agreement, I would request that the Corporation's consideration of an award of financial assistance for the Seep Ridge oil shale project, which is scheduled for consideration by the Board on December 17th, be postponed until further notice. Under the circumstances, consideration of this project would be inconsistent with Congressional intent with regard to the termination of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation's program.

I would appreciate your apprising me of your intentions with regard to consideration of this project.

With my thanks for your consideration, and my best wishes, I am

Cordially yours,

SILVIO O. CONTE,
Ranking Minority Member.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CONTE. Sure.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the distinguished ranking member if there is not a possibility some way of saving the basic legislation to maintain a possibility of keeping Synfuels as an idea. Get rid of the Board, get rid of all the bad things that have taken place and all the things that they have done, but keep the legislation intact, because if those long gas lines ever start again, and the gentleman and I know they will, we will never get this bill through again because of all the trouble we had to get it through in the first place.

Mr. CONTE. Well, under the Interior bill that we reached an agreement on, we put in $10 million to terminate the Synfuels Corporation and there is $750 million, $400 million appropriated and $350 million put in reserve for clean coal technology.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment and I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. STRANGE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Mississippi.

I would like to take exception to a couple comments made by my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts, regarding the use of oil shale synthetic fuel funds in Colorado.

I think it is important for the Members to know that not one single penny of Federal funds or taxpayers' dollars has been spent in the State of Colorado on synfuels in the last 15 years.

Mr. CONTE. Let us keep it that way.

Mr. STRANG. I would like to point out that the Union Oil Co. has spent nearly $1 billion of their own money in order to make it possible for this country to know that it can have a commercial process when the plug is pulled in 1993.

I think it is a shame to use this kind of number juggling, smoke screens and mirrors, to save moneys that are not going to be spent.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, may I say, when this was raised the other day on the floor by my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts, there was no objection to his amendment at that time.

It was found, however, that if it were adopted, the leadership on the Republican side of the other body said they would not consider it. For that reason, we objected to it at that time.

Now, may I ask my colleague if he has an arrangement on the Senate side so that they will go along with this motion and the resolution?

I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CONTE. We are working with them right now, may I say to the Chairman. I hope we can resolve it real quickly. This only does what was in the old continuing resolution.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention to the fact that we did not object the other day.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Mississippi yield to me for 30 seconds?

Mr. WHITTEN. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

□ 1105

Mr. CONTE. This Union Oil deal in Colorado, they have a letter of intent out there for $900 million for Colorado, and that shale is going to produce oil at $72 a barrel. I just hope that Colorado keeps paying for it themselves.

Mr. WHITTEN. May I say to my colleague, our good friend, the gentleman from Texas, JACK BROOKS, got us off to a good start today so let us keep in that frame of mind.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule XV, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question of the passage of the joint resolution.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 392, nays 20, answered "present" 1, not voting 21, as follows:

□ 1140

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Judiciary Favorably reports the bill, H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985.

One of the new dangers that our Nation's police officers face as they patrol our streets and highways, and investigate the activities of racketeers and drug traffickers, is that the criminals are arming themselves with what are called cop-killer bullets—ammunition that is specially designed to penetrate their protective armor.

This bill reflects almost 4 years of work on this problem by the Subcommittee on Crime, the Committee on the Judiciary, and the administration. The result is a balanced, workable bill that will provide law enforcement officers with protection from armor-piercing ammunition and which in no way will interfere with sportsmen and hunters.

The ammunition covered by the bill is carefully and narrowly defined, and has no sporting purpose. The bill would prohibit the manufacture, importation, and sale of this ammunition except for limited purposes of Government use, testing and research, or for export.

While we don't know exactly how much armor-piercing ammunition is now available on dealers' shelves, the administration's experts have said that several million rounds could be available. It is this ammunition, now on dealers' shelves, which presents the greatest danger to our Nation's police officers.

Legitimate ammunition manufacturers who make this type of ammunition have voluntarily agreed to restrict sale only for law enforcement purposes. Although they are not legally bound by those agreements, as a practical matter, these manufacturers are not now a source of this ammunition for criminal use. This legislation would convert those voluntary agreements into a statutory ban.

The danger faced by police is from the armor-piercing ammunition already in circulation. This bill gives the Secretary of the Treasury the ability to prevent its sale to the general public after the Secretary sends a notice to licensed dealers which adequately identifies this ammunition.

This bill will give our Nation's police officers, and I might add, high Government officials, as well, an important added margin of safety.

At the suggestion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] we have added a single word amendment to clarify the civil prohibition on sale of this ammunition that licensed dealers are subject to the civil sanctions under this act if they "willfully transfer" the armor-piercing ammunition.

The courts consistently urge Congress to state clearly what we mean when we use the term "willfully." Since this is an administrative provision, not a criminal provision, we are using the term "willfully" with the same meaning the Supreme Court found when it decided the civil case of United States versus Illinois Central Railroad Co., that a person acts willfully who "either intentionally disre-gards the statute or is plainly indifferent to its requirements" (303 United States Reports at page 243 (1938)).

I want to commend to the House the intrepid determination of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] who originally authored this legislation over 6 years ago. As the most decorated police officer in the history of the city of New York when he retired, wounded some 10 times in the line of duty, he, more than any Member of this House, fully comprehends the importance of this legislation. It has been a pleasure and an inspiration to work with him on this bill.

I want to thank the gentleman from Florida, BILL MCCOLLUM, the ranking Republican on the Crime Subcommittee, who offered several very important amendments to this bill in subcommittee which have further improved it.

I want to acknowledge our thanks to the distinguished chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RODINO] for his support and leadership in expeditiously moving this legislation through committee and to the floor.

I also want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] for his outstanding work on this legislation, his extensive testimony which was really most helpful to us, and for his contribution in resolving the prohibition on sale of armor-piercing bullets.

I also want to acknowledge the contribution of our former colleague from Michigan, Hal Sawyer, who was the ranking member of the Crime Subcommittee in the last two Congresses. He, too, deserves a great deal of credit for helping to fashion this legislation. Hal is quite an accomplished sportsman and hunter. His firsthand experience was an enormous aid to the subcommittee in the 97th and 98th Congresses in understanding these issues and developing this legislation.

This is a good, balanced bill. It is desperately needed by the Nation's law enforcement officers. I urge the House of Representatives to pass this important legislation today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to support the armor- piercing bullet legislation before the House today. H.R. 3132 is a measure supported by police organizations across the country. By passing this legislation the House of Representatives will once again indicate its support for these public servants. Surely no one is more deserving of our help than those who risk their own personal safety to make our communities safer, more pleasant places to live. The law enforcement community must continue to receive not only our appreciation, but also our assistance.

H.R. 3132 will ban the production and importation of bullets that pierce solid armor. Thus, the most dangerous bullets will be stricken from the marketplace. Although this measure does not eliminate all bullets with a potential to pierce soft body armor, it offers protection to police from the bullets with the greatest penetration capability.

H.R. 3132 also stiffens the existing mandatory sentences for the use of these bullets in the commission of a violent Federal felony.

The one remaining controversy has been eliminated through discussions between Mr. BROOKS who is the sponsor of the administration supported bill, H.R. 13, and the sponsor of H.R. 3132, Mr. BIAGGI along with the chairman of the Crime Subcommittee, Mr. HUGHES. They are to be commended for this effort. That disagreement stemmed from the honest conflict of interest between the law enforcement concern for older armor-piercing bullets now in the inventory of dealers, and the unfairness of punishing dealers who are truly unable to distinguish the offensive bullets from ordinary bullets. The compromise will punish dealers only if they sell armor-piercing bullets willfully.

I am happy to support this compromise although I would have preferred to consider this bill under an open rule. I offered a similar proposal earlier in this Congress, but the time was not yet ripe for compromise. I am pleased to hear that this agreement was reached.

Mr. Speaker, I am also happy to be here for another reason. In this Congress, I have the privilege of being the ranking Republican on the Subcommittee on Crime and today marks the first time this year that the distinguished chairman, Mr. HUGHES, and I have brought a measure from our subcommittee to the House of Representatives. It is a pleasure to join him in this effort today, and I look forward to many return visits. As the chairman has noted many times, the fight against crime is a bipartisan one.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the full Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RODINO].

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of the bill, H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985.

This bill will help to protect the Nation's law enforcement officers from one of the most serious dangers that they face in the line of duty, the threat of armor-piercing ammunition.

Mr. Speaker, let's put this issue in perspective. Every day, over one-half million men and women in our Nation's law enforcement agencies put their lives in potential jeopardy as they patrol our neighborhoods to make sure that we, and our families, are safe. The danger that police face is part of the job, but already this year, 73 police officers have been killed in the line of duty. Not only is there the danger of death, of course, but hundreds of police officers are maimed or crippled each year by being shot in the line of duty. Living with this constant danger creates enormous health-threatening stress.

We must also understand that the fear that a police officer may be shot is also an extremely serious problem for the spouses, children, and parents of law enforcement officers. They suffer even if their loved ones are never shot or wounded.

Policemen and their families all suffer a great deal in order to protect us, and it is our obligation to do everything that is reasonable to protect them.

The greatest threat of death in the line of duty comes from criminals armed with handguns. Fifty-three of the police officers already killed this year were killed with handguns. In recent years, principally to protect against the threat of handguns, we have equipped law enforcement officers with lightweight garments that can resist penetration by many types of ammunition fired from a handgun. We have saved the lives of well over 400 law enforcement officers from the attacks of armed criminals. Unfortunately there is ammunition now available which is designed to penetrate these protective garments. Sale of this armor-piercing ammunition is now totally uncontrolled. In numerous instances, we have found that criminals have armed themselves with armor-piercing ammunition, known on the streets as cop-killer bullets.

H.R. 3132 would prohibit the manufacture, importation, and sale of this ammunition except for limited purposes of government use, testing and research, or for export. Armor-piercing ammunition is carefully and narrowly defined in this bill, and the term does not apply to any ammunition which has a sporting purpose. Therefore, nothing is taken away from sportsmen. But this bill will give everything to some of our Nation's police officers—the saving of their lives.

I urge the House to pass this long overdue legislation.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains on this side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has 13 minutes remaining.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I join my colleagues in supporting the legislation to ban the manufacture, importation and sale of armor-piercing ammunition. I first learned about this threat when, as a member of the Subcommittee on Crime during the 97th Congress, I heard testimony on this issue as it was presented to the Congress for the first time. It was clear then, as it is now, that a solution to this problem would not be simple or easy.

Armor-piercing ammunition, known as cop-killer bullets, poses a serious threat to the law enforcement community, and a timely solution became essential. These persons dedicate their lives to our communities, and their protection is of the highest priority. With this goal in mind, I introduced legislation in the 98th Congress to ban armor-piercing ammunition. Then, during the 2d session of the last Congress, the aministration came forward with an excellent bill, which I was proud to cosponsor. This measure was reintroduced as H.R. 13, by Congressman BROOKS, and I again joined as a principal sponsor.

One major difference remains between H.R. 13 and the bill adopted by the Committee on the Judiciary, H.R. 3132. H.R. 3132 requires the Department of the Treasury to issue a list of prohibited armor-piercing bullets to licensed dealers. Then the bill would subject a licensed dealer to a loss of his license, and thus a loss of livelihood, if the dealer sells armor-piercing ammunition left in his inventory from prior to 1982, when these bullets were freely manufactured in an often indistinguishable manner. H.R. 13 does not impose this liability. Its companion, S. 104, in the other body imposes liability only on dealers who willfully sell armor-piercing ammunition.

I believe that the administration language is superior, and would have preferred that this important legislation be considered under an open rule so that we would have an opportunity to consider the text of H.R. 13 and its companion from the other body. However, it is my understanding that Mr. BROOKS and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime have reached a compromise that addresses the one remaining issue of the liability of dealers regarding the unmarked armor-piercing ammunition in their current inventories. Under this compromise dealers will not be liable unless they willfully sell the banned ammunition, in the sense of intentionally disregarding the statute or are plainly indifferent to its requirements.

With this change, this legislation will protect our police officers in a manner that will not impose unfair punishment on innocent dealers. Thus I am proud to support this important measure, and I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for H.R. 3132.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI].

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, as author of this bill, H.R. 3132, I would like to thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding me this time, and also take this occasion to commend him for his leadership and for his complete support and integrity in the pursuit of this objective. Without the gentleman's assistance and leadership, we would not have come to this point. I would like to also thank the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. RODINO, as well as the ranking minority member of the Crime Subcommittee, Mr. MCCOLLUM, for their leadership and important contributions to this legislative effort.

Six years ago this issue was brought to my attention by the New York City Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. They informed me that the city of New York had become the "dumping ground" for the armor-piercing bullet, something that we were not aware of. Policemen's lives were jeopardized beyond the extent that we would ordinarily expect.

Many of these bullets were in existence before the bullet-proof vest. Conflict came with the development of the bullet-proof vest. And clearly something had to be done. We tested the armor-piercing bullet and their ability to penetrate the body armor that was being supplied by the taxpayers, by volunteer groups and by the police themselves.

I have a vest here that graphically and clearly indicates the awesome power of this type of bullet. This test has been repeated many times. The bullet went through the front panel, and equivalent of body substance, the rear panel, and then penetrated one and one-half telephone books of New York size, which is about 2 inches in depth. That test clearly demonstrates the awesome power of these projectiles.

I think we as members of the House, had an obligation to respond. I started on that effort some 6 years ago. We have some half million law enforcement personnel out there wearing these vests. They have a right to believe that they will be afforded the kind of protection that we would like them to have.

By passing this legislation which I have authored, we can assure them with greater certainty that that protection will be forthcoming.

Yes, I know some people will argue that no police officer was killed wearing a bullet-proof vest. That is correct. But the demonstrations indicate clearly that were they wearing bullet-proof vests, they would have been killed. There were 2 police officers killed in Florida with the use of armor-piercing bullets. Were they wearing vests—they were not in that case—clearly they would have been killed, in any event, given the demonstrations of penetrability we have had.

That is the moral obligation we have as Members of Congress, and as a society.

There are others who argue that we should not prohibit the total sale, only prohibit the future sale. We tell you that there are at least 2 million rounds of bullets out there. That is an estimate given by the Treausry Department. The police feel that this is an essential part of this legislative effort.

For the first time the police of our Nation have unified and taken the position of support that is so essential in this conflict.

I do not think it is necessary, Mr. Speaker, to make the point of the power of these bullets, but let me tell you there are 18 documented cases of criminal use of cop-killer bullets. James Huberty last year in the McDonald's restaurant in California fired 192 armor-piercing bullets. The Drug Enforcement Administration told Customs in a telegram, that notorious drug trafficking organizations have begun to arm its members with teflon-coated armor-piercing bullets.

I will sum up: The facts are there. We have told them to you. You have read them in the papers. There is editorial support across the Nation. Your own sense of morality tells you and mandates that the law enforcement official that you support in your mind and heart and admire and respect should be given this additional respect.

I made this plea to you. You can make a very substantial contribution to make certain that fewer policemen die, not simply be there at their funerals and give sympathy to the survivors. Save those lives, assure those police officers out there that we care in a real and substantive way. I urge that we pass this legislation. I know I have kept faith with those former colleagues in the police department who have given their lives and those who continue to serve us. Let us, as Members of Congress, not break faith with loyal members of the law enforcement family.

Mr. Speaker, as the proud author of H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act, I implore my colleagues to follow the strong recommendation of the Judiciary Committee and support this legislation. Passage of H.R. 3132 would be the most important action Congress has taken on behalf of police since passage of the 1976 Public Safety Officers Death Benefits Act. I take special pride in sponsoring this legislation because of my own 23 year career with the New York City Police Department.

The issue is really quite simple. Armor-piercing ammunition is not used for any sporting or other legitimate purpose. However, it does pose a very serious threat to police lives because it can pierce the bullet resistant vests worn by more than half of our Nation's 570,000 law enforcement officers. These so-called "cop killer" bullets, which were originally made for police use, should not be available to the general public. Yet, they are—at local gun shops throughout the country.

H.R. 3132 would ban the manufacture, importation and sale of armor-piercing ammunition, except for police and military use, export, or testing and experimentation authorized by the Treasury Secretary. The bill defines armor-piercing ammunition as those bullets made of certain hard metals: Tungsten alloys, steel, iron, brass, bronze beryllium copper, or uranium.

This legislation was carefully crafted after more than 6 years of research and important contributions from many, including the law enforcement community and the Reagan administration. The bill has 113 cosponsors from both sides of the aisle and it was unanimously approved by the House Judiciary Committee.

Significantly, it has the full support of every major law enforcement group in our Nation. Those groups, who have worked long and hard for this bill's passage, include the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the Fraternal Order of Police, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, the International Union of Police Associations/AFL-CIO, the National Association of Police Organizations, the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives, the National Sheriffs' Association, the National Troopers' Coalition, the Police Executive Research Forum, the Police foundation, and the United Federation of Police.

It should be noted, Mr. Speaker, that these police groups have strongly and consistently emphasized the need to ban the sale of existing armor-piercing bullets, as well as any new cop killer bullets. H.R. 3132 reflects this concern.

Let me reiterate that while this legislation will save police lives, it will not, I repeat, will not, infringe in any way on the rights of legitimate gun users—rights I fully support. In fact, the bill specifically states that any bullets "primarily intended to be used for sporting purposes" would not be banned.

Although national crime statistics do not show whether a bullet used in a crime is armor-piercing or otherwise, I have documented evidence of 18 cases between 1966 and 1984 where criminals have either used or possessed armor-piercing ammunition. These facts clearly support my contention that cop killer bullets benefits only one element of our society—the criminal element.

But we should not have to cite a rash of police shootings to justify the need for this legislation. We should be doing everything possible to prevent police deaths instead of waiting for them to happen.

In the strongest possible terms, I urge my colleagues to vote to save police lives—vote for H.R. 3132.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LUNGREN], a distinguished member of the subcommittee.

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Speaker, I would first like to take the opportunity to commend both the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], for their determination to address this threat posed to the law enforcement community by armor-piercing bullets. It is certainly an appropriate expression of our support for law enforcement to ensure that those who are charged with the responsibility of protecting our communities are not exposed to the enhanced danger posed by this ammunition.

At the same time, a certain sensitivity is required with respect to small retail ammunition dealers who might unwittingly sell this proscribed ordnance due to difficulties in identification. We have never intended to reach those without any degree of culpability.

The focus of the debate has heretofore involved an effort to accommodate these different but nonetheless legitimate policy interests. As reported by our committee, H.R. 3132 would have provided that before a merchant could be charged he must have notice from BATF adequately identifying that the ammunition in question is armor piercing. By contrast, companion legislation in the other body would only reach willful sales of such ammunition. The bill offered by our colleague from Texas, on behalf of the administration, would have regulated the manufacturer and importation of ammunition designed as armor piercing but not the sale of such ammunition.

In fact, as I understand it, for a number of years during the course of the development of this bill, the NRA was opposed to it because of the problem of the degree of culpability required. It is my understanding, however, that the principal sponsors have crafted a compromise that satisfies the concerns earlier expressed by the NRA and others and that this would still reach the importation, manufacture or sale of armor-piercing ammunition. Specifically with regard to retail transactions, there is a requirement that has been added that a willful violation is necessary before anyone could be proscribed by the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this particular question came to my attention about 6 years ago in comments I received from my brother, who was then a member of the Los Angeles Police Department, describing the fear with which police officers saw this type of ammunition, this armor-piercing ammunition. They were extremely concerned about it. Initially, this was designed for use by police officers. Very few departments actually used this. Some have it available to them. They cannot control the danger of an errant shot because of the tremendous ability of this to do damage and, therefore, they generally do not use it. At the same time, they found themselves faced with the use by others.

Some people say you could use other types of bulletproof vests by police officers that would be stronger and could stop this type of ammunition from piercing the equipment. Unfortunately that is so cumbersome, so burdensome, that it is the type of bulletproof vest that officers would never use. The type they do use, the type that has been purchased for them not only by the funds made available by local entities but also by voluntary organizations, does not stop this from penetration.

It seems to me we have made a reasonable accommodation to the legitimate concerns earlier expressed, and I would hope we would give unanimous support for this particular bill. I urge my colleagues to support this very timely piece of legislation.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H.R. 3132—the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985—and urge its passage. This bill is essentially the same as legislation I introduced in this and the last Congress. These bills offer protection to our law enforcement officers by banning ammunition which is armor piercing. Soft body armor is credited with saving the lives of many of our Nation's law enforcement officers. These bills seek to ensure the continued utility of lifesaving armor vests by deterring the availability and use of ammunition designed to penetrate armor, while at the same time not unreasonably impacting on the legitimate interests of America's sporting and hunting community.

My bill and the committee bill would regulate the manufacture and importation of ammunition which is designed as armor piercing. They would amend title 18 of the United States Code to prohibit the manufacture and importation of armor-piercing ammunition except for law enforcement, military, and export purposes. The manufacture or importation for these permissible uses is then regulated through the licensing and fee provisions of the Gun Control Act of 1965.

Further, both bills provide for a 5-year minimum prison sentence for the possession or use of armor-piercing ammunition during the commission of a violent felony. This will ensure a stiff punishment for any criminal who resorts to the use of armor-piercing ammunition.

I am pleased to note that this bill contains an intent standard in its sale provision. As reported from the Judiciary Committee, H.R. 3132 had no intent standard in its provisions penalizing the sale of armor-piercing ammunition. I along with 14 other members of the Judiciary Committee expressed our concerns with this deficiency in the bill, and requested the opportunity to secure amendments if necessary. This bill incorporates a willful standard and therefore corrects that problem.

I would like to acknowledge the efforts and hard work of all those involved with this important legislation. America's law enforcement and sporting and hunting communities have come together to develop a measure that is broadly supported. I look forward to its quick enactment into law.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. SHAW. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me to speak on this most important bill.

Mr. Speaker, I will not stand here and describe the bill. It has been adequately described by the gentleman from Texas, immediately preceding me, it has been described by the chairman of the subcommittee, as well as the ranking minority member.

I think that the graphic display that the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] gave to us and his personal experience with actually being on the line is all that the full House needs in order to pass this most important bill.

It is absolutely necessary that we just not give lipservice to the policemen, law enforcement officials, both at the Federal, State, and local level, but that we support them very visibly with legislation such as that which is before us.

The ammunition that we are attempting to take off of the shelves and out of the hands of the general public has absolutely no purpose, no lawful purpose, whatsoever for the general public. It is a danger to law enforcement officials. I would ask the House to pass this by an overwhelming margin.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WRIGHT], the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the House leadership I should like to commend the committee for having brought this bill to the House floor and commend the bill to the favorable consideration of all the membership.

This should be a major initiative of this Congress. We must deprive criminals the use and easy availability of the fiendishly deadly cop-killer bullets. If there is any one fear that gnaws at the minds of the American people, it is the fear that law and order no longer prevail. This bill will correct one of the terrible inadequacies in the protection we have afforded in the past for those who offer their very lives to protect the public order.

The time is overdue to outlaw the manufacture and sale of a terrible, deadly menace to our society—armor-piercing ammunition. Such ammunition has no place on the streets of our cities, in the hands of hoodlums or terrorists or dealers in drugs who seek by its use to thwart the best efforts of law enforcement.

Every major law enforcement organization in this country supports passage of this measure. Sportsmen do not oppose it. The National Rifle Association endorses it. Members of the House can and should support it.

We often distinguish America from totalitarian countries by saying that ours is a nation of laws, not of men. That is true, of course. But it is true also that our laws must be enforced and in a democracy it takes dedicated men and women to perform that all-important task.

Under the best of circumstances, law enforcement officials have a difficult enough time keeping the peace. Organized crime and random street crimes keep the average police department and the average police officer busy enough. The work is already dangerous enough. Now law enforcement faces this insidious new threat.

Armor-piercing bullets, increasingly used as the ammunition of choice by drug traffickers and other criminal elements, now threaten the very lives of police officers, even when they are equipped with state-of-the-art bullet-proof vests. These bullets threaten to undermine further the confidence of the American people that the rule of law can and will be enforced in America.

Too many Americans, having watched crime rates soar, have become afflicted by a dread disease called fear—fear that someday they or someone they love will become a victim of violent crime. We must therefore, give police officers the tools they need to fight crime. They have been given the tough job of protecting us—our families and our communities. They, in turn, need the protection of society. That's what this bill will provide. It is in every sense a police protection bill. It protects the police and it helps the police to protect the wider community.

Passage of this bill will put cop-killers on notice: We will not allow law enforcement officers to be intimidated, maimed, or warntonly slain by members of the criminal underclass. Americans understand that law enforcement is what stands between them and the law of the jungle.

The facts speak for themselves. In the past year, 73 police officers have been killed in the line of duty, 53 of them cut down violently by a bullet fired from a handgun. Bulletproof vests are designed to protect against handguns, and armor-piercing bullets are designed to penetrate bullet proof vests. It's a vicious cycle of criminal one-upsmanship.

Outlawing this deadly ammunition is the best way we have to break that vicious cycle at a point that favors those who enforce the law against those who violate the law.

When I was a very small boy, my mother taught me: "The policeman is your friend." I grew up believing that, and I still believe it today. Passage of this bill today will send an important signal to policemen and police women across the country. It will say to them that we regard them as our friends—the friends of law and order—and that we will continue to give them the vital support they need in the war against crime. I urge my colleagues to give this important legislation our overwhelming support.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG].

H.R. 3132

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, no one grieves more than this member when a member of our law-enforcement community—a frontline fighter in the war against crime—is killed or injured while defending the rights of peaceful citizens.

Less than 1 month ago, Baltimore city policeman Vincent J. Adolpho was killed while wearing a Kevlar bullet-resistant vest. According to newspaper accounts, he was shot by a man with a long criminal record, a man free on parole at the time he is accused of murdering Officer Adolpho.

To the best of my knowledge, that was the first time an officer was killed by a bullet which penetrated his bullet-resistant vest.

It is to prevent such tragedies that this bill was drafted. But the bill before you would have had absolutely no effect upon Officer Adolpho's murder, for it does nothing to discourage the shooting of police officers.

It could. We could write a bill demanding a mandatory death sentence for the deliberate killing of any police officer in the rightful performance of his duty. But this bill doesn't do that.

Instead this bill bans the commercial manufacture and sale of a particular type of bullet—bullets with a hard metal core, bullets like the no-longer-made KTW bullet.

Such bullets are easily capable of penetrating kevlar vests.

But that wasn't the kind of bullet used to kill Officer Adolpho. According to the newspapers, he was killed with a 357 magnum pistol, with conventional ammunition which his vest was not designed to resist.

If he had been wearing a newer, type II vest, Officer Adolpho probably would have survived the attack with a 357 magnum.

But he would have died if the criminal had been armed with the more powerful 44 magnum—which the type II vest is not designed to stop.

That's the problem with this bill. It attempts to control criminal behavior by controlling little pieces of metal. That approach is what gun control is all about—and this bill, like all other forms of gun control will fail to achieve its stated objective.

While this body has been arguing about controlling inanimate objects, we have been successfully sidetracked from discussions of controlling criminals.

□ 1210

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAIG. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BIAGGI. The case the gentleman mentioned, the body armor that officer was wearing was 9 kevlar; it should have been at least 18 kevlar, which is being used in most cities.

It is unfortunate that that body armor was inadequate to begin with. I never for a moment said that this legislation will be the alpha and omega.

Mr. CRAIG. I know and I did not accuse you of that, sir. I appreciate the explanation. The bottom line was that a bullet did penetrate his chest, a 357 magnum bullet, and he was killed.

Mr. Speaker, further, by all the discussion of what type of bullet will penetrate what type of vest—discussions that have been played upon in newspapers and on television for the last 3 or 4 years—we have educated the criminals to the fact that police officers are wearing so-called bullet-proof vests.

And we have educated those criminals to the fact that the so-called Saturday Night Special low-powered handguns will not penetrate even the least-protected policeman.

So we have initiated an arms race between policemen and criminals. According to a Justice Department study released in October, professional criminals—like the one who murdered Officer Adolpho—are shunning the low-powered Saturday Night Special, once reported to be the favorite weapon of criminals, and are now using guns as powerful or more powerful than those carried by police.

The evidence of the accuracy of that study is the fact that Officer Adolpho was murdered with a 357 magnum.

Those who have educated the criminals about so-called cop-killer bullets share the blame for Officer Adolpho's murder.

But those advocates of ever-more gun control immediately began demanding the prohibition of private ownership of any gun or ammunition that will penetrate any policeman's vests.

No kevlar vest designed for continuous wear will reliably stop high-powered handgun bullets, and they will not stop any modern center-fire rifle bullet.

This bill would prohibit one type of bullet that will penetrate a kevlar vest, but it will do nothing about the many other bullets that will do the same thing.

If this bill were to pass, and if another Officer Adolpho were killed under the same circumstances, with exactly the same type of ammunition, would this body then attempt to ban a major portion of the guns and ammunition possessed by law-abiding citizens?

That's the logical next step of the useless bill before you.

Or is this body going to at that time begin addressing the real problem—the shooting of police officers?

You may think this bill does something, but it doesn't. It may make some law enforcement officers think they're safer, but they won't be.

All it does is postpone the time when you're going to have to do something about the killing of law enforcement officers—with any weapon.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, as a former sheriff, I would like to respond to the last comment. There is an old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." I think that is what the police officers need. Meting out punishment in itself after the fact becomes more philosophical at that point, although I would favor those tough penalties.

I would like to commend Mr. BIAGGI, Chairman HUGHES, Chairman RODINO for the long fight. I would also like to say shame on Congress for taking 6 years in this area. This is not a complex issue. This saves policemen's lives and it deals with that issue in advance and attempts to prevent those from happening.

Mr. Speaker, one thing: When a criminal, under duress, attacks, they shoot at a mass, contrary to what the old western movies have as a scenario. They do not shoot people right between the eyes.

This particular measure offers some basic protection for policemen in carrying out and dispatching the duties of their particular office. I think that is very important for them. Finally, it would be a shame to see our President perhaps hurt like policemen, due to our inaction. We have a shot here today to really make an impact, and save lives!

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this much needed piece of legislation. At this point I would like to commend the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] for his years of hard work and commitment to this important legislative initiative. The legislation we have before us today is the result of years of hard work and dedicated effort. While I am pleased to see this body finally consider this measure, I think it is tragic that this initiative has been stalled and put off for so many years. I was honored to be one of the bill's first cosponsors this Congress and to have been a part of the effort to get this bill passed.

As a former law enforcement officer, I am well aware of the everyday perils and dangers facing law enforcement officers. It is a demanding job, one in which you put your life on the line every day. Clearly, it is a tough job. I believe that we here in the Congress must do all we can to protect our law enforcement officers through tough and effective legislative measures. I strongly support stiff sentences for those who commit violent crimes and the death penalty for those who kill a law enforcement officer. Today we have before us a measure that will undoubtedly save police lives in the future by taking off the market awesome projectiles that pierce the protective armor worn by our Nation's law enforcement officers.

H.R. 3132, aptly called the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985, would prohibit the manufacture, importation and sale of specially designed armor-piercing ammunition capable of penetrating bullet proof vests. Most importantly, H.R. 3132 represents years of hard work and struggle in order to ensure that only those bullets that pose a threat to our law enforcement community are affected. The bill clearly defines armor-piercing ammunition and it expands existing law so that any person who commits a crime of violence using a firearm and in the possession of armor-piercing ammunition would be subject to a mandatory-minimum, 5-year prison sentence.

H.R. 3132 is an essential piece of legislation. Over 235,000 law enforcement officers across the country wear bullet proof vests. Every day that armor-piercing ammunition remains on shelves of gun stores across America, these officers are threatened. Here is a unique opportunity for Congress to act to avert any future tragedies. My experience as a law enforcement officer taught me that the criminal community is becoming more and more "sophisticated" in their approach to crime. Many criminals now wear bullet proof vests when they commit violent acts. Because law enforcement officials do not use armor-piercing ammunition—because of the awesome power of these bullets they pose an unacceptable threat to the general public, that is, they can easily plow through walls and cars—a very possible scenario could pit criminals and police in a shoot out—both wearing bullet proof vests—but with the criminals using armor-piercing ammunition.

That indeed is an ugly scenario—but failure to act today to pass H.R. 3132 could result in that scenario becoming a tragic reality. H.R. 3132 would effectively remove from the market these bullets and prevent criminals from having access to them. The issue here is clear cut and obvious: police protection. This bill has the support of every major law enforcement organization in the country. Police officers across the country have wanted this legislation passed for some time now. The time has come for Congress to finally act on this measure and make a firm statement that it is committed to doing everything in its power as a legislative body to protect America's brave corps of law enforcement officers.

I am proud to stand here today in support of this measure and I urge all of my colleagues to lend their support to H.R. 3132.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE].

Mr. CRANE. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3132, the Law Officers Protection Act of 1985. The very title of this legislation is a misnomer, since to the best of my knowledge, no police officer has been shot and killed by armor piercing ammunition that has penetrated soft body armor. Yet, the very aim of this bill is to make unavailable to the public ammunition capable of penetrating the soft body armor worn for protection by many police officers in the United States.

Due to the near impossibility of defining with any precision what types of ammunition should be banned, this legislation could subject a wide range of conventional ammo used for sporting purposes to a possible sales ban. The armor-piercing qualities depend upon the type of jacket, the shape of the bullet, the amount of propellant, barrel length, muzzle velocity, and a host of other factors. Clearly it would be extremely difficult and expensive to determine where to draw the armor-piercing line. This inconvenience and expense would be dumped on the lawful American gunowner.

It is also relevant to note that about 2 years ago, in response to the very concerns that initiated this legislation, the manufacturers of the most commonly accepted types of armor-piercing ammunition agreed to limit its distribution directly to police departments, the military, and foreign governments. If this ammunition isn't available to the public as a result of the self-imposed restrictions by the manufacturers, what then is the need for the legislation in question?

In 1984, the Department of Treasury testified in opposition to an almost identical piece of legislation to H.R. 3132, stating that: "This legislation contains a cumbersome, imprecise and costly regulatory process which would be extremely difficult to enforce and in the long run would have little or no impact on police officer safety." Past experience has shown that a determined criminal can and will obtain any type of ammunition through illegal means. Laws such as H.R. 3132 provide little deterrent to hardened criminals. A much more effective deterrent would be legislation to make it a Federal crime, with lengthy nonparoleable sentences, to use a firearms against law enforcement personnel who are in the performance of their duties.

Finally, if this legislation were to pass, then it would be very easy to find reasons to ban more and more categories of ammunition. One should not be misled by the title of this bill. Rather than a police officer protection bill, H.R. 3132 appears to be an attempt to infringe upon the rights of the lawful firearm owner and sportsman in America.

I urge my colleagues to support the constitutional rights of American gunowners and vote against H.R. 3132.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] for working with me and our dear friend, Mr. BROOKS on bringing this legislation to the House floor. I also wish to commend my good friend, Mr. BROOKS, for his outstanding leadership in this matter and his diligence in working out a compromise.

I will vote for this legislation and support it with reservations on the ground that the Senate bill possesses language which is far superior, both in terms of protecting police officers and also in terms of protecting the rights of sportsmen and hunters. Most sportsmen do not support enacting legislation to outlaw any type of firearms or projectiles. I, myself, join in that view.

I can inform my colleagues that the National Rifle Association has indicated that they will, although supporting the Senate language and hoping that it can be ultimately adopted, will not oppose this legislation. I submit the NRA's letter to me to this effect for the RECORD.

The gentleman from New Jersey has now agreed to include the word "willfully" in the sales provision of H.R. 3132. In effect this creates a willful intent standard as a threshhold requirement to create culpability for violating the prohibition against the sale of armor-piercing ammunition. This provision was put into the legislation at the request of Mr. BROOKS and myself with the clear intent that a dealer, to be in violation of this act, must know of the consequences of his actions and know that his actions are illegal.

This is not a perfect cure, by all means. But the addition of a willful intent standard will, at least, assure that licensed firearms dealers will not be held to be in violation of the sales prohibition for unwitting, unknowing, or mistaken sales of armor-piercing ammunition.

NATIONAL RIFLE
ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA,
Washington, D.C., December 16, 1985.

Hon. JOHN D. DINGELL,
Rayburn House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN DINGELL: This week you will be considering H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985. We commend Congressman Jack Brooks for his outstanding efforts on behalf of law-abiding gun owners in his insistence on the addition of a "willful" intent requirement. While this does not cure all the concerns we have with this legislation, the acceptance of the Brooks' Amendment constitutes a major improvement.

Accordingly, the National Rifle Association will not oppose passage of H.R. 3132, if the Brooks' "willful" intent Amendment is incorporated into the legislation. However, we will continue to seek, in conference, to further modify the legislation to conform with the provisions of S. 104, as unanimously reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee. We continue to believe that the Senate version of the bill provides additional protections needed to insure that the law-abiding citizen is not penalized.

Again, we commend Congressman Brooks for his strong support, and believe his Amendment greatly improves this legislation.

Sincerely,

J. WARREN CASSIDY,
Executive Director,
Institute for Legislative Action.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. VOLKMER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the gentleman in his remarks with reference to the Senate bill. I thank the gentleman very much for his leadership in this matter.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I would love to yield to my good friend. I just cannot, and I apologize to him.

□ 1220

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 additional seconds to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] so I can respond on the question of "willful."

If the gentleman will yield, as the gentleman knows, we are talking about administrative procedure.

Mr. DINGELL. That is correct.

Mr. HUGHES. I indicated in my opening statement that it was the intent of the chairman to equate that with the civil case of the United States versus Illinois Central Railroad Co. defining "willfully" in the civil context as intentionally disregarding the statute where it is plainly indifferent to its requirements.

Mr. DINGELL. And knowledge of the existence of the statute?

Mr. HUGHES. Well, the law requires in the first place that the BATF in the Department of the Treasury provide the dealers with notice of the exact ammunition that is banned.

Mr. DINGELL. The case the gentleman cites, U.S. versus Illinois Central Railroad was decided in 1938 and involves a transportation statute totally unrelated to the section of the code we are dealing with. Although the willful intent standard articulated in the Illinois Central case is interesting, it provides only a partial explanation of willfulness. I believe more recently decided cases dealing with section 923 of title 18 of the code—the very section amended by this legislation—provides a more illuminating definition of this important standard. In Rich v. United States 383 F. Supp. 797 (1974), involving 18 U.S.C. 923, the court held that:

> The language of section 923(d)(1)(C) when read together with the word "willfully" * * * supports the conclusion that Congress was concerned with purposeful, intentional conduct to be punished by revocation of licenses rather than mere negligence on the part of the licensee.

In a more recent case, Shyda v. Director, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms 448 F. Supp. 409 (1979), the court held that in order to prove a "willful" violation of recordkeeping requirements of the Gun Control Act sufficient to support revocation of a license to sell firearms or ammunition, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms must prove that the licensee knew of his legal obligation and purposely disregarded or was plainly indifferent to recordkeeping requirements.

Considering the fact that these cases provide a definition of "willfulness" in the context of section 923 of title 18, I respectfully submit that the word "willfully" as used in this legislation should be interpreted in a similar manner.

Mr. HUGHES. This is not a criminal statute.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, some Members have raised the question of whether this legislation would prohibit the use of ammunition by the Army's Civilian Marksmanship Program. This is a program set up by the Army which trains young people firearms safety and marksmanship. It is a program which sponsors target shooting and competitive firearms events. I am pleased to say that the bill allows the Secretary of the Treasury to exempt ammunition clearly intended for sporting purposes. This specifically covers instances involving ammunition the Army intends for civilian marksmanship use. Currently, the civilian marksmanship program uses .22 rim fire ammunition, .30 caliber ammunition, and 7.62 ammunition for its competition matches. This ammunition is not armor piercing and is used for sporting purposes. The Civilian Marksmanship Program, however, may be required to use other types of ammunition such as 5.56 millimeter, .223 caliber ammunition for its sporting events. Under the provisions of this legislation, the Secretary would have the authority to exempt this ammunition because it is used for sporting purposes. A letter I received today from the Treasury Department, which must carry out the provisions of this legislation, confirms this interpretation, and I submit the letter for the RECORD.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, DC., December 17, 1985.

Hon. JOHN D. DINGELL,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. DINGELL: This responds to your request for comment on the use of ammunition by the Department of the Army's Civilian Marksmanship Program.

H.R. 3132 would prohibit the importation and manufacture of armor piercing ammunition with certain narrow exceptions. It also provides for license revocation of a Federally licensed dealer who disposes of such ammunition. This bill does not address and therefore does not preclude the military from distributing armor piercing ammunition to those who use such ammunition in conjunction with the Civilian Marksmanship Program.

The statement that the Civilian Marksmanship Program would be adversely affected by the bill is completely erroneous and has no basis. Even so, Secretarial discretion as articulated in Section 2 of the bill would provide for its use.

In summary, the bill does not preclude the military distribution of armor piercing ammunition to those who use such ammunition as part of the Civilian Marksmanship Program.

Sincerely,

EDWARD T. STEVENSON,
Deputy Assistant Secretary (Operations).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, might I inquire how much time each side has remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Each side has 3½ minutes remaining.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT].

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3132, the Law Officers Protection Act of 1985, to outlaw the manufacture, importation, and sale of so-called cop-killer bullets. I would especially like to commend my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] for his many hours of hard work on this bill. As a most highly decorated former New York City law enforcement officer, wounded on several occasions, he knows better than anyone in this chamber the importance of what we do here today. This bill has been 6 years in the making. I am pleased that we are acting on it today and commend the members of the Judiciary Committee who perfected it and bring it to the House floor.

I would like to add that the bill has the strong support of law enforcement groups across the Nation, including all those in my Nassau County, Long Island, New York, district. The men and women who provide law enforcement and put their lives on the line every day deserve the protection this bill affords. There are enough dangerous weapons in the hands of criminals without also giving them access to the armor-piercing bullets this bill would outlaw. I would urge my colleagues to support this bill and send a message to the law enforcement community that the Congress supports their efforts and will do everything it can to protect them from dangerous armor-piercing bullets.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my colleagues in commending the Judiciary Committee for getting out this piece of legislation, and especially my colleague from New York, who has a lot of experience in this matter.

I recognize that this august body has a lot of knowledge about interesting subjects, and we would like to work our will on many people, but this is one sensitive area which concerns the protection of life where we find it so easy to turn this responsibility over to those dedicated people who risk their lives to protect life and property. It seems to me that when they can come together on an issue, after studying it not just in the academies and in the colleges throughout our Nation, but in seeing their brother officers being shot down by this type of dangerous bullet, that the least that we can do is come together and support this legislation which would take these 2 million rounds at least and put a liability on those people who would violate the law and risk the lives of these dedicated public servants.

I want to thank the committee for considering this bill.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. NIELSON].

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I would like to engage the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] in a colloquy.

I would like to inquire of the gentleman: A constituent of mine, who has an ammunition manufacturing plant, has expressed concern that H.R. 3132, the Law Officers Protection Act of 1985, will extend its definition of armor-piercing ammunition to include products he manufactures for big-game hunting. I would like to inquire if, as he understands the intent of the bill, ammunition used solely for sporting purposes would be exempt from the definition of "armor piercing" included in the bill.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Yes; I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I call the gentleman's attention to page 3 of the bill, the language in section 2. It specifically provides that the Secretary shall determine whether or not it is "primarily intended to be used for sporting purposes."

In other words, exempted from the provisions of the bill was any "ammunition * * * which the Secretary determines is primarily intended to be used for sporting purposes."

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Then might I inquire of the gentleman: It is my understanding that the legislation charges the Secretary of Treasury with the responsibility of making sure that ammunition intended purely for sporting purposes is not prohibited under this legislation. Is that correct?

Mr. HUGHES. That is correct.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to point out to everyone in this debate that the armor-piercing bullets we are talking about now are very deadly. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] came forward several years ago—6, to be exact—and pointed this out to us, as have all law-enforcement officials since then.

We need to get rid of these bullets. They are not necessary, they are not used for sporting purposes, and the bill does not prohibit those that are. This is an absolutely vital thing that we can do for our law-enforcement officials.

The word, "willful," has been put into the bill to protect gun dealers so they are not going to be inadvertently hurt by some mistaken failure to see a bullet that might have otherwise been one that is prohibited. I think we need to pass this legislation.

Last but not least, I would like to point out that in its present form, the administration does not oppose the legislation. They might have preferred their own, but they have come down and we have come down on this compromise.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, recognizing the difficulty of getting the bill to this point on the floor of the House, will now pass this very important armor-piercing bullet ban in the form that we now have it and send it to a conference with the Senate so we can get the legislation that law-enforcement officers so richly deserve and for which the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI] is so heartily to be commended for bringing it to our attention.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that this legislation has become sort of a cause celebre. Some of my colleagues today have indicated that it does not provide for the death penalty, that it does not do this and it does not do that. It was never represented that this bill would provide the death penalty for those who use a handgun or a weapon in the commission of a violent offense.

I frankly support increasing penal sanctions against the criminal misuse of a weapon. In this particular legislation, there are provisions, as my colleagues well know, that would increase the penalty, making mandatory penalties for those who carry a handgun and this type of ammunition in the commission of a violent offense. So we do have sentence enhancement for those who would carry this kind of ammunition in the commission of a crime.

But make no mistake—we are talking about ammunition that has no sporting value. For the life of me, I do not understand why there has been so much concern over this legislation. Under this bill, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms has to put dealers on notice, first of all, as to the specific ammunition that is banned. Now, unless the dealer willfully sells the ammunition, there are no sanctions attached to such a sale.

We have in the legislation provisions that came out of the subcommittee requiring the Secretary to exempt ammunition, the primary purpose of which is for sporting uses.

So, Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, if you really want to support the police in their effort to protect themselves in this very small but important fashion—and I grant it is just one step forward; it is not a cure-all—then you will vote for the bill. If you do not want to protect our police, you will vote against it. It is as simple as that.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985. As a cosponsor of this crucial legislation since it was first introduced in 1982, I join many other Members of the House in commending our distinguished colleagues MARIO BIAGGI and BILL HUGHES whose dedicated efforts are responsible for our consideration of this measure on the floor today.

The need for this legislation is clear. Over a quarter million of our Nation's law enforcement officers rely on bullet resistant vests every day to protect their lives as they wage our ongoing struggle against crime. Hundreds of police lives have been saved by these vests. However, these valuable, life-saving devices are rendered totally useless against a small class of handgun bullets that are designed for the specific purpose of piercing metal and are capable of penetrating four bullet-proof vests in a single shot.

These armor-piercing cop killer bullets are clearly of benefit only to one element of our society—the criminal element. Ironically, this ammunition was originally designed to help police, particularly when shooting at automobiles. However, most police departments have abandoned the use of this bullet because they have found its awesome penetrating power and greater ricochet capacity poses an unacceptable degree of risk. Nevertheless, these bullets continue to be manufactured and sold.

The Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985 would not only prohibit the manufacture and importation of specifically designed armor piercing ammunition capable of penetrating the lightweight protective armor worn by the Nation's police officers and high Government officials, but unlike some earlier proposals, would prohibit the sale of cop killer bullets as well. I believe that this controversial latter component is absolutely necessary in order to provide the law enforcement community with the most comprehensive protection against this ammunition.

For these reasons, I implore my colleagues to lend their fullest support to this measure's worthy and honorable objective—to save police lives—by joining me in voting in favor of H.R. 3132.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3132 because its passage would adversely impact upon the law abiding gun dealers and the sportsmen throughout this country.

The bill will result in the ban of some types of hunting ammunition; it will result in the elimination of the Civilian Marksmanship Program, because within 2 years the only major source of surplus ammunition will be armor piercing; and, it could result in the prosecution of dealers who may be determined to be willful in their sale of this type of ammunition when in actuality they may be acting in good faith, having no malicious intent to break the law. The compromise language still does not adequately address with any certainty the culpability issue which would be faced by gun dealers.

We need to remember guns and ammunition do not kill people, people kill people, and we need legislation to address this anti-social behavior.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act.

Armor-Piercing bullets have no legitimate use by the general public. They can be—and have been—used by criminals against law enforcement officials. Because of the danger that such bullets pose to law enforcement officials, we must eliminate the threat posed by the availability of these bullets.

That is why this legislation is supported by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Sheriffs' Association, and every major law enforcement association in the Nation.

On September 10, the Judiciary Committee with my support approved H.R. 3132 by a voice vote. The bill bans the manufacture, importation, and sale of armor-piercing ammunition. The bill also would make the possession or use of such ammunition during the commission of a crime of violence a crime with a mandatory punishment of at least 5 but not more than 10 years in prison. Finally, the definition of armor-piercing ammunition does not include shotgun shot or any ammunition intended primarily for sporting purposes.

This is a good bill. This is much needed bill. I urge the House to pass H.R. 3132.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker. why would anyone who upholds the law and opposes crime want to permit the sale of bullets specifically designed to pierce the protective vests of our law enforcement officers?

Why would anyone who has witnessed the attacks against our Presidents, candidates, and political leaders want to allow the public sale of armor-piercing ammunition?

Anyone wouldn't. But then American legislators aren't just anyone, are we?

Is the support of the NRA really worth the lives of young fathers and mothers who happen to wear police uniforms and strive to enforce the laws that we, the legislators, write.

Is the opposition of the NRA really more fearful than the sale of armor-piercing bullets to any assassin who decides they have a very special use for otherwise useless ammunition?

Have some guts. Do what's right. This time, just this time, tell the gun lobby they've gone too far and vote for the lives of people who have guts everyday of their lives: our police.

Mr. MRAZEK. Mr. Speaker, I wish to add my name in strong support of this legislation, introduced by Representative MARIO BIAGGI which will prohibit the manufacture and importation of armor-piercing ammunition except for Government use, testing, research, or export. Most significantly, it would restrict the sale of armor-piercing ammunition.

The need for this legislation is clear. Today, approximately 250,000 American law enforcement officers wear bullet-resistant vests on a daily basis. The Justice Department reports that some 400 police lives have been saved by these vests. However, these same vests are totally useless against a small class of bullets that are specifically made to pierce metal.

While the National Rifle Association contends that armor-piercing ammunition has "Never been a crime problem," there is much evidence that these cop killer bullets are not used for legitimate purposes. Probably the most prominent example is mass murderer James Huberty, who fired 192 rounds of imported armor-piercing ammunition when he killed 21 innocent people at a San Ysidro, CA. McDonald's last July.

This legislation has been endorsed by major national law enforcement groups including the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, the National Association of Police Officers, the United Federation of Police, the International Association of Chiefs of Police and others.

Enactment of a Federal law banning cop killer bullets is a top priority of our Nation's police officers and I am proud to support its passage.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985. This very important legislation protects the courageous men and women who serve on our Nation's police forces from death or injury by armor-piercing bullets. Every day our police officers put their lives on the line. We have an obligation to help make their jobs safer by eliminating the danger posed by armor-piercing ammunition.

More and more police officers are wearing protective vests. Many who serve on my own city of Philadelphia's Police Force are wearing them on duty. While these vests protect against most types of ammunition, they are ineffective against a special class of handgun bullets which are designed to penetrate metal. Usually these bullets are made of steel and brass and travel at exceptionally high speeds. Tests show that the most powerful of these bullets can penetrate the equivalent of four bullet-proof vests in a single shot. The only purpose of these bullets is to kill!

This legislation prohibits the manufacture or importation of armor-piercing ammunition except for use by Federal, State or local governments, or for testing authorized by the Treasury Department. Violations are met with stiff penalties, including prison terms of up to 5 years and fines of up to $250,000.

I want to point out that H.R. 3132 does not restrict the activities of sportsmen or hunters. The bill specifically exempts any projectile which the Treasury Secretary finds is intended to be used primarily for sporting purposes. Armor-piercing bullets, however, have no legitimate purpose and they should be outlawed.

Mr. Speaker, the courageous men and women who patrol our streets, protect our families and safeguard our property deserve our help. Often underpaid and overworked, they take great personal risks to ensure that we live in peace and security. Outlawing armor-piercing bullets is the least we can do for them. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the Nation's police officers by voting to pass this important legislation.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 3132, the Law Officers Protection Act of 1985, I am pleased that this critically important legislation has come to the floor today. As a former police officer, I know firsthand how important a vote for this bill is to the law enforcement community. This bill gives our Nation's police officers the protection they need to do their job by reducing the threat of armor-piercing bullets which maim and kill public service officials every year.

The small class of armor-piercing ammunition which the bill bans is not used for any sporting or other civilian purpose. For this reason, gun dealers, manufacturers and sportsmen should have no hesitancy in supporting this measure. The bill also incorporates previous and similar proposals made in this and earlier Congresses. H.R. 3132 clarifies provisions relating to the packaging and labeling of armor-piercing ammunition as well as the notice the Secretary of the Treasury must give firearms dealers to help them identify armor-piercing ammunition. Together these changes have eliminated every reasonable objection made by opponents of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, there should be no doubt about the urgent need for this measure. Our Nation's law enforcement community has given this measure its top priority. Certainly their interests should be our top priority. I urge my colleagues to provide our Nation's police officers with the protection they need by voting in favor of this important bill.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3132, the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act of 1985. As a cosponsor of this legislation during this and during previous Congresses, I am pleased that we have been able to bring this legislation before the full House for a full debate and a vote. I thank the gentleman from New York, my friend and colleague, himself a former police officer, Mr. BIAGGI, for introducing this bill. I would also like to extend my appreciation to the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, Mr. RODINO, and Mr. FISH, as well as to the chairman and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Crime, Mr. HUGHES, and Mr. MCCOLLUM, for working so diligently to fashion a bill which enjoys the endorsement of both our police officers and the National Rifle Association.

H.R. 3132 prohibits the manufacture, importation, and willful sale of armor-piercing bullets. Since their introduction to the commercial market in 1968, armor-piercing bullets have posed an immediate threat to our law enforcement community. When fired from a handgun, these teflon-coated solid brass projectiles are capable of piercing metal armor. While these bullets were first developed and marketed strictly for law enforcement purposes, they now pose an imminent danger to police officers. Since the 1970's most police forces began outfitting their officers with lightweight soft body armor that can stop standard bullets, fired from large handguns, at high velocities. This softbody armor cannot, however, stop armor-piercing bullets.

I am pleased that the Committee on the Judiciary has been able to address the legitimate concerns of sportsmen regarding the ability of certain ammunition used in rifles to penetrate body armor when loaded into handguns. The prohibitions in this bill are restricted to bullets designed to pierce armor. Because of this clarification, and the inclusion in this legislation of language specifying that the sale of armor-piercing bullets must be willful so that dealers operating in good faith will not be unjustly penalized, we are able to come to the floor with a bill supported by both our law enforcement and our sporting communities.

The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 created mandatory minimum penalties for the use of armor-piercing bullets in the commission of a Federal felony, ranging from 5 to 10 years. H.R. 3132 builds upon this premise by establishing a penalty for the illegal manufacture or importation of armor-piercing bullets, of 5 years in prison and/or a $250,000 fine. By adopting this legislation we will stop armor-piercing bullets at the source. Protecting our law enforcement officers should be a priorty of this Congress and this Nation. Accordingly, I urge adoption of this legislation which will be a significant contribution toward ensuring the safety of our brave officers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time has expired.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3132, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 400, nays 21, not voting 13, as follows:

Mr. KOLBE changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. JONES of Tennessee changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous matter, on H.R. 3132, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection..

PANAMA CANAL COMMISSION AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEAR 1986

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1784) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1986 for the operation and maintenance of the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 6, strike out all after line 20 over to and including line 2 on page 7.

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Section 5 and Section 6 of the Act shall be effective as of October 1, 1985.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I would like to compliment the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Panama Canal/Outer Continental Shelf, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LOWRY] for his leadership in moving H.R. 1784 through the legislative process.

This is an important and historic occasion. It represents the first time that both bodies of Congress have given final approval to an authorization bill for the Panama Canal Commission. This Federal agency, created in 1979, has the responsibility for the safe and efficient operation of the Panama Canal until the year 2000.

In the past 6 years, the Panama Canal Commission has done an outstanding job in meeting its obligation, and I would like to personally commend the tireless efforts of Mr. William Gianelli, the Chairman of the Panama Canal Commission's Board of Directors, Mr. Dannis P. McAuliffe, the Administrator of the Panama Canal Commission, and Mr. Mike Rhode, the secretary of the Panama Canal Commission. Each of these individuals have dedicated themselves to the vital task of ensuring that the Panama Canal remains a vibrant and efficient waterway. They have done an outstanding job in that regard.

In addition, I would be remiss if I did not compliment and recognize the many contributions of the more than 1,400 Americans who quietly represent this Nation with such distinction as employees of the Panama Canal Commission.

Mr. Speaker, this bill deserves our support and I am pleased that H.R. 1784 is about to clear its last legislative hurdle.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I again compliment the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LOWRY], the author of this bill, for his vital role in this important and historic effort.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, could the gentleman detail for me where we are in spending in this bill relative to fiscal year 1985 spending?

Mr. FIELDS. I would be pleased to respond to the gentleman by stating that this bill, H.R. 1784, contains an authorization of $436.8 million, which is $15 million less than in fiscal year 1985.

□ 1255

In addition, I would say to the gentleman that in appropriations level for the Panama Canal Commission, it is $3 million less this year than it was in fiscal year 1986 and about $20 million less than the budget resolution which passed both Houses of Congress.

In short, I am sure that the gentleman will be pleased to learn that we have done an even better job than the original freeze amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. If the gentleman will yield further, it is my understanding that the authorization levels are down and that the actual spending levels are down and so, therefore, the intent of what I was attempting to achieve with the freeze amendment has more than been complied with in this legislation. Is that correct?

Mr. FIELDS. I would respond to the gentleman even better than what the gentleman was trying to attempt with his freeze amendment, which I compliment him for. We have even done a better job.

Mr. WALKER. That is my impression, that this bill, in fact, meets the targets that we were attempting to achieve by at least holding the line and this actually lowers the spending. So I would be pleased to support the legislation now before us, feeling that it has met the fiscal targets that we were attempting to achieve in the House.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. I am pleased to yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and would like to compliment the ranking minority member on the subcommittee for his leadership and an outstanding job in moving this important piece of legislation. I would like to compliment the gentleman from Pennsylvania who just queried because this bill does truly come under a freeze level, and I compliment the gentleman for his work on that.

I would specifically like to also acknowledge the work done by the gentleman from California [Mr. SHUMWAY] on the vital U.S. employee amendments that are within this bill, which was really the Shumway package from last year, a very important item for the morale of our U.S. canal employees.

I would like to compliment again the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] because his interest repayment legislation is in this bill and that bill has also passed this Congress. Also the gentleman from New York [Mr. CARNEY] made an important improvement in our law with his important work on changing the notification requirements on property exchanges.

Mr. Speaker, on March 28, 1985, I introduced H.R. 1784, which authorized appropriations for fiscal year 1986 for the operation and the maintenance of the Panama Canal. This bill was cosponsored by 13 other members of both parties of the Subcommittee on Panama Canal/Outer Continental Shelf. This authorizing legislation is required by section 1302 of the Panama Canal Act of 1979, which provides that no funds be obligated or expended unless specifically authorized by the law.

The subcommittee marked up H.R. 1784 on April 3, 1985, and unanimously supported the bill with three amendments. On April 16, 1985, the full Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee unanimously approved H.R. 1784 with one amendment. The bill was reported (Rept. 99-59) on April 29, 1985, to the House and passed the House on May 14, 1985, with one amendment. The Senate Armed Services Committee reported H.R. 1784 with an amendment on December 3, 1985, and the Senate passed the same bill on December 12, 1985.

Briefly, the bill authorizes appropriations of $436,784,000 from the Panama Commission Fund, which consists of tolls and receipts of the canal, for the operation and maintenance of the canal. Out of the $436 million, no more than $26.5 million may be spent on capital outlays. Section 5 of H.R. 1784 provides for certain employee benefits to compensate for employees losses due to the treaty. These benefits include home leave, medical care, and education expenses. Section 6 allows compensation for non-government-paid Board Members of the Panama Canal Commission [PCC] when attending meetings. Section 7 deletes the 180-day waiting period of congressional notice before transferring housing from the PCC to the Panamanians. Section 8 was deleted by the Senate due to the provision's variance with the treaty.

Section 8 was a provision, similar to most other authorization bills this year passed by the House, in which the authorization level was frozen at the fiscal year 1985 authorization level—$429,846,000—although the provision was based on a sense of Congress, rather than a statutory requirement. Section 8 was deleted by the Senate due to its variance with the Panama Canal Treaty of 1977. Essentially any cuts made to the PCC appropriations level results in a payment to the Republic of Panama, rather than a savings to the United States. The treaty requires that any tolls or revenues, up to $10 million over the expenses of the PCC, must go to Panama. The Panama Canal Act of 1979 requires that all expenses of the canal must be equal to, as nearly as possible, the amount of the tolls and receipts collected by the PCC. Section 8 would have reduced the appropriations by $7 million, therefore, the expenses would be $7 million less than the income of the canal and a payment of at least $7 million would have been made to Panama. Section 8 would result in no savings to the General Treasury of the United States.

I concur with the Senate-passed version of H.R. 1784, as does our ranking minority member of the Panama Canal/Outer Continental Shelf Subcommittee, the Honorable JACK FIELDS. I, therefore, urge passage of the bill, H.R. 1784, sent by the Senate, as is.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in the support of H.R. 1784, the Panama Canal authorization bill for fiscal year 1986, and recommend the House accept the two changes made by the other body.

This legislation is $10 million below the budget request. In addition, it also provides some increased benefits to the remaining U.S. employees of the Panama Canal Commission replacing those privileges lost as a result of the provisions of the Panama Canal Treaty.

I congratulate all of the Members who had a hand in moving this legislation, and look forward to having the first Panama Canal authorization bill signed into law. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall ..pply to amounts distributed after December 31, 1986, in taxable years ending after such date.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 343 is a modified closed rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 3838, the Tax Reform Act of 1985.

The rule waives all points of order against consideration of the bill and against the bill itself.

The rule provides for 3 hours of general debate to be equally divided and controlled between the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and the ranking minority member.

After general debate, the bill will be considered as having been read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The rule provides that two amendments to the bill will be considered to have been adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole. The first amendment deletes provisions of the bill which would exempt Members of Congress and their staffs from tax liabilities on Civil Service Retirement System annuities. The modification would provide that the distributions of pension benefits paid to Members and their staffs will be subject to the same tax treatment as the distributions of other retired public employees.

The second amendment would delete the provisions of subtitle C of title 15. This section makes technical corrections to the Retirement Equity Act of 1984. Because this subtitle deals with matters that are within the jurisdiction of both the Committees on Education and Labor and on Ways and Means, principals of the two committees have agreed that these proposed technical corrections should be considered in separate legislation.

This is a modified closed rule which provides that only the following amendments may be offered in the House or in the Committee of the Whole:

First, an amendment printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of December 10 to be offered by Representative UDALL. This amendment will be debatable for 20 minutes;

Second, an amendment printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of December 10, 1985, to be offered by Representative MCHUGH. This amendment will also be debatable for not more than 20 minutes;

And third, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of December 6, 1985, to be offered by Representative DUNCAN. This amendment is modified by the amendment printed in section 3 of the rule. The amendment in section 3 includes technical changes to the Duncan substitute. It would also give Federal and State employees the same treatment with regard to the taxation of pension benefits as they receive under current law. In order to make up for revenue losses resulting from this change, the amendment would lower the income level about which the 35-percent tax rate would be applied.

Debate on the substitute is limited to 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the substitute and a Member opposed thereto.

The rule waives all points of order against these amendments and provides that they will not be subject to a demand for a division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole.

The rule provides that it will also be in order to consider amendments to the bill recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means. These committee amendments are not subject to amendment. In addition, the rule provides for one motion to recommit.

Finally, section 2 of the rule makes in order the consideration in the House of House Resolution 335. That resolution, introduced by the distinguished minority leader. Mr. MICHEL, expresses the sense of the House with respect to effective dates of certain provisions of tax reform legislation. The provision in the rule authorizes Mr. MICHEL to take up the resolution. Debate is limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided by Mr. MICHEL and Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. No amendments to the resolution will be in order, and after 1 hour of debate, the previous question shall be considered as ordered and the House will proceed to vote on final adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, this rule will once again offer the House the opportunity to move forward on our bipartisan commitment to tax reform. It is a fair rule, which allows for the consideration of two major alternative approaches to revising our tax structure.

The bill reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, with strong bipartisan support, addresses the fundamental inequities of our tax system. It reverses the trend that has allowed corporations and wealthy individuals to shift an ever-increasing share of the tax burden to those who can least afford it—the middle class and working poor.

The Ways and Means Committee bill will provide genuine tax relief to America's middle class. Half the benefits of this measure will go to families with incomes between $20,000 and $70,000 a year. For those making between $20,000 and $50,000 a year, this will mean an 8–10 percent decrease in their taxes.

The Ways and Means Committee bill maintains deductions which benefit the middle class such as those on home mortgages, and for State and local taxes. It retains the exclusion for fringe benefits. In all, this measure is the most important piece of legislation we have considered in the past decade to provide tangible benefits to the mainstream of the American people.

The Republican substitute made in order under this rule is, on the other hand, a retreat from the basic commitment to genuine tax reform. In this substitute, tax relief will benefit the corporate sector at the expense of individuals and families. If it passes, individuals will pay $30 billion more in taxes over the next 5 years than they would pay in the Ways and Means or the President's original proposal. Corporations, in turn, will pay $30 billion less.

The Republican substitute asks the middle class to pay for the benefits of the corporate world. Every itemized deduction over $1,000—except for home mortgages and charitable contributions—is cut back by 30 percent in this substitute. This includes the deductions for State and local taxes. This will amount to a form of double taxation for every American taxpayer and will place an increasing strain on the resources available for State and local services.

The substitute will also repeal the excludability of employer-provided group-term life insurance. It thus places an additional tax burden on middle income people who depend on such insurance to guarantee the security of their families. Over a 5-year period, this will affect over $10 billion—the third largest of all fringe benefits.

Mr. Speaker, our decision to take up the President's challenge to enact meaningful tax reform involves many difficult choices along the way. Many Members of this body seem to wish to run from our responsibility at this moment. We know that the legislation reported by the Ways and Means Committee is not a perfect bill. Each of us could find some provision to use as a cover under which to hide.

But, I believe, we must seize this moment. The inequities that have eaten away at our tax base will continue to grow if we do not act now. The burden on middle class Americans will not subside unless we decide to provide relief.

In the end, our choice is that simple—will we act to restore the confidence of middle income Americans in our tax structure, in the fairness of our Government itself, or will we continue to let these inequities grow?

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of this rule and support for the bill reported by the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, my opinion is I oppose the rule and that America needs a revenue-neutral tax bill like Japan needs greater access to United States trade markets.

I believe this Congress has failed to address the problems before us. It is time we face it, that spending reductions will not take care of the grave financial problems America has, and we are going to at some point have to raise revenue.

America had a shot here today, in this Congress, to in fact do that equitably and put that revenue raise where it really would benefit this country. My concern is. in this bill we deny the investment tax credits and accelerated cost recovery. It is like shutting the spigot off on American industry recapitalization, and then opening up the drain again, and continuing to let U.S. manufacturing dollars go overseas, and many times avoiding our tax structure.

I am going to vote for the bill if it gets to this floor because it is better than what we have, but it is a shame that it is not tailored to what America really needs. I am hoping this House defeats this rule; not because I am against tax reform, but tax reform should be equitable and it should address the problem.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of New York. Mr. Speaker, very little if anything substantive has changed since last Thursday when we voted on the rule to take up H.R. 3838. I guess some people feel for whatever reason they are going to change their vote and support the rule today.

If you are considering voting for the rule or the bill, there is something I think we ought to keep in mind if the question of deduction of State and local taxes is important to you and your State and your constituents. We should note that Treasury I did not have a deduction for State and local taxes, nor did Treasury II. As a matter of fact, the substitute that will be offered today substantially reduced deduction for State and local taxes.

We are not the only people in Washington to pass on this bill. The other body will pass on it, too. Believe it or not, they are going to see this a slight bit differently from how we see it.

I want the Members to know that if they vote for the rule or if they vote for the bill, when it comes back in a conference report, we will not have total deduction of State and local taxes. That I can almost guarantee. For every dollar we have to find to accommodate the "legitimate interest" of people in the other body, they will have to invade State and local taxes; and what is worse, when it comes back, it will not require your vote in all probability to be passed here. Your constituents will not be able to deduct State and local taxes, and your name is going to be on the bill. Think about it.

I ask for a "no" vote on the rule.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, a few short days ago this House rejected the rule, and, in so doing, it told the Committee on Ways and Means and the world that it was unwilling to work under this rule on a bill that it considered to be unsatisfactory.

In my judgment, nothing has changed with the bill, and an insufficient amount has changed with the rule to warrant any change in the vote on this floor.

There has been a minor amendment made in order to the Republican substitute, which most people agree is not going to pass anyway. Therefore, that amendment makes no important change in the rule.

□ 1320

What the bill is going to do, if it is passed, to reduce economic growth in the United States of America. It will reduce it by nearly 3 percent of GNP by 1991. It will slash incentives for savings and investment in this country which already has the lowest rate of personal savings in the industrialized world.

This bill may deindustrialize America by making our manufacturing companies noncompetitive. In fact, it will make all of America noncompetitive not only abroad but in its own domestic markets where we are already under severe pressure from foreign manufacturers.

Now if this is what you want, that is, a noncompetitive, deindustrialized America, and if you want the growth taken out of our economy, and if you are looking for a recession, and if you would like 1.3 percent higher unemployment by 1991, and if you would like to increase the deficit by $16 billion next year and $26 billion by 1991, you should vote for this rule.

Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, I submit the House would do well to reaffirm what it did last week, that is, defeat this rule and send the Ways and Means Committee back to do a proper job of tax reform.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and in support of the bill. Once again we have the opportunity to actually debate whether or not we ought to have a tax reform bill. If we do not pass this rule, as it is now apparently satisfactory to a lot of other people so that they can get on with the 5 hours of debate, then we will never have that opportunity to debate whether or not it will hurt the economic posture of the Nation.

I urge every Member to vote for the rule so that we can at least discuss the issue. Then if you do not believe that it is an adequate bill, if you believe that it is defective, if you believe we should not pass a tax reform bill, at that time you can vote against the Republican substitute, you can vote against the committee bill, but at least we will have had the opportunity to discuss it.

I simply want to end by saying this: Throughout the many months of discussions with this bill, there has been a bipartisan effort, bipartisan votes, which I will point out later in the debate if the rule passes. This has not been a one-way street. I think that that is a misconception that ought to be clarified during the debate. It is not a perfect bill, but it deserves at least your consideration for debate.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS].

Mr. PARRIS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, one of our colleagues recently observed that if Congress stays in session after 11 o'clock at night it resembles a nursery without a nap.

We were in session until 1:30 last night. At about that time the Rules Committee got together, and it hassled, and it argued, and in hurried meeting it agreed to undertake a cosmetic change and bring this rule back this morning, which we are now debating.

Those of us in the D.C. area have a football team called the Redskins, and a famous offensive line called the Hogs. There are some truck drivers that go to the stadium and put on snouts and wigs and dresses. They are called the Hogettes. They are mildly amusing but not very attractive.

Even if you put a dress on a hog it is still an ugly hog. And that is characteristic of the rule we are considering right now.

I want to thank and congratulate Mr. LATTA who has been very instrumental in having adoption of an amendment to the Republican substitute which corrects the inequities of the public sector pension benefits which is an important part of this bill. The substitute is clearly a better bill. It is much fairer in dealing with the tax liability of the typical suburban American middle class family.

There is no one in this town, however, that believes the Republican substitute will pass and there is no amendment permitted to the main Democratic bill. We just heard from the previous speaker that we are going to have 5 hours of debate on this bill. This bill is almost 1,400 pages long. If you spend an equal time on a proportionate segment of the bill, we will debate 276 pages of this bill every hour or 4½ pages of complicated tax language each minute. Do you really think we know what is in the bill when we finish with it and finally vote on it?

Nothing has really changed. The only thing that is different from last Wednesday of substance is the date. This rule authorizes House Resolution 335, which says we should make a public statement which will reduce the uncertainty of the effective date. Why do we not just legislate an effective date? Why do we willfully perpetuate the conclusion and create a significant period in which no taxpayer, personal or corporate, can make an intelligent investment decision? Think what impact that fact alone will mean to this Nation's economy.

This is a bad rule and a bad bill, we should vote it down.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LUNDINE].

Mr. LUNDINE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in favor of the rule. To my friends on the minority side I would say, you have your version of this tax bill, and you have been allowed to amend that version of the tax bill. You ought not really, fairly, to prevent it from even being considered. Vote as you will and as your conscience and your vision for this country and your interests in your district would have you vote on the bill, but do not prevent us from a vote. To my friends on the majority side of the aisle I would say it is much like the old sage once said, he did not mind getting older when he thought about the alternative. I ask you: Think about the alternative of rejecting this rule and not even allowing a debate on tax reform by a party that has stood for tax reform at least since I have been in the Congress.

The last major tax revision bill was passed by this Congress in 1954, 30 years later it is time to pass this rule and take up this bill and fairly debate tax reform again.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF].

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, let me just say several points. One, I am pleased at the Republican substitute, that there will be an opportunity to take care of Federal, State, and local police and firemen. But I want to say one other thing, and I am sorry that the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means is not here, but I will tell him directly when I see him: There is a sense of frustration for those of us who serve in the minority and do not serve on the Ways and Means Committee. There is almost a degree of arrogance that this is the way it will be, and that is just the way it is going to be, and no matter what you do.

I think it would have been the fair and decent and appropriate thing to allow at least the body to work its will on this one issue. I think to change the rules on these people in the middle of the game is unfair. We are just forcing so many people in the Federal Government to just take another hit and another hit. What I am afraid of is that we are driving so many of the good people away that in 10 to 15 years from now the people that are attracted will not be the ones that we would want to be running the Government. So I am pleased that the Republican substitute has it. I wish it would be in order applicable to the Democratic substitute. I hope that the chairman and those that are on the conference make sure that this does not stay in should this bill ever pass, because it is wrong. It is not fair, the people do not want it, it is in there, and it ought to be out.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the House Rules Committee rule, House Resolution 343 to consider H.R. 3838, Tax Reform Act of 1985. As my colleagues know, I opposed the rule last week to consider the tax bill. I did so because the Rules Committee did not make in order an amendment I offered to allow for a vote on a provision in both the committee bill and Republican substitute which I particularly oppose to eliminate the 3-year basis recovery rule governing tax exempt treatment of annuities where employee contributions to such pensions are mandatory.

Last night, I testified again before the House Rules Committee and asked that my amendment to repeal this portion of both tax reform packages under consideration be made in order so that this body could vote on the pension tax change issue. The rule before us today is a different rule and I am pleased that the House leadership allowed my amendment to be made in order to the Republican substitute. Although I am disappointed that the House Democrats did not make this amendment in order to the Ways and Means tax reform package, I believe the Republican substitute provides a clear signal that a revenue neutral bill can be reported by the Congress without a debilitating tax change for public employees. I believe consideration of the Republican substitute provides a solid framework on which the other body can develop a more suitable alternative to the Ways and Means Committee bill. I urge my colleagues to support the rule which allows consideration of the Republican substitute.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. MATSUI].

Mr. MATSUI. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would merely urge all my colleagues to support this rule. I just heard the previous speaker, the gentleman from Virginia, speak about the fact that there is frustration because we did not have a democratic process and allowed other Members involved in the legislation. I might say we went through 8 weeks of markups, 5 Republican Members of the 13 voted for the legislation that is now known as the Ways and Means Committee bill. I believe it is a good piece of legislation. We had over 500 witnesses during the hearing on the bill. All of you know we were in consultation with both Republican and Democratic Members. Now is the time for the American public to be able to have an opportunity to see where the Members are on this tax legislation. So it is my hope that we are going to be able to get a vote on the rule so we can take this bill and send it to the Senate committee and perhaps have tax reform in 1986.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ROEMER].

Mr. ROEMER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose the rule and the bill. Listening to the Republicans after their meeting with the President yesterday singing the old song, "I Saw the Light," I fully expect the rule on the bill to pass.

Frankly, there is no reason whatsoever for the rule vote of last week to change except politics.

The rule has been improved slightly, but only slightly. It is still a closed rule. It allows for only a few individual amendments. Unfortunately, it is a typical Ways and Means rule: tightly closed.

The rule reminds me of a Louisiana bullfrog—all mouth and no guts. This rule does not allow us to touch the guts of the bill.

The Constitution says that all revenue bills originate in the House. The Constitution does not require that we have to accept the bill blindly. The rule does that. The Constitution doesn't say that the Ways and Means Committee alone decides tax policy in America. The rule does that.

Don't fool yourself, this is a bad rule because its all mouth and no guts: While it allows the debate on tax policy to take place, it prohibits the debate from meaning anything.

What are you then left with?

First, a tax bill that adds to the complexity of the Tax Code rather than make it more clear. Anyone who tells you that this 1379-page bill is simple, is.

Second, the bill is antijobs and antigrowth. While the bill clearly hurts jobs in my district by imposing sharply higher taxes on the timber and oil and gas industries which are the two biggest job producers in Louisiana, it also targets job creation across the country. It raises the capital gains tax, it increases the penalty on depreciable assets; it eliminates the investment tax credit; it imposes an additional tax of $175 billion on capital. All of these items allow for jobs to be created.

Frankly, this bill asks us to accept fewer job opportunities in return for slightly lower marginal rates. It's a bad trade.

I am for tax reform and always have been. But I am more clear on what tax reform means than is the committee. To me tax reform means that the Code is made more simple and more clear, that job opportunities are expanded, not contracted, and that fairness is imposed so that everyone pays their fair share. In short, real tax reform demands the imposition of a corporate and wealthy minimum tax requiring everyone to pay, with the proceeds to go toward lowering the deficit, dropping interest rates, and increasing job opportunities. I've voted for that program this year and will vote for that kind of tax reform today. Unfortunately the rule doesn't allow our amendment. A reasonable minimum tax is coming; let's lead and not be led on this issue.

Vote against the rule, and then let's write a tax reform bill in the House, not in the Senate.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, there has been lot of talk about defeating the rule and then defeating the bill. I hope that we will be able to shatter the myth that there is a bill that is before this body today to be considered. Some of you may not like the way the Democratic majority-controlled Ways and Means Committee tried to craft a bill to meet the needs of what we thought was that of most Americans; but if you do not like what we did, then we have the luxury of having served on the Ways and Means Committee some of the brightest minds involved in the writing of tax legislation and they do not sit on the Democratic side of the aisle, they sit on the Republican side of the aisle. So when all of the things that they would want to see done were not done there, they went and drafted their own bill which comes under the rule which we are debating this morning.

So check with Mr. DUNCAN, check with Mr. FRENZEL, check with Mr. ARCHER, and check with PHIL CRANE, because they did get together and said there is a better way to do it.

Now if you are so partisan that you want to shoot down the Democratic bill, then, for crying out loud, give your party a chance to vote for tax reform today.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. DAUB].

Mr. DAUB. I thank the gentleman from Ohio for the time.

My colleagues, this is an opportunity, by passing this rule, to modernize the Tax Code which I described as being like a Model T that is trying to survive out there on an interstate highway. We need to do that. We need to do that together. I want us to reach for our future, and I am proud of my party because I believe that my party has been in the vanguard of urging in an understandable way the reasons why this country needs tax reform. And I favor tax reform for three reasons. First, I want us to understand and appreciate why we cannot do anything about our structural deficit, we cannot reform how we spend if we do not at the same time reform how we tax.

We have accomplished, painful though it may turn out to be, the spending reform with Gramm-Rudman. Now it is up to us today, now, to commence the process of reforming how we tax, to lower rates, to broaden the base. If our debt is going to go from $2 trillion to $3 trillion—and it will by 1991—if the demographics are clear from the baby boom-bust cycle that we are going to be labor short by 1992 or 1994, that is fewer taxpayers carrying the load that we have laid on them, and if in fact under current law the Tax Code means that if you raise our taxes and we itemize we will buy another condo and shelter down, or General Electric will buy another wide-bodied 747, buy some more ITC's and another company, and pay no tax, then I will say to you that that is not a fair Tax Code and we ought to change it. This is our opportunity. Given those three reasons, a debt that is going up, a Tax Code that is producing revenues and is going down, and the poor taxpayer stuck in the middle, fewer of them shouldering the load of food stamps and farmer's aid and foreign aid, we need to do the one right thing, modernize the Tax Code.

I urge my colleagues to support the rule and the bill on final passage.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE].

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, earlier, one of the Members said that this bill was antibusiness, antigrowth, and did not do anything about the deficit. The truth of the matter is that this bill is supported by many of the small businesses, and by the largest small business organization in this country. It is supported by over 100 of Fortune 500 corporations of this land.

Many, many of the business organizations say that this bill is necessary and that we ought to move it forward.

Now, keep in mind the President made his recommendation in his State of the Union speech in 1984 that we should have tax reform. The Democrats agreed to cooperate. This bill is the result of that commitment. Now, it may not be the bill exactly as you want, it may not be the perfect bill. You do not have to agree with every provision of it. I do not agree with it in every respect, certainly I do not agree with the oil and gas provisions, but I think it generally is a good reform measure and should be advanced.

If you vote no, you are simply saying you are against tax reform, you do not want lower rates, you do not want to increase the personal exemptions. We could start over again by sending it back to the Ways and Means Committee; but, my friends, if we did, we would come back, if at all, a year or two later, with much the same kind of bill, and you would make no progress. This may be the best chance you have of advancing a tax reform bill, and I ask you to support the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I support the rule, and I support the bill.

In Janaury 1984, in his State of the Union Address, President Reagan committed himself to a major tax reform plan during his second term. The Treasury Department produced a comprehensive tax reform package and sent it to the Congress last May.

At that time, the Democrats in Congress said we were willing to work with the administration to produce a tax reform bill. The Democrats have kept their promise, and this bill is the result of that commitment. It may not be the perfect bill or exactly like the President's bill—it does parallel his bill. Individual interest groups and regions of the country may disagree with certain provisions in the bill. I certainly do on the oil and gas provisions. But if we were to start over tomorrow in the Ways and Means Committee to try to produce a different bill, we'd end up with a very similar bill. Some groups would favor it, some would oppose it.

The major allegations about this bill are that it's "Anti-Business," "Anti-Growth," and that it doesn't reduce the deficit. That charge is to be expected by the individuals and businesses that are directly affected by the bill. But it is strongly supported by small business and a long list of corporations. And we could do nothing about the deficit because the President said he would veto any bill that raised revenue even to reduce the deficit.

The rule should be supported, however, if we want to move tax reform forward. A no vote on this bill will kill whatever chance Congress has to reform the current tax system. There are many doubts about this bill and that is understandable, but a no vote is a vote against tax reform.

So, vote to move the process forward.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEMP].

Mr. KEMP. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Ohio for yielding to me.

Last week, I helped lead the fight against the rule. Frankly, I am glad that that rule was defeated, for two reasons. No. 1, true tax reform was headed for a defeat, and had the vote come at that time on that bill, in my view, it would have gone down to a devastating defeat, not just for the President but for the hopes of the American people and our economy for true tax reform. Second, the House was not being given a chance to vote on anything which would have resulted in the kind of true tax reform that the vast majority of us on both sides of the aisle really want for the Nation.

Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. GEPHARDT, who helped start this cause, Mr. KASTEN over in the Senate, myself, and others, together with the President and untold numbers of men and women in both political parties, have a big stake in getting the right kind of tax reform, the kind that can bring about a more productive economy and a tax system fairer, simpler, and move our country forward, not preserve the status quo.

One of the problems last week was that some of our colleagues in the Senate stated that there would be no changes from the original bill as it came out of the House. That caused, I must say to my colleagues on the left, serious problems with many of us on the minority side; we wanted to play a role not only in passing a bill but in helping shape that bill, as so many have stated on the floor today, some of whom are for this particular bill, such as my colleague from Nebraska, and some of whom are against it.

Has the Rostenkowski bill changed? The answer clearly is no. What has changed, I want to say to my colleagues, is that the President is now directly involved in shaping the substance of this process that he personally yesterday asked us to support.

Last week we were asked to support a process that was pretty much abstract. We did not have the assurance of our President, not only that was he going to be involved, but also that there were certain minimum criteria upon which he would base a final decision concerning whether or not he would sign or veto the bill.

I want to say to my friends in the Republican Party, many of whom have very strong reservations and indeed opposition to this bill, that I am going to vote for the rule and for final passage, because I think we now have the word of our President that he wants a bill that gives the $2,000 exemption to every family, regardless whether they itemize or not. I appreciate Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI and my colleagues from the Democratic side of the Ways and Means Committee who got a $2,000 exemption in there for some people. But I think it must be expanded. There are a number of us who feel very strongly about this profamily issue. We want that $2,000 exemption for both low-income and middle-income taxpayers, who really are at the heart of the constituency for fundamental tax reform.

The President has also assured us that he will veto a bill that does not bring down the rates on middle-income working men and women, or bring the top rate down at least to 35 percent. He has assured us that he will veto any bill that does not include basic tax incentives for capital formation and for the modernization of our plants and equipment and machinery in this country, to make us more competitive with other countries. In addition, the rule contains a provision to remove some of the doubts that many of us had, concerning the paralyzing uncertainty and ambiguity about the effective dates of tax reform. I will say to my good friend Mr. RANGEL, from New York, there were many votes lost over here, not because we wanted to kill tax reform, but because of the fear that in the committee bill the rates would come down in July and preferences would come out in January, resulting in a tax increase. We have now been assured by our President that he will not let that happen.

The issue here is not the abstraction of tax reform. The issue is making our economy more productive and entrepreneurial, and to offer jobs, hope, and opportunity for the future of our Nation and our children.

I urge you, for the good of the country and the economy, to vote for the rule and for the final bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEMP] has expired.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield an additional 30 seconds to the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEMP].

Mr. KEMP. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from California.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I want to commend the gentleman in the well for his statement. I think it was not an easy thing for him to do, after what happened last week. I want to also commend the gentleman for his leadership on this issue. Indeed, had it not been for him and the other gentlemen he mentioned in his statement, we would not be here at all, in my opinion. I think the gentleman has helped to lay the groundwork for something that is going to go forward. The bill before us today is not good but it can be made better and, hopefully, it will be.

Mr. KEMP. I appreciate the comments of my colleague from California and his friendship and leadership as well.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ROWLAND].

Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule to consider H.R. 3838, the Tax Reform Act of 1985.

I do so because I have been told by many folks at home that tax reform is needed. And while I have serious reservations regarding many of the provisions within the committee's tax reform proposal, I do feel that it should be debated.

My reservations regarding this bill include the effect that the bill would have with respect to major industry within my home State of Georgia. Under the bill, the timber and kaolin industries, which are a major source of revenue and employment within my district, are severely impacted. Aside from the immediate effects this may have upon these industries themselves, I am very concerned about the ramifications this could have upon the employment outlook for the workers in this industry, and as my district is primarily rural, loss of jobs would be devastating.

Additionally, I am opposed to the provision changing existing law with regard to the taxation of Federal employee annuities.

At any rate, I believe that we should take this opportunity to discuss this measure. The issue of tax reform has been placed before this body, and it needs to be given our attention. If we do not move forward with debate, we will simply put off an issue which the American people want debated and fully considered.

While I support bringing this measure to the floor, I believe that very serious questions have been raised as to whether this bill is worthy of passage. If this bill should fail to get through Congress, we should not let the issue of tax reform die. It would then be up to Congress to return to this issue in the future and try once again to devise a tax reform plan which is truly less complicated and more equitable for everyone.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I spoke last week on this bill with some animation, I am told. I was not pleased with the rule.

This rule has made two essential changes. No. 1, the Republican substitute will include the protection for public employees that I sought from the Democratic side through the Rules Committee. No. 2, there is a timing question resolution that will follow on. Those changes, in my opinion, while good, are not substantive enough, not substantive enough because, as the gentleman from Minnesota has just indicated, the Republican substitute is not going to pass. I am not going to vote for the Republican substitute, notwithstanding that it protects the public employees, because I think the substance of the bill is not what it ought to be.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I only have 1 minute.

Mr. LATTA. I will yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. HOYER. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LATTA. Does not the gentleman think we would be sending a message to the other body and also to the conferees on the Republican substitute, with the amendment that we have made in order, covering the area that the gentleman and I are most concerned about?

Mr. HOYER. The answer, I would suggest, is yes. And for that I appreciate the efforts that have been made, because I think we have sent a message. The only amendment that is being made in order is the protection of the pension benefits of public and private sector employees who have a mandatory, contributary retirement plan.

Mr. Speaker, there are only two groups of employees who are now not subject to tax, Social Security recipients, 36 million, and approximately 16 to 19 million Americans who have mandatory, contributory systems: just like Social Security. We do not tax Social Security but we are going to tax public employees pension contributions under this proposal. That is indeed unfortunate.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. COATS].

Mr. COATS. Mr. Speaker, I want to address specifically the issue of the fairness for families that are supposedly in each of the tax bills that are before us today.

Both the Ways and Means bill and the Republican bill deal with the key element that provides tax relief for families, the $2,000 exemption. But the Republican bill deals with it in a far more equitable way because the Democratic Ways and Means Committee bill only allows it for those who do not itemize.

The contention is that, well, not many people itemize.

The facts speak differently. While it is true that only 36 percent of all returns are itemized the statistics show that in the $25,000 to $30,000 income category, for those who file jointly, 62.5 percent itemize, and in the $30,000 to $40,000 category for those who file jointly, 78.4 percent itemize. For those families that have medical costs, for those families that give to charities, for those families who are buying a home, clearly they are better off under the Republican substitute. They are penalized under the Ways and Means Committee bill not because they are rich but simply because they have chosen to have children.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. FLIPPO].

Mr. FLIPPO. Mr. Speaker, I believe this Ways and Means bill is worth doing, and I think it is worth doing now. It is a significant improvement over current law. The bill is worth doing for what it does for middle income America. It gives them a fair break. It says, "I understand your concerns about the fairness of the Tax Code, and this is a fair way to do it." It is worth doing for what it does for the poor and the working poor of this country. It says, "I know you have been brought onto the tax rolls through inflation, and we are going to make those adjustments now."

I think it is worth doing for what it does for small business in this country. Small business gets a better break, it has graduated rates, and for those who are concerned about growth under this bill, you need to remember that most of the jobs that have been created in this country have been created in the small business area. And if it is worth doing, when is the right time to do it, when is the time to say to them, "We want a fair break for most Americans." I think that time is now, and we need to support the bill and support the rule with a great deal of pride.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I support this rule. We have had quite a bit of debate about it. Some people are saying it is no different than the one we had last week. It is different.

The effective date is going to be changed to December 31, 1986, by separate resolutions. This will be a significant change. Second, we have heard a lot of discussion about the 19 million Americans who would be double taxed under this legislation the way it has been brought to the floor. I have reference to all people who contribute voluntarily to an annuity for their retirement years and pay tax on that money when they put it in. Under the pending legislation they would also pay taxes on that same money when they drew it out at retirement.

Under the rule we now have before us, an amendment will be in order to the Republican substitute which leaves the present law as it is today. In other words, they will not be double taxed.

Certainly, as I pointed out here to the gentleman from Maryland, that notwithstanding the fact that it will be attached to a Republican substitute which may not pass, we will in any event be sending a message to the other body that we do not want double taxation for these 19 million people in the private and public sectors.

You talk to your teachers back home, you talk to your firemen, your policemen, your State and local public employees; you talk to people in private programs who have contributed voluntarily toward their retirement annuities, they have been led to believe by their Government that since they have paid taxes on this money once, they will not be taxed on it a second time when they draw it out. Ask these people and they will urge you to support a rule that will knock out the double taxation provision in the Democratic bill. This is a change in the rule we have before us today as opposed to a few days ago.

Let me say that there is something else. As the gentleman from New York has pointed out, the President now is personally involved in this thing. He is committed, he is committed to tax reform, and certainly he is not committed to the Democratic or the Republican bills as presently written. He is committed to the program he submitted to this Congress, and he is going to be working for it in the other body, and also in conference.

This is not the end of the road. It could be the end of the road if we vote down this rule or defeat the bill today. It could be the end of the road for tax reform. I do not like everything in the Ways and Means Committee bill. I have a laundry list of things that I dislike about the bill. But hopefully, hopefully, we will be able to correct those shortcomings in the other body and in conference. If we do not correct them, I will be down here leading the fight to kill the conference report.

So we will have another day. The Ways and Means Committee, the Finance Committee of the Senate, and the conferees still have work to do on this legislation. They certainly must pay heed to the complaints made about this bill here on the floor of this House and throughout the Nation, and if they close their ears and maintain they have written a perfect bill, it is ours or nothing, they are going to get nothing. They are going to get nothing. So we are giving the Ways and Means Committee another opportunity to write a bill we can support. We want them to come back from the Senate with a better product than we have before us today. I think they will. I think they have gotten the message and they will come back to this House from conference with a better bill. Hopefully, will give the President something he can sign and sign for the best interests of all Americans.

So I say to my colleagues, support the rule and give the House an oportunity to debate the bill, and then to vote on it. We all want tax reform and this is the only way to get it.

Mr. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LATTA. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LUKEN. I would like to associate myself with the comments of the gentleman with reference to the amendment on retirement, especially affecting the pensions for public employees, especially affecting federal and State employees and teachers in States such as Ohio. I think it is an improvement that it was at least permitted to be put into the Republican substitute. I wish it were also available as an amendment on the Ways and Means bill.

Mr. LATTA. Let me say to my good friend that I wish likewise. We just did not have the votes in the Rules Committee to attach it to the Democratic proposal. I was one of those urging that, but we did not have the votes. We tried and we lost, but we will live to fight another day on this and on other important issues.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

Mrs. KENNELLY. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, it is not always in this light that we have a chance to rectify a mistake. In fact, we always do not have an opportunity for a second chance. But in this Chamber today we have this opportunity. Last week we turned our backs on 6 million of America's working poor. We said to our middle-income Americans, "You are right about your cynicism about our Tax Code; you are right, we are not going to make very well off individuals pay their fair share. We are not going to make very profitable corporations pay their fair share."

Mr. Speaker, a previous speaker spoke about guts. We have the opportunity in this Chamber this afternoon to say we have the guts to say no to the sophisticated individuals in this town who have grown so close to the code. We have the opportunity to say yes to the people of America who started this whole process. To say yes to them, we are going to give you a fairer code.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this rule.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. ZSCHAU].

Mr. ZSCHAU. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, last week the House defeated the rule in the tax bill, not to derail tax reform, but to give us more time to understand what is in the bill, to analyze its impact on the economy, and to make improvements to it.

Now, many of my colleagues who voted against that rule are going to switch their votes. I am not. What is the rationale for those who are going to switch? They are going to get a letter from the President decribing why he would veto this bill as it is and what changes would be necessary to make it acceptable.

That's backward. Rather than voting for a bad bill because we get a letter describing why it is bad, we and the administration ought to be working together to formulate a new bill that achieves the promises of true tax reform—fairness, simplicity, more economic growth, and jobs.

Let's defeat this rule today. That won't kill tax reform. It will keep the process alive. It will give us the time we need to formulate a real tax reform bill that can be brought up early next year, with the support of a bipartisan majority of this House and our President. Let's take the time to produce a good product that we can be proud of for consideration by the other body.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ANTHONY].

Mr. ANTHONY. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and I rise in support of the Ways and Means Committee legislation. An imperfect legislative process does not produce perfect legislation. It is not the first imperfect bill we have been asked to debate on the House floor; it will not be the last.

I submit that the Ways and Means Committee bill is more profamily than the existing Tax Code, espccially if you are a single head of household and you are a woman. Lower rates for individuals and for businesses will help put more money in individuals' and corporations' pockets so that they can do more for growth and stimulate the economy.

There is a strong minimum tax in the Ways and Means Committee bill so that the wealthy will pay their fair share. Tax shelters are tightened so that there will be more economic decisions and less tax consequences decisions. Full deductions for State and local taxes is contained in the committee bill, and no taxation of fringe benefits is also contained in the committee bill.

I submit that these are adequate reasons to vote for the rule so that we can adequately and fully debate the full implications of good tax reform.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER].

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, let us vote "aye" on this rule for one main reason: The American people have the right to the debate on tax reform, and the only way they are going to get it is for us to vote "aye" on the rule and it is as simple as that.

We have a Democratic bill that for the first time insures that the many who should pay will pay. Now, that steps on a lot of toes, but let us not duck and cover behind a rule. Sure, it is controversial to even suggest that the biggest defense contractors in our country and the wealthiest in our midst pay their fair share. But let us not duck and cover; let us get to the merits. We all know that tax reform is long overdue.

Is this the perfect rule? The ultimate rule? Of course it is not. We will all take a little heat for it, but my friends, we know to move this critical issue forward it will take compromise. It takes putting aside our own personal agendas and we all have them for the good of the American people. Let us do it and vote "aye" on the rule.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO].

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, perfection is the enemy of the good, and the bill we have before us clearly is not perfect. Each of us would change it to be perfect in a different fashion, but it is a good bill, one that deserves to be passed.

It clearly is a substantial improvement over the existing Tax Code, and it is one that we can vote for with pride to know that we made the method by which we raise the revenue in our country more fair, more equitable, and to assure that everyone pays at least some of the burden of Government in this country.

And to the minority, you clearly have the option of presenting your alternative. It is your choice whether you offer the President's proposal as originally presented to the Congress, or the one that you actually present today. You have your choice to present the type of alternative that you choose to present.

Clearly the rule is fair, we should pass it, we should move on to have the debate on tax reform, and then we should pass the bill.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, for those who would suggest that we should defeat this rule, that is to suggest that nothing is better than this bill. Nothing is the current law.

Nothing is the current law that every Member of this House has condemned to pledge themselves in front of their constituents to change, because it is the Tax Code now that has lost credibility with the working people in this country. It is the Tax Code that is creating an underground economy. It is the Tax Code the people no longer feel that they should voluntarily comply with because it is unfair, it is inequitable.

This bill and this process starts to make that Tax Code yield to the needs of working people in this country, to the needs of low-income working people, and to those people who choose not to pay by abusing the Tax Code and utilizing the privilege of that code that is not available to others.

For the first time, through the work of the minimum tax, we will say that all Americans must participate in the Tax Code of this country for the privilege of living and working in this country. They must participate in the defense of this country and the maintenance of the social fabric by paying their fair share.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE].

Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, there are many good reasons why we should support the rules and the bill that the Ways and Means Committee will bring to us today.

This bill is good for the country. It is good for all the great reasons that our colleagues have enumerated one by one here today.

But I want to take a little different approach for a second and say that the Ways and Means Committee has worked long and labored hard to produce this product, and being a southerner who has a great stake in agriculture, especially in growing tobacco in the South, I want to say that nobody has done more for southern tobacco farmers and our problems than our friends on the Ways and Means Committee. Their bill deserves a chance today on the floor of this House.

If I could sing to you, I would say that our tobacco farmers have a great friend in DANNY ROSTENKOWSKI, and we owe him a debt of gratitude. The least we can do as southerners who are interested in agriculture is to vote for this rule and support this process.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has 9 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, and particularly to my colleagues of progressive viewpoint who are on my side of the aisle, that if someone came to you in 1979 or 1981 and said, "I'll hand you a tax bill that takes 6 million poor Americans off the tax rolls," you would love it. And if someone came to you and said, "I'll give you a tax bill that will reduce rates on the beleaguered middle class," you would jump at the chance to take it.

And most of all, if someone came to you and said, "We're going to make sure once and for all that those large corporations and multimillionaires who abuse the code and pay no taxes will now have to pay 25 percent—no ands, ifs, or buts," you would jump at the chance. I say to my colleagues on this side of the aisle it is time for us to jump at that chance.

We do not have a passable bill; we have a bill that makes us all proud to be Democrats. We ought to vote for this rule, vote for the bill, and go home this Christmas recess feeling good about our party and our country.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT].

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, with all of the extraneous issues and charges and countercharges and various ideas that have been bandied about in the last few days, I think it is very important to concentrate on two simple things that are before us.

First, this vote today on this rule is a vote for whether or not you are for tax reform. If the rule goes down, tax reform is dead for 1985, 1986, and probably for a very long time. So your vote today is whether or not there is going to be tax reform probably in the next 5 or 10 years.

Second, as has been said here a number of times, what is going on with this bill is whether or not you are for giving the middle class in this country and the poorest people in this country, for the first time in a long time, a tax break. When we put the Social Security tax together with the income tax, most Americans did not get a tax cut in 1981; they got a tax increase. If you want to give a tax break to the average middle-income family of about $300 a year, you have got to vote for this rule and you have got to vote for this bill.

It is the $64,000 question. If you take a family of four and you figure that each one of them can get a $300 tax break per year for the next years of their life expectancy, this vote is about giving those family members $64,000 over their life expectancy ahead of them. So the question today is a $64,000 question.

Mr. Speaker, it is going to be tough to pass this rule. I want to give you a quote from Harry Truman. He said: "Men make history and not the other way around. In periods where there is no leadership, society stands still. Progress occurs when courageous, skillful leaders seize the opportunity to change things for the better."

Mr. Speaker, this bill changes things for the better. I ask the Members to support the rule.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, as I did last Wednesday, I rise today in opposition to the rule providing for limited debate on the Tax Reform Act of 1985, the tax reform bill approved by the House Committee on Ways and Means (H.R. 3838). As was the case last week, the rule does not allow the House to discuss and vote on any meaningful alternatives to the Rostenkowski bill, except for the substitute proposed by the Republican leadership—a substitute which has for many of us as many problems as the Democratic bill.

Most important, the announcement by President Reagan yesterday that he will veto any tax bill that is antifamily and antigrowth, which seems to apply to any bill which does not include a top tax rate of 35 percent, a $2,000 personal exemption for all taxpayers, and postponement of the elimination of deductions until the new rates take effect, would force the Senate to raise additional revenue to restore those provisions. After meeting with the President yesterday and with Treasury Secretary Baker last week, I am convinced that the administration will ask the Senate to repeal the deductibility of State and local taxes in order to generate those necessary revenues. In other words, Mr. Speaker, constituents in States such as New York and Massachusetts can say goodbye to their State and local tax deductions if this bill is passed in a form that the President will sign.

Last night, like last week, the Committee on Rules decided not to allow the House to discuss a simple alternative to the Rostenkowski bill which I and two colleagues proposed—a very stringent alternative minimum tax for individuals and corporations which would ensure that everyone who makes an income above the poverty level would pay taxes, and which would help remove from the income tax rolls those below the poverty line, while leaving the rest of the Internal Revenue Code intact, including the deduction for State and local taxes.

Mr. Speaker, after talking with my constituents and from reading most national surveys, it seems clear that the type of tax reform that most people want is that type of legislation. We do not need a new Internal Revenue Code as envisioned by the House Ways and Means Committee, or by the U.S. Senate, which may very well eliminate the deduction for State and local taxes. The issue of fairness should be addressed by ensuring that everybody above the poverty line and every business that earns income pays taxes, and that those below the poverty line should not. The substitute amendment which I supported in my testimony last week and last night would use the revenue gained by the enactment of the strong alternative minimum tax provisions in the Ways and Means bill to help those below the poverty line get off the tax rolls. I would respectfully suggest that a majority of my colleagues agree with this approach, yet the Rules Committee has not made that amendment in order.

In addition, the fact of the matter is that the two so-called tax reform packages before us unnecessarily wreak economic havoc in the name of tax reform and constitute the antithesis of simplification. The number of brackets really has nothing to do with simplification. Assuming that one does not have a truly flat tax, it is just as easy to work from one tax table as another. In addition, any legislation which has 1,500 pages, weighs 5 pounds, and contains special provisions exempting the grandchildren of a California vintner and certain graveyard businesses in the South from various taxes—to name but a few of the many new special interest provisions this bill would add to the code—obviously is in no way nearer to simplicity and most definitely is further away from fairness.

With regard to positive economic reform, the Ways and Means bill is dubious at best. A few months ago, I asked the Congressional Research Service to detail the rates of personal savings and business investment during the current economic expansion. It is evident, Mr. Speaker, that not all of the objectives of the 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act have been met. A major goal of ERTA was to promote individual savings and investment, but the decline in the individual savings rate since 1981 is evidence that consumers have not saved and invested their funds in order to finance economic expansion. On the other hand, business investment has been very strong; from 1981–85, real business investment has grown at an annual rate of 5.8 percent substantially above the 3.6 perent growth rate of the 1947–80 period. Therefore, while ERTA spurred business to invest in its future, individuals saved less money. Given that experience, it seems foolish to finance more personal tax cuts at the expense of what worked in 1981 and has continued to spur our current economic recovery—the business investment incentives.

Yet, that is what both the Ways and Means bill and the Republican alternative propose to do. This is not to say that parts of the Ways and Means bill are not more attractive than the current Tax Code. However, there are too many things wrong with Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI'S bill to justify voting for it, as the President has requested. Not only will a vote to approve the bill on the basis suggested by the administration send a message to the Senate to eliminate the deductibility of State and local taxes, but the Ways and Means bill, per se, actively discriminates against women. For example, the bill does not allow a spouse working in the home to set up an Individual Retirement Account. The bill also repeals the two-earner deduction which is so important to the working couples in America who are penalized because both spouses either want to hold full-time jobs or need to work to provide for their family. In addition, the bill severely cuts back on the amount of savings an individual can set aside for retirement plans such as 401(k) and 403(b) plans. The Republican alternative is more palatable with regard to the basic economics of the issue than the Ways and Means bill, but it is repugnant to me and to many of my colleagues because it permits only 70 percent deductibility of State and local tax payments. Overall, the major economic upheavals that the passage of either of these two bills would bring could only be counterproductive at this uncertain economic time.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the amendment I proposed last night and last week would satisfy the major goal of making the tax system more fair. It would ensure that everyone above the poverty line who makes money pays taxes, and it would do so without the massive disruptions to our economy and to our Federal system caused by the other two bills. Because my amendment in the form of a substitute should have been debated on the House floor, Mr. Speaker, and for the reasons stated before, I cannot support the Rostenkowski bill, the alternative proposed by the Republican leadership, or the proposed rule.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to state my strong opposition to the rule under discussion which would allow for the consideration of H.R. 3838, the Tax Reform Act of 1985.

I join my colleagues in support of an equitable and simplified system of taxation. I cannot, however, support the rule which is before this body today. I feel that this bill, which is over 1,300 pages in length, deserves careful scrutiny and that Members should be allowed to offer amendments to deal with substantive areas of concern.

No one will dispute the need for reforming our complicated and burdensome tax system. It is hard, however, to say that a bill which is over 1,300 pages in length is simple. Furthermore, I would wager that there is not one Member in this body who has read through this bill and knows exactly what is in it.

The Members of this body are expected to debate this complicated issue for 3 hours and in that amount of time determine the components of 1,379 pages. I for one feel that this issue deserves more attention than that. I urge my colleagues to defeat the rule and allow this issue the consideration it deserves.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this rollcall, 413 Members have recorded their presence by electronic device, a quorum.

Under the rule, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3838, TAX REFORM ACT OF 1985

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, the simple truth is that we have to pass a rule if we are going to get on with tax reform. The worst defeat for this House is to go home and tell taxpayers that we did not have the courage even to debate tax reform on the floor of the House.

The question is whether we want to consider this tough issue or not. I am not happy to be once again debating the rule. The last rule we had, in my opinion, was fair. This rule is fair. Both sides have an equal chance to defend their own version.

From the outset, deliberations have been a bipartisan effort. The minority staff on the Committee on Ways and Means shared in drafting what was known as "the chairman's mark." The minority members shared in the task force decisions, most of which were adopted by the full committee, and they shared in the final vote. Five Republicans of 13 voted for reporting the bill, and they shared in drafting the rule which allowed a separate vote on a Republican alternative and the committee bill.

Had we passed last week's rule, I sincerely believe that tax reform would now be in the other body. This rule only differs slightly from the rule that we considered last week. It gives each camp a vote. The committee vote, in my opinion, is both fairer and more fiscally responsible than the minority substitute. It is the product of many hands, both Democrat and Republican, and is a vast improvement for both individuals and productive business over present law.

So, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that we stand up for the tough task ahead, that we pass the rule, get on with the debate, and give the American taxpayer fairness in the code.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has 4 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

Mr. MICHEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule, and before giving my reasons for changing my position on the rule itself, I would like to make several pertinent observations.

Why do we oppose rules to consider a rule around here? No. 1, because of a serious problem with the rule. It is either closed, only selected amendments can be offered, time limitations, or whatever.

Another reason may be to slow down the process.

Then I think maybe a third reason is to kill a bill outright, without even debating its merits or its demerits.

We all have reasons in this House for taking the positions we do on a rule and a bill. Last week we voted down the rule on the so-called tax reform bill because of a combination of all three of the reasons that I have outlined. But today is a new day. We now have a different rule that gives us an opportunity to speak to the issues of effective dates if a tax bill is passed.

I am reminded earlier in this session, when I had a conversation with the distinguished chairman of the committee, not knowing how it would evolve, and I said, "Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, I might vote for your tax bill whenever it comes out. Just give me one amendment."

He said, "What is that?"

I said, "Give me an amendment on the transition rules and effective dates."

I make mention of this exchange with the chairman because the effective date of any kind of tax reform is most important.

□ 1435

I have a resolution that I introduced earlier in the week, House Resolution 335, that addresses this issue of effective date. This rule makes in order consideration of this resolution immediately after a tax bill is passed. I will not go into the specific language of my resolution at this juncture in the interest of time. I should also say that the new rule does give the minority the opportunity to modify our substitute to the committee bill.

We would have preferred to offer a perfecting amendment to the committee bill that would have expressed our Republican point of view relative to the $2,000 personal deduction across the board for itemizers as well as nonitemizers.

As Republicans, we do want the opportunity to vote on our substitute, which tracks much more closely the President's view of real tax reform because in our substitute, we do have marginal rates for individuals that track closely with what the President originally recommended at 35 percent.

The $2,000 personal exemption for both itemizers and nonitemizers is in our substitute.

It also incorporates a real minimum tax on individuals and corporations. While there is 25 percent minimum in the committee bill, our minimum on corporations is at a rate of 20 percent, and 22 percent for individuals, but even with those provisions there are still some who can get off scot-free. What we do to avoid this is come around with a 2-percent swipe on those individuals and corporations who still might get out from underneath the basic minimums.

So from the standpoint of fairness, no entity, individual, or corporation making money is going to get off scot-free. I think that is a good provision in our substitute.

We also retain one-half of the investment tax credit, and have much better depreciation schedules for capital-intensive industries. I have to say quite frankly in my district where I represent capital-intensive industries, that is an imperative. There are others in this body who feel the same way, and strongly about that particular issue.

Then finally, we have a better distribution to middle-income taxpayers. That is what our substitute does as distinguished from the committee-passed bill.

We get an opportunity to vote on our substitute. Now, admittedly, we are 71 votes behind in the politics around here. But I would like to think there are some things in that bill that would also appeal to my friends over here on the Democratic side.

Now let me conclude with an appeal to my side particularly.

How many times have we argued that this is the people's House where the great issues of our time have to be discussed and debated?

How many times have we condemned the majority for denying us the opportunity to just debate the issue and then, let the chips fall where they may?

This, my friends, is one of those times, and particularly when our President has made a personal appeal to give him the chance to keep the process alive.

The President has also reaffirmed to us that he will be bearing down on the other body to pass a bill that can truly be called tax reform.

I am going to vote for the rule and give the President his chance to carry the day for the issue that he feels so strongly about. I hope you too will join me in at least permitting the debating process to move forward by voting for the rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LATTA] has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would prefer to use the 4 minutes to have the debate closed by the Speaker.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman needs an extra minute, I will be glad to yield to the Speaker 1 minute.

Mr. O'NEILL. I accept, and I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. O'NEILL], the Speaker of the House, to close debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. O'NEILL] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. O'NEILL. Mr. Speaker, I stand here today with the knowledge that this is the farthest that any comprehensive tax reform bill has ever gone. I am just concluding 33 years. BOB MICHEL has been around here longer than I have. Before he was a Member of the House, he was an administrative assistant. I suppose there are about a dozen of us that have been here over 30 years.

Before I came to Congress, when I was actively interested in politics, I remember the Tax Department during the war coming up with a comprehensive tax reform bill. It was during the war, so it never saw the light of day.

People clamored for it and people said we needed it. Wilbur Mills, during the 1950's, you remember, BOB, held hearings. The hearings got nowhere.

My own beloved Jack Kennedy came forward with a tax bill, tax reform and a tax cut at the same time. The tax reform failed, but in order to stimulate the economy at that time, the Congress approved the tax cut but forgot about the tax reform.

Jimmy Carter, his heart and mind set on tax reform, did not get it. We came out with a tax cut.

That has been the history of tax reform for the last 40 years. We are closer to it now, than we have ever been before.

Over the last 4 years during the Presidency of Ronald Reagan, we have had three tax bills. Some things we raised, some thing we cut, some loopholes we closed, some loopholes we opened. That is about the only thing we have done.

The result of 40 years of only talking about reform is that the American people have lost confidence in the fairness and the integrity of our tax laws. Our country used to have the greatest voluntary tax system in the world. Americans paid their taxes with pride. But along the line, this voluntary tax system of ours has been threatened, threatened by a widespread perception that some segments of our society are not paying their fair share of the costs of this democracy.

When we talk about tax reform, what does the average person think of? He is upset at a neighbor that makes $90,000, or a person in a nicer area than he lives who makes $200,000 a year and pays no taxes. He thinks that is unfair. That is what he thinks about tax reform.

When he reads of 250 corporations in America, the giants of industry, who because of their shrewdness and their cleverness and their ability to interpret the law pay no taxes, it hurts him. He thinks that he has been taken in, and rightly so.

This legislation will create new opportunities, in my opinion, for 6 million working Americans of the edge of poverty. It will take them off the taxrolls. They already pay a tax plus the tax they pay as Social Security tax. What an opportunity we would be giving to them.

This legislation for the first time has a minimum tax in it. It will make corporations pay a tax. It will make those who take advantage of the loopholes, who earn $100,000 or $200,000 pay taxes. This is going to please your neighbor. This is going to please the average citizen of America, because what does he long for in this great democracy of ours? He longs for fairness.

This is the first chance I have seen in my 33 years in the Congress of the United States, a body that I love, that I see an opportunity for tax reform.

Now there are those who are complaining about this bill. This bill was written by the Ways and Means Committee, and DAN ROSTENKOWSKI has said that it has been a bipartisan product. I know that there was assistance from the White House, from Jim Baker. I know that the President acquiesced along the line.

This is not a Democratic tax bill. This is a bipartisan tax bill.

I represent an area in which there are 21 universities. You take away from them the IDB's. I had so many people in my area from those universities, the largest single employer in my district. I would like to think of the economy at all times, but I have to think of the national interest. We have to think of fairness. We have to think of what the people really want.

Is it right? Is it right that corporations of America should pay no taxes, that the wealthy of America should find loopholes? The answer is no.

This is a vote for a long overdue change in favor of fairness. It is a vote for the working people of America over the special interests. It is a vote for the individual taxpayer over the well-financed corporations. It is a vote to restore the confidence of our neighbor in our Tax Code.

I believe this process should go forward. There is inequity in every piece of legislation.

This body is controlled by my party. I am not talking today as a leader of my party, I am talking as one who loves this body, who understands the process.

If we pass this bill here today and we send it to the other body, they will act with Mr. Baker and they will act with the President of the United States, and he will acquiesce, and eventually you will get to a conference.

Let me just say this to you, Republicans on this side and Democrats on this side: All of us Americans, America, the people are crying for fairness in our Tax Code. It is a voluntary Tax Code that we have seen erode. In my 33 years in the Congress, we have never come this close.

I ask you to vote for the rule. I ask you to vote for the bill. I ask you to send it to the other body so that ultimately both parties can work out the final passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time has expired.

SEC. 101. (a) Section 201(d) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446(d)) is amended by striking out paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(1)(A) During the period beginning on January 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1990, the price of milk shall be supported as provided in this subsection.

"(B) During the period beginning on January 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1986, the price of milk shall be supported at a rate equal to $11.60 per hundredweight for milk containing 3.67 percent milkfat.

"(C)(i) During the period beginning on January 1, 1987, and ending on September 30, 1987, the price of milk shall be supported at a rate equal to $11.35 per hundredweight for milk containing 3.67 percent milkfat.

"(ii) Except as provided in subparagraph (D), during the period beginning on October 1, 1987, and ending on December 31, 1990, the price of milk shall be supported at a rate equal to $11.10 per hundredweight for milk containing 3.67 percent milkfat.

"(D)(i) Subject to clause (ii), if for any of the calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990, the level of purchases of milk and the products of milk under this subsection (less sales under section 407 for unrestricted use), as estimated by the Secretary on January 1 of such calendar year, will exceed 5,000,000,000 pounds (milk equivalent), on January 1 of such calendar year, the Secretary shall reduce by 50 cents the rate of price support for milk as in effect on such date.

"(ii) The rate of price support for milk may not be reduced under clause (i) unless—

"(I) the milk production termination program under paragraph (3) achieved a reduction in the production of milk by participants in the program of at least 12,000,000,000 pounds during the 18 months of the program; or

"(II) the Secretary submits to Congress a certification, including a statement of facts in support of the certification of the Secretary, that reasonable contract offers were extended by the Secretary under such program but such offers were not accepted by a sufficient number of producers making reasonable bids for contracts to achieve such a reduction in production.

"(E) If for any of the calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990, the level of purchases of milk and the products of milk under this subsection (less sales under section 407 for unrestricted use), as estimated by the Secretary on January 1 of such calendar year, will not exceed 2,500,000,000 pounds (milk equivalent), the Secretary shall increase by 50 cents the rate of price support for milk in effect on such date.

"(F) The price of milk shall be supported through the purchase of milk and the products of milk.

"(2)(A) During the period beginning on April 1, 1986, and ending on September 30, 1987, the Secretary shall provide for a reduction to be made in the price received by producers for all milk produced in the United States and marketed by producers for commercial use.

"(B) The amount of the reduction under subparagraph (A) in the price received by producers shall be—

"(i) the period beginning on April 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1986, 40 cents per hundredweight of milk marketed; and

"(ii) during the first 9 months of 1987, 25 cents per hundredweight of milk marketed.

"(C) The funds represented by the reduction in price, required under subparagraph (A) to be applied to the marketings of milk by a producer, shall be collected and remitted to the Commodity Credit Corporation, at such time and in such manner as prescribed by the Secretary, by each person making payment to a producer for milk purchased from such producer, except that in the case of a producer who markets milk of the producer's own production directly to consumers, such funds shall be remitted directly to the Corporation by such producer.

"(D) The funds remitted to the Corporation under this paragraph shall be considered as included in the payments to a producer of milk for purposes of the minimum price provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937.".

(b) Paragraph (3) of section 201(d) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446(d)) is amended by—

(1) striking out subparagraphs (A) through (G), and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(A)(i) The Secretary shall establish and carry out under this paragraph a milk production termination program for the 18-month period beginning April 1, 1986.

"(ii) Under the milk production termination program required under this subparagraph, the Secretary, at the request of any producer of milk in the United States who submits to the Secretary a bid, may offer to enter into a contract with the producer for the purpose of terminating the production of milk by the producer in return for a payment to be made by the Secretary.

"(iii) For the 18-month period for which the milk production termination program under this subparagraph is in effect, the Secretary shall—

"(I) as soon as practicable, determine the total number of dairy cattle the Secretary estimates will be marketed for slaughter as a result of such program; and

"(II) by regulation specify marketing procedures to ensure that greater numbers of dairy cattle slaughtered as a result of the production termination program provided for in this section shall be slaughtered in each of the periods of April through August 1986, and March through August 1987 than for the other months of the program. Such procedures also shall ensure that such sales of dairy cattle for slaughter shall occur on a basis estimated by the Secretary that maintains historical seasonal marketing patterns. During such 18-month period, the Secretary shall limit the total number of dairy cattle marketed for slaughter under the program in excess of the historical dairy herd culling rate to no more than 7 percent of the national dairy herd per calendar year.

"(iv) Each contract made under this subparagraph shall provide that—"(I) the producer shall sell for slaughter or for export all the dairy cattle in which such producer owns an interest;

"(II) during a period of 3, 4, or 5 years, as specified by the Secretary in each producer contract and beginning on the day the producer completes compliance with subclause (I), the producer neither shall acquire any interest in dairy cattle or in the production of milk nor acquire, or make available to any person, any milk production capacity of a facility that becomes available because of compliance by a producer with such subclause unless the Secretary shall by regulation otherwise permit; and

"(III) if the producer fails to comply with such contract, the producer shall repay to the Secretary the entire payment received under the contract, including simple interest payable at a rate prescribed by the Secretary, which shall, to the extent practicable, reflect the cost to the Corporation of its borrowings from the Treasury of the United States, commencing on the date payment is first received under such contract.

"(v) Any producer of milk who seeks to enter into a contract for payments under this paragraph shall provide the Secretary with (I) evidence of such producer's marketing history; (II) the size and composition of the producer's dairy herd during the period the marketing history is determined; and (III) the size and composition of the producer's dairy herd at the time the bid is submitted, as the Secretary deems necessary and appropriate.

"(vi) Except as provided in subparagraph (D), no producer who commenced marketing of milk in the 15-month period ending March 31, 1986, shall be eligible to enter into a contract for payments under this subparagraph.

"(vii) A contract entered into under this paragraph by a producer who by reason of death cannot perform or assign such contract may be performed or assigned by the estate of such producer.

"(B) The Secretary may establish and carry out a milk diversion or milk production termination program for any of the calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990 as necessary to avoid the creation of burdensome excess supplies of milk or milk products.

"(C) In setting the terms and conditions of any milk diversion or milk production termination under this paragraph and of each contract made under this subparagraph, the Secretary shall take into account any adverse effect of such program or contracts on beef, pork, and poultry producers in the United States and shall take all feasible steps to minimize such effect.

"(D) A producer who commenced marketing milk after December 31, 1984, shall be eligible to enter into a contract for payments under this subparagraph if such producer's entire milk production facility and entire dairy herd were transferred to the producer by reason of a gift from, or the death of, a member or members of the family of the producer. The term 'member of the family of the producer' means (i) an ancestor of the producer, (ii) the spouse of the producer, (iii) a lineal descendant of the producer, or the producer's spouse, or a parent of the producer, or (iv) the spouse of any such lineal descendant.";

(2) striking out subparagraphs (H), (I), (J), (L), and (O); and

(3) redesignating subparagraph (K) as subparagraph (E).

(2) striking out ", (ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "or";

(3) striking out ", or (iii)" and all that follows through "paragraph (3)";

(4) redesignating the text thereof as clause (i);

(5) adding at the end thereof the following:

"(ii) Each person who buys, from a producer with respect to whom there is in effect at the time of such sale a contract entered into under paragraph (3), one or more dairy cattle sold for slaughter or export, who knows that such cattle are sold for slaughter or export, and who fails to cause the slaughter or export of such cattle within a reasonable time after receiving such cattle shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 with respect to each of such cattle.

"(iii) Each person who retains or acquires an interest in dairy cattle or the production of milk in violation of a contract entered into under this paragraph shall be liable, in addition to any amount due under paragraph (3)(A)(iv), to a marketing penalty on the quantity of milk produced during the period in which such ownership is prohibited under the contract. Such penalty shall be computed at the rate or rates of the support price for milk in effect during the period in which the milk production occurred.

"(iv) Each person who makes a false statement in a bid submitted under paragraph (3) as to (I) the marketings of milk for commercial use by the producer, or (II) the size or composition of the dairy herd that produced such marketings, or (III) the size or composition of the dairy herd at the time the bid is submitted shall be subject, in addition to any amount due under paragraph (3)(A)(iv) or clause (iii) of this subparagraph, to a civil penalty of $5,000 for each head of cattle to which such statement applied.

"(v) Each person who makes a false statement as to the number of dairy cattle that was sold for slaughter or export under a contract under paragraph (3)(A) shall be subject, in addition to any amount due under paragraph (3)(A)(iv) or clause (iii) of this subparagraph, to a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each head of cattle to which such statement applied.".

The legal status of producer handlers of milk under the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, shall be the same after the amendments made by this title take effect as it was before the effective date of such amendments.

Subtitle D—National Commission on Dairy Policy

FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 141. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the Federal program established to support the price of milk marketed by producers in the United States was created to provide price and income protection for milk producers as well as to assure consumers of an adequate supply of milk and dairy products at reasonable prices;

(2) the milk production industry in the United States is composed primarily of small- and medium-sized family farm operations;

(3) consumers in the United States benefit financially from a milk price support program that prohibits large fluctuations in the price and supply of milk and dairy products;

(4) consumers in the United States also benefit financially from the current structure of the domestic milk production industry; and

(5) the Office of Technology Assessment, in its report entitled "Technology, Public Policy, and the Changing Structure of American Agriculture", found that larger milk production operations already enjoy a major advantage in the production of milk and that, under current Federal policy, the development and use of new technologies will permit a continued trend toward fewer and larger milk production operations throughout the country.

(b) It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to respond to the development of new technologies in the domestic milk production industry by reviewing the present milk price support program and its alternatives, and by adopting such policies as are needed to prevent significant surplus production in the future while ensuring that the current small- and medium-sized family farm structure of such industry will be preserved for new generations of producers and consumers alike.

ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION

SEC. 142. (a) There is hereby established a National Commission on Dairy Policy, which shall study and make recommendations concerning the future operation of the Federal program established to support the price of milk marketed by producers in the United States.

(b) The Commission shall be composed of eighteen members who are engaged in the commercial production of milk in the United States, to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture. Not fewer than twelve members shall be appointed from nominations submitted to the Secretary by the following Members of Congress, after consultation with the other Members of Congress who sit on the specified committee of the respective House of Congress:

(1) The Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives.

(2) The ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives.

(3) The Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

(4) The ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

Each such Member of Congress shall make not fewer than eighteen such nominations for appointment to the Commission, but not more than two such nominations for any particular vacancy on the Commission. The Secretary shall appoint not fewer than three individuals from among the nominations submitted by each such Member of Congress. Each member of the Commission shall represent a milk-producing region of the United States. A region may be made up of more than one State and may be represented by more than one member of the Commission. In making such appointments, the Secretary shall take into account, to the extent practicable, the geographical distribution of milk production volume throughout the United States. In determining geographical representation, whole States shall be considered as a unit.

(c) A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(d) The Commission shall elect a chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(e) The Commission shall meet at the call of the chairman or a majority of the members of the Commission.

STUDY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

SEC. 143. (a) The National Commission on Dairy Policy shall study—

(1) the current Federal price support program for milk;

(2) alternatives to such program;

(3) the future functioning of such program;

(4) new technologies that will become a part of the milk production industry before the end of this century;

(5) the effect that developing technologies will have on surplus milk production; and

(6) the future structure of the milk production industry.

In conducting such study, the Commission shall consider, among other things, how effective the current Federal price support program for milk will be in preventing significant surpluses of dairy products in the future, how well such program will respond to the challenges to the family farm structure of the milk production industry created by developing technologies, and whether or not a better response to those challenges could be achieved through modifications or revisions of current Federal policy.

(b) On the basis of its study, the Commission shall make findings and develop recommendations for consideration by the Secretary of Agriculture and Congress with respect to the future operation of the Federal price support program for milk.

(c) The Commission shall submit to the Secretary of Agriculture and Congress, not later than March 31, 1987, a report containing the results of its study and recommendations based on such results.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 144. (a) The heads of executive agencies, the General Accounting Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the Congressional Budget Office, to the extent permitted by law, shall provide to the National Commission on Dairy Policy such information as the Commission may require to carry out its duties and functions.

(b) Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation for work on the Commission. While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of duties of the Commission, members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law for persons serving intermittently in the Government service under section 5703 of title 5 of the United States Code.

(c) To the extent there are sufficient funds available to the Commission in advance under section [139], and subject to such rules as may be adopted by the Commission, the Commission, without regard to the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code governing appointments in the competitive service and without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to the classification and General Schedule pay rates, may—

(1) appoint and fix the compensation of a director; and

(2) appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Commission determines necessary to assist it to carry out its duties and functions.

(d) On the request of the Commission, the heads of executive agencies, the General Accounting Office, and the Office of Technology Assessment may furnish the Commission with such personnel and support services as the head of the agency, or office, and the chairman of the Commission agree are necessary to assist the Commission to carry out its duties and functions. The Commission shall not be required to pay or reimburse any agency or office for personnel and support services provided under this subsection.

(e) The Commission shall be exempt from sections 7(d), 10(e), 10(f), and 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(f) The Commission shall be exempt from the requirements of sections 4301 through 4305 of title 5 of the United States Code.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

SEC. 145. (a) Following the appointment or designation of the members of the National Commission on Dairy Policy, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1342 of title 31 of the United States Code, the Secretary of Agriculture may receive on behalf of the Commission, from persons, groups, and entities within the United States, contributions of money and services to assist the Commission to carry out its duties and functions. Any money contributed under this section shall be made available to the Commission to carry out this subtitle. In no event may the Secretary accept an aggregate amount of contributions from any one person, group, or entity exceeding 10 percent of the budget of the Commission.

(b) If the contributions under subsection (a) are insufficient to carry out this subtitle, the Secretary of Agriculture may transfer to the Commission, from funds available to the Commodity Credit Corporation, an amount not to exceed $1,000,000 to carry out this subtitle.

TERMINATION OF COMMISSION

SEC. 146. The National Commission on Dairy Policy shall cease to exist thirty days following the submission of its report to the Secretary of Agriculture and Congress.

Subtitle E—Miscellaneous

(c) The program shall be operated under such rules and regulations issued by the Secretary as the Secretary deems necessary to ensure, among other things, that—

(1) payments may be made under the program only on the quantity of dairy products sold by an entity for export in any year that is in addition to, and not in place of, any export sales of dairy products that the entity would otherwise make in the absence of the program; and

(2) to the extent practicable, dairy products sold for export under the program will not displace commercial export sales of United States dairy products by other exporters.

(d)(1) The regulations issued by the Secretary may provide for payments under the program to be made in cash or in commodities of equal value that are available in Commodity Credit Corporation stock.

(2) If payments in commodities are authorized, such payments may be made through the issuance of certificates redeemable in commodities.

(3) If payments are authorized to be made in dairy products, the regulations issued by the Secretary shall ensure that such dairy products, or an equal amount of other dairy products, will be sold for export by the entity and that any such export sales by the entity will be in addition to, and not in place of, export sales of dairy products that the entity would otherwise make under program or in the absence of the program, and, to the extent practicable, will not displace commercial export sales of United States dairy products by other exporters.

(e)(1) The payments made under the program shall be made at a rate or rates established or approved by the Secretary, taking into consideration, among other things the type of product to be exported, the domestic price of dairy products, and world price of the dairy products.

(2) Any such rate established or approved by the Secretary shall be published in the Federal Register or publicly announced through other appropriate means, and shall be at a level or levels as will encourage the exportation of United States dairy products by entities.

TITLE III—WHEAT

WHEAT POLL

SEC. 301. (a) Not later than July 1, 1986, the Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct a poll, by mail ballot, of eligible producers of wheat to determine whether such producers favor the imposition of mandatory limits on the production of wheat that will result in wheat prices that are not lower than 125 percent of the cost of production (excluding land and residual returns to management) as determined by the Secretary.

(b) The Secretary shall conduct such poll in such a manner as will reflect the types and sizes of farm operations (including livestock), distinctions among types and classes of wheat produced, and such demographic and other information as the Secretary determines is necessary to reflect State, regional, and national responses.

(c) To be eligible to vote in such poll, a producer must have produced a crop of wheat during at least one of the 1981 through 1985 crop years for wheat on a farm with a wheat crop acreage base of at least 40 acres.

MARKETING QUOTAS

SEC. 302. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 332 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1332) is amended to read as follows:

"PROCLAMATION OF MARKETING QUOTAS

"SEC. 332. (a) As used in sections 332 through 338:

"(1) The term 'base period' means the 1981 through 1985 crop years for wheat.

"(2) The term 'marketing quota period' means the 1987 through 1990 marketing years for wheat.

"(b)(1) The Secretary may—

"(A) proclaim national marketing quotas for wheat for each marketing year of the marketing quota period not later than June 15, 1986; and

"(B) conduct, by mail ballot, a marketing quota referendum not later than August 1, 1986.

"(2) The quantity of the national marketing quota for wheat for any marketing year shall be a quantity of wheat that the Secretary estimates is required to meet anticipated needs during such marketing year, taking into consideration domestic requirements, export demand, emergency food aid needs, and adequate carryover stocks.

"(c) If, after the proclamation of a national marketing quota for wheat for any marketing year, the Secretary determines that the national marketing quota should be terminated or adjusted to meet a national emergency or a material change in the demand for wheat, the Secretary shall adjust or terminate the national marketing quota.".

MARKETING QUOTA APPORTIONMENT FACTOR

SEC. 303. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 333 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1333) is amended to read as follows:

"MARKETING QUOTA APPORTIONMENT FACTOR

"SEC. 333. (a) The Secretary shall establish a marketing quota apportionment factor for each crop of wheat for which a national marketing quota is proclaimed under section 332.0

"(b) The apportionment factor shall be determined by dividing—

"(1) the national marketing quota for such crop of wheat; by

"(2) the average number of bushels of wheat the Secretary determines was produced in the United States during the base period, adjusted to reflect the quantity of wheat that would have been produced during such years except for—

"(A) drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other conditions beyond the control of producers; and

"(B) participation in any acreage reduction, set-aside, or diversion programs for wheat during such crop years, as determined by the Secretary.".

FARM MARKETING QUOTAS

SEC. 304. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 334 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1334) is amended to read as follows:

"FARM MARKETING QUOTAS

"SEC. 334. (a) For each crop of wheat for which a national marketing quota has been proclaimed under section 332, the Secretary shall establish a farm marketing quota for each farm on which wheat was planted for harvest, or considered planted for harvest, during the base period.

"(b) The farm marketing quota shall be equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(1) the average number of acres of wheat planted for harvest, or considered planted for harvest, on the farm during the base period; by

"(2) the average yield of wheat planted for harvest, or considered planted for harvest, on the farm during such base period, as determined by the Secretary on such basis as the Secretary determines will provide a fair and equitable yield; by

"(3) the marketing quota apportionment factor.

"(c) For purposes of this section, wheat shall be considered to have been planted for harvest on the farm in any crop year to the extent that the Secretary determines that wheat was not planted for harvest on the farm because—

"(1) of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producer, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(2) the producer on the farm participated in any acreage reduction, set-aside, or diversion program for wheat during such crop years.

"(d) Farm marketing quotas shall be established by the Secretary under this section by June 1 of the calendar year preceding each marketing year for which a national marketing quota has been proclaimed under section 332.".

MARKETING PENALTIES

SEC. 305. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 335 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1335) is amended to read as follows:

"MARKETING PENALTIES

"SEC. 335. (a) The marketing of wheat produced on a farm in excess of a farm marketing quota shall be subject to a penalty at a rate per bushel equal to 75 percent of the national average market price for wheat during the immediately preceding marketing year.

"(b) The penalty provided for in subsection (a) shall be paid—

"(1) in the case of wheat marketed by sale to a person within the United States, by the person who acquired the wheat from the producer, except that an amount equivalent to the penalty may be deducted by the buyer from the price paid to the producer;

"(2) in the case of wheat marketed through a warehouseman or agent, by the warehouseman or agent, who may deduct an amount equivalent to the penalty from the price paid to the producer; or

"(3) in the case of wheat marketed directly to any person outside the United States, by the producer.

"(c) If any producer falsely identifies, or fails to certify, the acreage planted to wheat for harvest or fails to account for the disposition of any wheat produced on such planted acreage in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary—

"(1) a quantity of wheat equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the farm program payment yield, as determined by the Secretary under title V of the Agricultural Act of 1949; by

"(B) the planted acreage, shall be deemed to have been marketed in excess of the farm marketing quota; and

"(2) the penalty provided for in subsection (a) on such quantity of wheat shall be paid by the producer.

"(d) Each producer having an interest in the crop of wheat on any farm for which a penalty is determined shall be jointly and severally liable for the entire amount of the penalty.

"(e) Wheat subject to a farm marketing quota may be carried over by the producer from one marketing year to the succeeding marketing year, and may be marketed without incurring a penalty under this section in the succeeding marketing year, to the extent that—

"(1) the total quantity of wheat available for marketing from the farm in the marketing year from which the wheat is carried over does not exceed the farm marketing quota; or

"(2) the total quantity of wheat available for marketing in the succeeding marketing year (including any quantity of wheat carried over) does not exceed the farm marketing quota for the succeeding marketing year.

"(f) Wheat produced in a calendar year in which marketing quotas are in effect for the marketing year beginning therein shall be subject to such quotas even though it is marketed prior to the date on which such marketing year begins.

"(g)(1) The Secretary shall require collection of the penalty provided for in this section on a proportion of each unit of wheat marketed from the farm equal to the proportion that the wheat available for marketing from the farm in excess of the farm marketing quota is of the total quantity of wheat available for marketing from the farm, if satisfactory proof is not furnished to the Secretary as to the disposition to be made of the excess wheat, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary, prior to the marketing of any wheat from the farm.

"(2) All funds collected under this section during a marketing year shall be deposited in a special account established in the Treasury of the United States until the end of the next succeeding marketing year. On certification of the Secretary, there shall be paid out of such special account to a person designated by the Secretary the amount by which the penalty collected exceeds that amount of penalty due on wheat marketed in excess of the farm marketing quota for a farm. Such special account shall be administered by the Secretary. The basis for, the amount of, and the person entitled to receive a payment from such account, when determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall be final and conclusive.

"(h) Until the amount of the penalty provided by this section is paid, a lien on—

"(1) the wheat with respect to which such penalty is incurred; and

"(2) any subsequent wheat subject to marketing quotas in which the person liable for the payment of such penalty has an interest, shall be in effect in favor of the United States for the amount of the penalty.

"(i) A person liable for the payment or collection of a penalty on any quantity of wheat shall be liable also for interest thereon from the date the penalty becomes due until the date of payment of such penalty at a rate per annum equal to the rate of interest that was charged the Commodity Credit Corporation by the Treasurer of the United States on the date such penalty became due.

"(j)(1) If marketing quotas for wheat are not in effect for any marketing year, all previous marketing quotas applicable to wheat shall be terminated, effective as of the first day of such marketing year.

"(2) Such termination shall not—

"(A) abate any penalty previously incurred by a producer; or

"(B) relieve any buyer of the duty to remit penalties previously collected.".

REFERENDUM

SEC. 306. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 336 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1336) is amended to read as follows:

"REFERENDUM

"SEC. 336. (a) If a national marketing quota for wheat for the marketing quota period is proclaimed, not later than August 1, 1986, the Secretary shall conduct, by mail ballot, a referendum of eligible producers to determine whether they favor or oppose marketing quotas for such period.

"(b) Any producer who produced wheat on a farm during at least one of the crop years of the base period shall be eligible to vote in the referendum.

"(c) Not later than 30 days after the conduct of such referendum, the Secretary shall proclaim the results of such referendum.

"(d) If the Secretary determines that 60 percent or more of the producers voting in the referendum approve marketing quotas, the Secretary shall proclaim that marketing quotas will be in effect for the marketing quota period.".

TRANSFER OF FARM MARKETING QUOTAS

SEC. 307. Effective only for the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, section 338 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1338) is amended to read as follows:

"TRANSFER OF FARM MARKETING QUOTAS

"SEC. 338. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), farm marketing quotas shall not be transferable.

"(b) In accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary for such purpose--

"(1) the farm marketing quota for a farm for any marketing year, or any portion thereof, may be voluntarily surrendered to the Secretary by the producer; and

"(2) the Secretary may reallocate any farm marketing quotas so surrendered to other farms having farm marketing quotas on such basis as the Secretary may determine.".

LOAN RATES, TARGET PRICES, DISASTER PAYMENTS, ACREAGE LIMITATION AND SET-ASIDE PROGRAMS, AND LAND DIVERSION FOR THE 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF WHEAT

SEC. 308. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat, the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by inserting after section 107C (7 U.S.C. 1445b-2) the following new section:

"SEC. 107D. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) through (4), the Secretary shall make available to producers loans and purchases for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat at such level as the Secretary determines will maintain the competitive relationship of wheat to other grains in domestic and export markets after taking into consideration the cost of producing wheat, supply and demand conditions, and world prices for wheat.

"(2) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are in effect, the loan and purchase level determined under paragraph (1) shall not be less than the higher of—

"(A) 75 percent of the national average cost of production per bushel of wheat, as determined by the Secretary, taking into consideration variable expenses, general farm overhead, taxes, insurance, interest, and capital replacement costs (but excluding residual returns for management and risk); or

"(B) $3.55 per bushel.

"(3) Except as provided in paragraph (4), for any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect, the loan and purchase level determined under paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) in the case of the 1986 crop of wheat, not be less than $3.00 per bushel; and

"(B) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, not be less than 75 percent, nor more than 85 percent, of the simple average price received by producers of wheat, as determined by the Secretary, during the marketing years for the immediately preceding 5 crops of wheat, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period, except that the loan and purchase level for a crop determined under this clause may not be reduced by more than 5 percent from the level determined for the preceding crop.

"(4)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect, if the Secretary determines that the average price received by producers for wheat in the previous marketing year was not more than 110 percent of the loan and purchase level for wheat for such marketing year or determines that such action is necessary to maintain a competitive market position for wheat, the Secretary—

"(i) in the case of the 1986 crop of wheat, shall reduce the loan and purchase level for wheat for the marketing year by the amount the Secretary determines necessary to maintain domestic and export markets for grain but not less than 10 percent of the loan and purchase level for such crop; and

"(ii) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat, may reduce the loan and purchase level for wheat for the marketing year by the amount the Secretary determines necessary to maintain domestic and export markets for grain.

"(B) The loan and purchase level may not be reduced under subparagraph (A) by more than 20 percent in any year.

"(C) Any reduction in the loan and purchase level for wheat under this paragraph shall not be considered in determining the loan and purchase level for wheat for subsequent years.

"(5)(A) The Secretary may permit a producer to repay a loan made under paragraph (1) for a crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(i) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(ii) the higher of—

"(I) 70 percent of such level;

"(II) if the loan level for a crop was reduced under paragraph (4), 70 percent of the loan level that would have been in effect but for the reduction under paragraph (4); or

"(III) the prevailing world market price for wheat, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) If the Secretary permits a producer to repay a loan in accordance with subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(i) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for wheat; and

"(ii) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall announce periodically the prevailing world market price for wheat.

"(6) For purposes of this section, the simple average price received by producers for the immediately preceding marketing year shall be based on the latest information available to the Secretary at the time of the determination.

"(b)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat, make payments available to producers who, although eligible to obtain a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a), agree to forgo obtaining such loan or agreement in return for such payments.

"(2) A payment under this subsection shall be computed by multiplying—

"(A) the loan payment rate; by

"(B) the quantity of wheat the producer is eligible to place under loan.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the quantity of wheat eligible to be placed under loan may not exceed the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(B) the farm program payment yield established for the farm.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the loan payment rate shall be the amount by which—

"(A) the loan level determined for such crop under subsection (a); exceeds

"(B) the level at which a loan may be repaid under subsection (a).

"(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall make available to producers payments for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat in an amount computed by multiplying—

"(i) the payment rate; by

"(ii) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(iii) the farm program payment yield for the crop for the farm.

"(B) Payments for any such crop for which marketing quotas are in effect shall not exceed an amount equal to the payment rate multiplied by the farm marketing quota.

"(C)(i) If an acreage limitation program under subsection (f)(2) is in effect for a crop of wheat and the producers on a farm devote a portion of the permitted wheat acreage of the farm (as determined in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(A)) equal to more than 8 percent of the permitted wheat acreage of the farm for the crop to conservation uses or nonprogram crops—

"(I) such portion of the permitted wheat acreage of the farm in excess of 8 percent of such acreage devoted to conservation uses or nonprogram crops shall be considered to be planted to wheat for the purpose of determining the individual farm program acreage in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(E) and for the purpose of determining the acreage on the farm required to be devoted to conservation uses in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(D); and

"(II) the producers shall be eligible for payments under this paragraph on such acreage, subject to the compliance of the producers with clause (ii).

"(ii) To be eligible for payments under clause (i), except as provided in clauses (iii) and (vii), the producers on the farm must actually plant wheat for harvest on at least 50 percent of the permitted wheat acreage of the farm.

"(iii) If a State or local agency has imposed in an area of a State or county a quarantine on the planting of wheat for harvest on farms in such area, the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) may recommend to the Secretary that payments be made under this paragraph, without regard to the requirement imposed under clause (ii), to producers in such area who were required to forgo the planting of wheat for harvest on acreage to alleviate or eliminate the condition requiring such quarantine. If the Secretary determines that such condition exists, the Secretary may make payments under this paragraph to such producers. To be eligible for payments under this clause, such producers may not plant feed grains, cotton, rice, or soybeans on such acreage.

"(iv) The wheat crop acreage base and wheat farm program payment yield of the farm shall not be reduced due to the fact that such portion of the permitted acreage of the farm was devoted to conserving uses or nonprogram crops.

"(v) Other than as provided in clauses (i) through (iv), payments may not be made under this paragraph for any crop on a greater acreage than the acreage actually planted to wheat.

"(vi) Any acreage considered to be planted to wheat in accordance with clause (i) may not also be designated as conservation use acreage for the purpose of fulfilling any provisions under any acreage limitation, set-aside program, or land diversion program requiring that the producers devote a specified acreage to conservation uses.

"(vii) This subparagraph shall not apply if the established price for wheat is determined pursuant to subparagraph (H)(i).

"(D)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the payment rate for wheat shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of wheat exceeds the higher of—

"(I) the national weighted average market price received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(II) the loan level determined for such crop, prior to any adjustment made under subsection (a)(4) for the marketing year for such crop of wheat.

"(ii) If the national weighted average market price received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year for a crop, as determined by the Secretary, exceeds $2.55 per bushel for the 1986 crop, $2.65 per bushel for the 1987 crop, or $2.82 per bushel for the 1988 crop, at the option of the Secretary, the payment rate for such crop of wheat shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of wheat exceeds the higher of—

"(I) $2.55 per bushel for the 1986 crop, $2.65 per bushel for the 1987 crop, and $2.82 per bushel for the 1988 crop; or

"(II) the loan level determined for such crop, prior to any adjustment made under subsection (a)(4) for the marketing year for such crop of wheat.

"(E)(i) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, if the Secretary adjusts the level of loans and purchases for wheat under subsection (a)(4), the Secretary shall provide emergency compensation by increasing the established price payments for wheat by such amount as the Secretary determines necessary to provide the same total return to producers as if the adjustment in the level of loans and purchases had not been made, taking into consideration any payments made as the result of subparagraph (D)(ii).

"(ii) In determining the payment rate, per bushel, for established price payments for a crop of wheat under this subparagraph, the Secretary shall use the national weighted average market price, per bushel of wheat, received by producers during the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary.

"(F) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are in effect, the established price shall not be less than the higher of—

"(i) the national average cost of production per bushel of wheat, as determined by the Secretary under subsection (a)(2); or

"(ii) $4.65 per bushel.

"(G) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect, the established price for wheat shall not be less than $4.38 per bushel for each of the 1986 and 1987 crops, $4.29 per bushel for the 1988 crop, $4.16 per bushel for the 1989 crop, and $4.00 per bushel for the 1990 crop.

"(H) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect, at the option of the Secretary and subject to subparagraph (G), the established price for wheat applicable to producers may be determined on the basis of—

"(i) the percentage by which the producers reduce the acreage planted to wheat on the farm for harvest from the crop acreage base for the farm in accordance with an acreage limitation program described in subsection (f)(2); or

"(ii) a graduated scale of production under which the amount of the payments made to the producers would vary for specified quantities of wheat produced by the producers and such payments would be targetted to commercial family farmers who have annual gross sales in excess of $20,000.

"(I) The total quantity on which payments would otherwise be payable to a producer on a farm for any crop under this paragraph shall be reduced by the quantity on which any disaster payment is made to the producer for the crop under paragraph (2).

"(J) The Secretary may pay not more than 5 percent of the total amount of a payment made under this paragraph in the form of wheat. The use of wheat in making payments to producers shall be subject to a determination by the Secretary of the effect that such in-kind payments will have on market prices for any commodity. The Secretary shall report such determination to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

"(K) As used in this paragraph, the term 'nonprogram crop' means any agricultural commodity other than wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, rice, or soybeans.

"(2)(A)(i) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that the producers on a farm are prevented from planting any portion of the acreage intended for wheat to wheat or other nonconserving crops because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the Secretary shall make a prevented planting disaster payment to the producers in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(I) the number of acres so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted to wheat for harvest (including any acreage that the producers were prevented from planting to wheat or other nonconserving crops in lieu of wheat because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers) in the immediately preceding year; by

"(II) 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary; by

"(III) a payment rate equal to 33 1/3 percent of the average of the established prices for the crop.

"(ii) Payments made by the Secretary under this subparagraph may be made in the form of cash or from stocks of wheat held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the total quantity of wheat that the producers are able to harvest on any farm is less than the result of multiplying 60 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary for such crop by the acreage planted for harvest for such crop, the Secretary shall make a reduced yield disaster payment to the producers at a rate equal to 50 percent of the established price for the crop for the deficiency in production below 60 percent for the crop.

"(C) Producers on a farm shall not be eligible for—

"(i) prevented planting disaster payments under subparagraph (A), if prevented planting crop insurance is available to the producers under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) with respect to the wheat acreage of the producers; or

"(ii) reduced yield disaster payments under subparagraph (B), if reduced yield crop insurance is available to the producers under such Act with respect to the wheat acreage of the producers.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding subparagraph (C), the Secretary may make a disaster payment to producers on a farm under this paragraph if the Secretary determines that—

"(I) as the result of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the producers on a farm have suffered substantial losses of production either from being prevented from planting wheat or other nonconserving crops or from reduced yields;

"(II) such losses have created an economic emergency for the producers;

"(III) crop insurance indemnity payments under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) and other forms of assistance made available by the Federal Government to such producers for such losses are insufficient to alleviate such economic emergency; and

"(IV) additional assistance must be made available to such producers to alleviate such economic emergency.

"(ii) The Secretary may make such adjustments in the amount of payments made available under this subparagraph with respect to an individual farm so as to assure the equitable allotment of such payments among producers, taking into account other forms of Federal disaster assistance provided to the producers for the crop involved.

"(d)(1)(A) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect and an acreage limitation program under subsection (f) is not in effect, the Secretary shall proclaim a national program acreage. The proclamation shall be made not later than June 1 of each calendar year for the crop harvested in the next succeeding calendar year, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, the proclamation shall be made as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(B) The Secretary may revise the national program acreage first proclaimed for any crop year for the purpose of determining the allocation factor under paragraph (2) if the Secretary determines it necessary based on the latest information. The Secretary shall proclaim such revised national program acreage as soon as it is made.

"(C) The national program acreage for wheat shall be the number of harvested acres the Secretary determines (on the basis of the weighted national average of the farm program payment yields for the crop for which the determination is made) will produce the quantity (less imports) that the Secretary estimates will be utilized domestically and for export during the marketing year for such crop.

"(D) If the Secretary determines that carryover stocks of wheat are excessive or an increase in stocks is needed to assure desirable carryover, the Secretary may adjust the national program acreage by the quantity the Secretary determines will accomplish the desired increase or decrease in carryover stocks.

"(2) The Secretary shall determine a program allocation factor for each crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect. The allocation factor for wheat shall be determined by dividing the national program acreage for the crop by the number of acres that the Secretary estimates will be harvested for such crop, except that in no event shall the allocation factor for any crop of wheat be more than 100 percent nor less than 80 percent.

"(3)(A)(i) Except as provided in subsection (f)(2), the individual farm program acreage for each crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect shall be determined by multiplying the allocation factor by the acreage of wheat planted for harvest on the farms for which individual farm program acreages are required to be determined.

"(ii) The individual farm program acreage shall not be further reduced by application of the allocation factor if the producers reduce the acreage of wheat planted for harvest on the farm from the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V by at least the percentage recommended by the Secretary in the proclamation of the national program acreage.

"(iii) The Secretary shall provide fair and equitable treatment for producers on farms on which the acreage of wheat planted for harvest is less than the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V, but for which the reduction is insufficient to exempt the farm from the application of the allocation factor.

"(iv) In establishing the allocation factor for wheat, the Secretary may make such adjustment as the Secretary deems necessary to take into account the extent of exemption of farms under the foregoing provisions of this paragraph.

"(B) For any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are in effect, the individual farm program acreage shall be the acreage on the farm that the Secretary determines is sufficient to produce the quantity of wheat equal to the farm marketing quota established for the farm under section 334 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

"(e) The farm program payment yields for farms for each crop of wheat shall be determined under title V.

"(f)(1)(A)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, except as provided in subparagraphs (B) through (E), if the Secretary determines that the total supply of wheat, in the absence of an acreage limitation or set-aside program, will be excessive taking into account the need for an adequate carryover to maintain reasonable and stable supplies and prices and to meet a national emergency, the Secretary may provide for any crop of wheat for which marketing quotas are not in effect either an acreage limitation program as described in paragraph (2) or a set-aside program as described in paragraph (3).

"(ii) In making a determination under clause (i), the Secretary shall take into consideration the number of acres placed in the conservation acreage reserve established under section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(iii) If the Secretary elects to put either of such programs into effect for any crop year, the Secretary shall announce such program not later than June 1 prior to the calendar year in which the crop is harvested, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, the Secretary shall announce such program as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(iv) Not later than July 31 of the year previous to the year in which the crop is harvested, the Secretary may make adjustments in the program announced under clause (iii) if the Secretary determines that there has been a significant change in the total supply of wheat since the program was first announced.

"(B) In the case of the 1986 crop of wheat, if the Secretary estimates, as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985, that the quantity of wheat on hand in the United States on the first day of the marketing year for that crop (not including any quantity of wheat of that crop) will be—

"(i) more than 1,000,000,000 bushels, the Secretary shall provide for—

"(I) an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than 15 percent nor more than 22 1/2 percent; and

"(II) a land diversion program (as described in paragraph (5)(A)) with in-kind payments under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by 2 1/2 percent of the wheat crop acreage base, in addition to any reduction required under subclause (I); or

"(ii) 1,000,000,000 bushels or less, the Secretary may provide for—

"(I) an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not more than 15 percent; and

"(II) a land diversion program as described in paragraph (5)(A).

"(C) In the case of the 1987 crop of wheat, if the Secretary estimates, not later than June 1 of the year previous to the year in which the crop is harvested, that the quantity of wheat on hand in the United States on the first day of the marketing year for that crop (not including any quantity of wheat of that crop) will be—

"(i) more than 1,000,000,000 bushels, the Secretary shall provide for an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than 20 percent but not more than 27 1/2 percent; or

"(ii) 1,000,000,000 bushels or less, the Secretary may provide for such an acreage limitation program under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not more than 20 percent.

"(D) In the case of each of the 1988 through 1990 crops of wheat, if the Secretary estimates, not later than June 1 of the year previous to the year in which the crop is harvested, that the quantity of wheat on hand in the United States on the first day of the marketing year for that crop (not including any quantity of wheat of that crop) will be—

"(i) more than 1,000,000,000 bushels, the Secretary shall provide for an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than 20 percent nor more than 30 percent; or

"(ii) 1,000,000,000 bushels or less, the Secretary may provide for such an acreage limitation program under which the acreage planted to wheat for harvest on a farm would be limited to the wheat crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not more than 20 percent.

"(E) As a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments for any such crop of wheat, except as provided in subsection (g), the producers on a farm must comply with the terms and conditions of the acreage limitation program and, if applicable, the land diversion program as provided in paragraph (1)(B)(i)(II).

"(2)(A)(i) If a wheat acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1), such limitation shall be achieved by applying a uniform percentage reduction to the wheat crop acreage base for the crop for each wheat-producing farm.

"(ii) If the Secretary elects to determine the established price for wheat applicable to producers as provided in subsection (c)(1)(H)(i), the limitation on the acreage planted to wheat shall be achieved by applying the percentage reductions selected by producers under subsection (c)(1)(H)(i) to the crop acreage base for each wheat-producing farm.

"(B) Except as provided in subsection (g), producers who knowingly produce wheat in excess of the permitted wheat acreage for the farm shall be ineligible for wheat loans, purchases, and payments with respect to that farm.

"(C) Wheat crop acreage bases for each crop of wheat shall be determined under title V.

"(D)(i) A number of acres on the farm shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary. Such number shall be determined by dividing—

"(I) the product obtained by multiplying the number of acres required to be withdrawn from the production of wheat times the number of acres planted to such commodity; by

"(II) the number of acres authorized to be planted to such commodity under the limitation established by the Secretary.

"(ii) The number of acres so determined is hereafter in this subsection referred to as 'reduced acreage'.

"(E) If an acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1) for a crop of wheat, subsection (d) shall not be applicable to such crop, including any prior announcement that may have been made under such subsection with respect to such crop. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c)(1)(C), the individual farm program acreage shall be the acreage planted on the farm to wheat for harvest within the permitted wheat acreage for the farm as established under this paragraph.

"(3)(A) If a set-aside program is announced under paragraph (1), as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments for wheat authorized by this Act (except as provided in subsection (g)), the producers on a farm must—

"(i) set aside and devote to conservation uses an acreage of cropland equal to a specified percentage, as determined by the Secretary, of the acreage of wheat planted for harvest for the crop for which the set-aside is in effect; and

"(ii) otherwise comply with the terms of such program.

"(B) The set-aside acreage shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

"(C) If a set-aside program is established, the Secretary may limit the acreage planted to wheat. Such limitation shall be applied on a uniform basis to all wheat-producing farms.

"(D) The Secretary may make such adjustments in individual set-aside acreages under this paragraph as the Secretary determines necessary—

"(i) to correct for abnormal factors affecting production; and

"(ii) to give due consideration to tillable acreage, crop-rotation practices, types of soil, soil and water conservation measures, topography, and such other factors as the Secretary determines necessary.

"(4)(A) The regulations issued by the Secretary under paragraphs (2) and (3) with respect to acreage required to be devoted to conservation uses shall assure protection of such acreage from weeds and wind and water erosion.

"(B) Subject to subparagraph (C), the Secretary may permit, subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage to be devoted to sweet sorghum, hay and grazing, or the production of guar, sesame, safflower, sunflower, castor beans, mustard seed, crambe, plantago ovato, flaxseed, triticale, rye, or other commodity, if the Secretary determines that such production is needed to provide an adequate supply of such commodities, is not likely to increase the cost of the price support program, and will not affect farm income adversely.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary shall permit, at the request of the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) for a State and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage diverted from production by participating producers in such State to be devoted to—

"(I) hay and grazing, in the case of the 1986 crop of wheat; and

"(II) grazing, in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of wheat.

"(ii) Haying and grazing shall not be permitted for any crop of wheat under clause (i) during any 5-consecutive-month period that is established for such crop for a State by the State committee established under section 8(b) of such Act.

"(D) In determining the quantity of land to be devoted to conservation uses under an acreage limitation or set-aside program with respect to land that has been farmed under summer fallow practices, as defined by the Secretary, the Secretary shall consider the effects of soil erosion and such other factors as the Secretary considers appropriate.

"(5)(A)(i) The Secretary may make land diversion payments to producers of wheat, whether or not an acreage limitation program, set-aside program, or marketing quotas for wheat are in effect, if the Secretary determines that such land diversion payments are necessary to assist in adjusting the total national acreage of wheat to desirable goals. Such land diversion payments shall be made to producers who, to the extent prescribed by the Secretary, devote to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland on the farm in accordance with land diversion contracts entered into by the Secretary with such producers.

"(ii) The amounts payable to producers under land diversion contracts may be determined through the submission of bids for such contracts by producers in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe or through such other means as the Secretary determines appropriate. In determining the acceptability of contract offers, the Secretary shall take into consideration the extent of the diversion to be undertaken by the producers and the productivity of the acreage diverted.

"(iii) The Secretary shall limit the total acreage to be diverted under agreements in any county or local community so as not to affect adversely the economy of the county or local community.

"(B)(i) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, the Secretary shall implement a land diversion program for the 1986 crop of wheat for producers who plant the 1986 crop of wheat before the announcement by the Secretary of the wheat acreage limitation program for that crop under which the Secretary shall make crop retirement and conservation payments to any such producer of the 1986 crop of wheat who—

"(I) reduces the acreage on the farm planted to wheat for harvest so that it does not exceed the wheat crop acreage base for the farm less an amount equivalent to 10 percent of the wheat crop acreage base (in addition to any reduction required under paragraph (2)); and

"(II) devotes to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland equivalent to the reduction required from the wheat crop acreage base under this paragraph.

"(ii) Payments under clause (i) shall be made in an amount computed by multiplying—

"(I) the diversion payment rate; by

"(II) the acreage diverted under this paragraph; by

"(III) the farm program payment yield for the crop.

"(iii) The diversion payment rate shall be $2.00 per bushel.

"(6)(A) Any reduced acreage, set-aside acreage, and additional diverted acreage may be devoted to wildlife food plots or wildlife habitat in conformity with standards established by the Secretary in consultation with wildlife agencies.

"(B) The Secretary may pay an appropriate share of the cost of practices designed to carry out the purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) The Secretary may also pay an appropriate share of the cost of approved soil and water conservation practices (including practices that may be effective for a number of years) established by the producer on reduced acreage, set-aside acreage, or additional diverted acreage.

"(D) The Secretary may provide for an additional payment on such acreage in an amount determined by the Secretary to be appropriate in relation to the benefit to the general public if the producer agrees to permit, without other compensation, access to all or such portion of the farm, as the Secretary may prescribe, by the general public, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking, subject to applicable State and Federal regulations.

"(7)(A) An operator of a farm desiring to participate in the program conducted under this subsection shall execute an agreement with the Secretary providing for such participation not later than such date as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) The Secretary may, by mutual agreement with producers on a farm, terminate or modify any such agreement if the Secretary determines such action necessary because of an emergency created by drought or other disaster or to prevent or alleviate a shortage in the supply of agricultural commodities.

"(8) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subsection, in carrying out the program conducted under this subsection, the Secretary may prescribe production targets for participating farms expressed in bushels of production so that all participating farms achieve the same pro rata reduction in production as prescribed by the national production targets.

"(g)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat, make payments available to producers who meet the requirements of this subsection.

"(2) Such payments shall be—

"(A) made in the form of wheat owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation; and

"(B) subject to the availability of such wheat.

"(3)(A) Payments under this subsection shall be determined in the same manner as provided in subsection (b).

"(B) The quantity of wheat to be made available to a producer under this subsection shall be equal in value to the payments so determined under such subsection.

"(4) A producer shall be eligible to receive a payment under this subsection for a crop if the producer—

"(A) agrees to forgo obtaining a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a);

"(B) agrees to forgo receiving payments under subsection (c);

"(C) does not plant wheat for harvest in excess of the crop acreage base reduced by one-half of any acreage required to be diverted from production under subsection (f); and

"(D) otherwise complies with this section.

"(h)(1) If the failure of a producer to comply fully with the terms and conditions of the program conducted under this section precludes the making of loans, purchases, and payments, the Secretary may, nevertheless, make such loans, purchases, and payments in such amounts as the Secretary determines are equitable in relation to the seriousness of the failure.

"(2) The Secretary may authorize the county and State committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) to waive or modify deadlines and other program requirements in cases in which lateness or failure to meet such other requirements does not affect adversely the operation of the program.

"(i) The Secretary may issue such regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out this section.

"(j) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(k) The provisions of section 8(g) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(g)) (relating to assignment of payments) shall apply to payments under this section.

"(l) The Secretary shall provide for the sharing of payments made under this section for any farm among the producers on the farm on a fair and equitable basis.

"(m) The Secretary shall provide adequate safeguards to protect the interests of tenants and sharecroppers.

"(n)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may not be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section.

"(2) If an acreage limitation program is established for a crop of wheat under subsection (f)(2), producers who participate in the program may not plant acreage of another commodity for which there is an acreage limitation program in effect in excess of the crop acreage base for the crop for the farm.

"(3) If a set-aside program is established for a crop of wheat under subsection (f)(3), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section.".

TITLE IV—FEED GRAINS

LOAN RATES, TARGET PRICES, DISASTER PAYMENTS, ACREAGE LIMITATION AND SET-ASIDE PROGRAMS, AND LAND DIVERSION FOR THE 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF FEED GRAINS

SEC. 401. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of feed grains, the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by adding after section 105B (7 U.S.C. 1444d) the following new section:

"SEC. 105C. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) through (4), the Secretary shall make available to producers loans and purchases for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of corn at such level as the Secretary determines will encourage the exportation of feed grains and not result in excessive total stocks of feed grains after taking into consideration the cost of producing corn, supply and demand conditions, and world prices for corn.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), the loan and purchase level determined under paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) in the case of the 1986 crop of corn, not be less than $2.40 per bushel; and

"(B) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of corn, not be less than 75 percent, nor more than 85 percent, of the simple average price received by producers of corn, as determined by the Secretary, during the marketing years for the immediately preceding 5 crops of corn, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period, except that the loan and purchase level for a crop determined under this clause may not be reduced by more than 5 percent from the level determined for the preceding crop.

"(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), if the Secretary determines that the average price received by producers for corn in the previous marketing year was not more than 110 percent of the loan and purchase level for corn for such marketing year or determines that such action is necessary to maintain a competitive market position for feed grains, the Secretary—

"(i) in the case of the 1986 crop of corn, shall reduce the loan and purchase level for corn for the marketing year by the amount the Secretary determines necessary to maintain domestic and export markets for grain but not less than 10 percent of the loan and purchase level for such crop; and

"(ii) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of corn, may reduce the loan and purchase level for corn for the marketing year by the amount the Secretary determines necessary to maintain domestic and export markets for grain.

"(B) The loan and purchase level may not be reduced under subparagraph (A) by more than 20 percent in any year.

"(C) Any reduction in the loan and purchase level for corn under this paragraph shall not be considered in determining the loan and purchase level for corn for subsequent years.

"(4)(A) The Secretary may permit a producer to repay a loan made under paragraph (1) or (6) for a crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(i) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(ii) the higher of—

"(I) 70 percent of such level;

"(II) if the loan level for a crop was reduced under paragraph (3), 70 percent of the loan level that would have been in effect but for the reduction under paragraph (3); or

"(III) the prevailing world market price for feed grains, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) If the Secretary permits a producer to repay a loan in accordance with subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(i) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for feed grains; and

"(ii) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall announce periodically the prevailing world market price for feed grains.

"(5) For purposes of this section, the simple average price received by producers for the immediately preceding marketing year shall be based on the latest information available to the Secretary at the time of the determination.

"(6) The Secretary shall make available to producers loans and purchases for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of grain sorghums, barley, oats, and rye, respectively, at such level as the Secretary determines is fair and reasonable in relation to the level that loans and purchases are made available for corn, taking into consideration the feeding value of such commodity in relation to corn and other factors specified in section 401(b).

"(b)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of corn, grain sorghums, barley, oats, and rye, make payments available to producers who, although eligible to obtain a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a), agree to forego obtaining such loan or agreement in return for such payments.

"(2) A payment under this subsection shall be computed by multiplying—

"(A) the loan payment rate; by

"(B) the quantity of such feed grains the producer is eligible to place under loan.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the quantity of feed grains eligible to be placed under loan may not exceed the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(B) the farm program payment yield established for the farm.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the loan payment rate shall be the amount by which—

"(A) the loan level determined for such crop under subsection (a); exceeds

"(B) the level at which a loan may be repaid under subsection (a).

"(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall make available to producers payments for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of corn, grain sorghums, oats, and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, in an amount computed by multiplying—

"(i) the payment rate; by

"(ii) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(iii) the farm program payment yield for the crop for the farm.

"(B)(i) If an acreage limitation program under subsection (f)(2) is in effect for a crop of feed grains and the producers on a farm devote a portion of the permitted feed grain acreage of the farm (as determined in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(A)) equal to more than 8 percent of the permitted feed grain acreage of the farm for the crop to conservation uses or nonprogram crops—

"(I) such portion of the permitted feed grain acreage of the farm in excess of 8 percent of such acreage devoted to conservation uses or nonprogram crops shall be considered to be planted to feed grains for the purpose of determining the individual farm program acreage in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(E) and for the purpose of determining the acreage on the farm required to be devoted to conservation uses in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(D); and

"(II) the producers shall be eligible for payments under this paragraph on such acreage, subject to the compliance of the producers with clause (ii).

"(ii) To be eligible for payments under clause (i), except as provided in clause (iii), the producers on the farm must actually plant feed grains for harvest on at least 50 percent of the permitted feed grain acreage of the farm.

"(iii) If a State or local agency has imposed in an area of a State or county a quarantine on the planting of feed grains for harvest on farms in such area, the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) may recommend to the Secretary that payments be made under this paragraph, without regard to the requirement imposed under clause (ii), to producers in such area who were required to forgo the planting of feed grains for harvest on acreage to alleviate or eliminate the condition requiring such quarantine. If the Secretary determines that such condition exists, the Secretary may make payments under this paragraph to such producers. To be eligible for payments under this clause, such producers may not plant wheat, cotton, rice, or soybeans on such acreage.

"(iv) The feed grain crop acreage base and feed grain program payment yield of the farm shall not be reduced due to the fact that such portion of the permitted acreage of the farm was devoted to conserving uses or nonprogram crops.

"(v) Other than as provided in clauses (i) through (iv), payments may not be made under this paragraph for any crop on a greater acreage than the acreage actually planted to feed grains.

"(vi) Any acreage considered to be planted to feed grains in accordance with clause (i) may not also be designated as conservation use acreage for the purpose of fulfilling any provisions under any acreage limitation or land diversion program requiring that the producers devote a specified acreage to conservation uses.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the payment rate for corn shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of corn exceeds the higher of—

"(I) the national weighted average market price received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(II) the loan level determined for such crop, prior to any adjustment made under subsection (a)(3) for the marketing year for such crop of corn.

"(ii) If the national weighted average market price received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year for a crop, as determined by the Secretary, exceeds $2.04 per bushel for the 1986 crop of corn, $2.19 per bushel for the 1987 crop, and $2.24 per bushel for the 1988 crop, at the option of the Secretary, the payment rate for such crop of corn shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of corn exceeds the higher of—

"(I) $2.04 per bushel for the 1986 crop, $2.19 per bushel for the 1987 crop, and $2.24 per bushel for the 1988 crop; or

"(II) the loan level determined for such crop, prior to any adjustment made under subsection (a)(3) for the marketing year for such crop of corn.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, if the Secretary adjusts the level of loans and purchases for feed grains under subsection (a)(4), the Secretary shall provide emergency compensation by increasing the established price payments for feed grains by such amount as the Secretary determines necessary to provide the same total return to producers as if the adjustment in the level of loans and purchases had not been made, taking into consideration any payments made as the result of subparagraph (C)(ii).

"(ii) In determining the payment rate, per bushel, for established price payments for a crop of feed grains under this subparagraph, the Secretary shall use the national weighted average market price, per bushel of wheat, received by producers during the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary.

"(E) The established price for corn shall not be less than $3.03 per bushel for each of the 1986 and 1987 crops, $2.97 per bushel for the 1988 crop, $2.88 per bushel for the 1989 crop, and $2.75 per bushel for the 1990 crop.

"(F) The payment rate for grain sorghums, oats, and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, shall be such rate as the Secretary determines is fair and reasonable in relation to the rate at which payments are made available for corn.

"(G) The total quantity on which payments would otherwise be payable to a producer on a farm for any crop under this paragraph shall be reduced by the quantity on which any disaster payment is made to the producer for the crop under paragraph (2).

"(H) The Secretary may pay not more than 5 percent of the total amount of a payment made under this paragraph in the form of feed grains. The use of feed grains in making payments to producers shall be subject to a determination by the Secretary of the effect that such in-kind payments will have on market prices for any commodity. The Secretary shall report such determination to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

"(I) As used in this paragraph, the term 'nonprogram crop' means any agricultural commodity other than wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, rice, or soybeans.

"(2)(A)(i) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that the producers on a farm are prevented from planting any portion of the acreage intended for feed grains to feed grains or other nonconserving crops because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the Secretary shall make a prevented planting disaster payment to the producers in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(I) the number of acres so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest (including any acreage that the producers were prevented from planting to feed grains or other nonconserving crops in lieu of feed grains because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers) in the immediately preceding year; by

"(II) 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary; by

"(III) a payment rate equal to 33 1/3 percent of the established price for the crop.

"(ii) Payments made by the Secretary under this subparagraph may be made in the form of cash or from stocks of feed grains held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the total quantity of feed grains that the producers are able to harvest on any farm is less than the result of multiplying 60 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary for such crop by the acreage planted for harvest for such crop, the Secretary shall make a reduced yield disaster payment to the producers at a rate equal to 50 percent of the established price for the crop for the deficiency in production below 60 percent for the crop.

"(C) Producers on a farm shall not be eligible for—

"(i) prevented planting disaster payments under subparagraph (A), if prevented planting crop insurance is available to the producers under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) with respect to the feed grain acreage of the producers; or

"(ii) reduced yield disaster payments under subparagraph (B), if reduced yield crop insurance is available to the producers under such Act with respect to the feed grain acreage of the producers.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding subparagraph (C), the Secretary may make a disaster payment to the producers on a farm under this paragraph if the Secretary determines that—

"(I) as the result of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the producers on a farm have suffered substantial losses of production either from being prevented from planting feed grains or other nonconserving crops or from reduced yields;

"(II) such losses have created an economic emergency for the producers;

"(III) crop insurance indemnity payments under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) and other forms of assistance made available by the Federal Government to such producers for such losses are insufficient to alleviate such economic emergency; and

"(IV) additional assistance must be made available to such producers to alleviate such economic emergency.

"(ii) The Secretary may make such adjustments in the amount of payments made available under this subparagraph with respect to an individual farm so as to assure the equitable allotment of such payments among producers, taking into account other forms of Federal disaster assistance provided to the producers for the crop involved.

"(d)(1)(A) Except for a crop with respect to which there is an acreage limitation program in effect under subsection (f), the Secretary shall proclaim a national program acreage for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of feed grains. The proclamation shall be made not later than September 30 of each calendar year for the crop harvested in the next succeeding calendar year, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, the proclamation shall be made as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(B) The Secretary may revise the national program acreage first proclaimed for any crop year for the purpose of determining the allocation factor under paragraph (2) if the Secretary determines it necessary based on the latest information. The Secretary shall proclaim such revised national program acreage as soon as it is made.

"(C) The national program acreage for feed grains shall be the number of harvested acres the Secretary determines (on the basis of the weighted national average of the farm program payment yields for the crop for which the determination is made) will produce the quantity (less imports) that the Secretary estimates will be utilized domestically and for export during the marketing year for such crop.

"(D) If the Secretary determines that carryover stocks of feed grains are excessive or an increase in stocks is needed to assure desirable carryover, the Secretary may adjust the national program acreage by the quantity the Secretary determines will accomplish the desired increase or decrease in carryover stocks.

"(2) The Secretary shall determine a program allocation factor for each crop of feed grains. The allocation factor for feed grains shall be determined by dividing the national program acreage for the crop by the number of acres that the Secretary estimates will be harvested for such crop, except that in no event shall the allocation factor for any crop of feed grains be more than 100 percent nor less than 80 percent.

"(3)(A) Except as provided in subsection (f)(2), the individual farm program acreage for each crop of feed grains shall be determined by multiplying the allocation factor by the acreage of feed grains planted for harvest on the farms for which individual farm program acreages are required to be determined.

"(B) The individual farm program acreage shall not be further reduced by application of the allocation factor if the producers reduce the acreage of feed grains planted for harvest on the farm from the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V by at least the percentage recommended by the Secretary in the proclamation of the national program acreage.

"(C) The Secretary shall provide fair and equitable treatment for producers on farms on which the acreage of feed grains planted for harvest is less than the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V, but for which the reduction is insufficient to exempt the farm from the application of the allocation factor.

"(D) In establishing the allocation factor for feed grains, the Secretary may make such adjustment as the Secretary deems necessary to take into account the extent of exemption of farms under the foregoing provisions of this paragraph.

"(e) The farm program payment yields for farms for each crop of feed grains shall be determined under title V.

"(f)(1)(A)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, except as provided in subparagraphs (B) through (D), if the Secretary determines that the total supply of feed grains, in the absence of an acreage limitation or set-aside program, will be excessive taking into account the need for an adequate carryover to maintain reasonable and stable supplies and prices and to meet a national emergency, the Secretary may provide for any crop of feed grains either an acreage limitation program as described in paragraph (2) or a set-aside program as described in paragraph (3).

"(ii) In making a determination under clause (i), the Secretary shall take into consideration the number of acres placed in the conservation acreage reserve established under section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(iii) If the Secretary elects to put either of such programs into effect for any crop year, the Secretary shall announce any such program not later than September 30 prior to the calendar year in which the crop is harvested, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, the Secretary shall announce such program as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(iv) Not later than November 15 of the year previous to the year in which the crop is harvested, the Secretary may make adjustments in an announcement made under clause (iii) if the Secretary determines that there has been a significant change in the total supply of feed grains since the program was first announced.

"(B) In the case of the 1986 crop of feed grains, if the Secretary estimates, as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985, that the quantity of corn on hand in the United States on the first day of the marketing year for that crop (not including any quantity of corn of that crop) will be—

"(i) more than 2,000,000,000 bushels, the Secretary shall provide for—

"(I) an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest on a farm would be limited to the feed grain crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than 12 1/2 percent nor more than 17 1/2 percent; and

"(II) a land diversion program (as described in paragraph (5)) with in-kind payments under which the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest on a farm would be limited to the feed grain acreage crop base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than an amount equivalent to 2 1/2 percent of the feed grain crop acreage base, in addition to any reduction required under subclause (I); or

"(ii) 2,000,000,000 bushels or less, the Secretary may provide for—

"(I) an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest on a farm would be limited to the feed grain crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not more than 12 1/2 percent; and

"(II) a land diversion program as described in paragraph (5).

"(C) In the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of feed grains, if the Secretary estimates, not later than September 30 of the year previous to the year in which the crop is harvested, that the quantity of corn on hand in the United States on the first day of the marketing year for that crop (not including any quantity of corn of that crop) will be—

"(i) more than 2,000,000,000 bushels, the Secretary shall provide for an acreage limitation program (as described in paragraph (2)) under which the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest on a farm would be limited to the feed grain crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not less than 12 1/2 percent nor more than 20 percent; or

"(ii) 2,000,000,000 bushels or less, the Secretary may provide for such an acreage limitation program under which the acreage planted to feed grains for harvest on a farm would be limited to the feed grain crop acreage base for the farm for the crop reduced by not more than 12 1/2 percent.

"(D) As a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments for any such crop of feed grains, except as provided in subsection (g), the producers on a farm must comply with the terms and conditions of the acreage limitation program and, if applicable, the land diversion program, as provided in paragraph (1)(B)(i)(I).

"(2)(A) If a feed grain acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1), such limitation shall be achieved by applying a uniform percentage reduction to the feed grain crop acreage base for the crop for each feed grain-producing farm.

"(B) Except as provided in subsection (g), producers who knowingly produce feed grains in excess of the permitted feed grain acreage for the farm shall be ineligible for feed grain loans, purchases, and payments with respect to that farm.

"(C) The Secretary may provide that no producer of malting barley shall be required as a condition of eligibility for feed grain loans, purchases, and payments to comply with any acreage limitation under this paragraph if such producer has previously produced a malting variety of barley for harvest, plants barley only of an acceptable malting variety for harvest, and meets such other conditions as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(D) Feed grain crop acreage bases for each crop of feed grains shall be determined under title V.

"(E)(i) A number of acres on the farm shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary. Such number shall be determined by dividing—

"(I) the product obtained by multiplying the number of acres required to be withdrawn from the production of feed grains times the number of acres planted to such commodity; by

"(II) the number of acres authorized to be planted to such commodity under the limitation established by the Secretary.

"(ii) The number of acres so determined is hereafter in this subsection referred to as 'reduced acreage'.

"(F) If an acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1) for a crop of feed grains, subsection (d) shall not be applicable to such crop, including any prior announcement that may have been made under such subsection with respect to such crop. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c)(1)(B), the individual farm program acreage shall be the acreage planted on the farm to feed grains for harvest within the permitted feed grain acreage for the farm as established under this paragraph.

"(3)(A) If a set-aside program is announced under paragraph (1), as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments for feed grains authorized by this Act (except as provided in subsection (g)), the producers on a farm must—

"(i) set aside and devote to conservation uses an acreage of cropland equal to a specified percentage, as determined by the Secretary, of the acreage of feed grains planted for harvest for the crop for which the set-aside is in effect; and

"(ii) otherwise comply with the terms of such program.

"(B) The set-aside acreage shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

"(C) If a set-aside program is established, the Secretary may limit the acreage planted to feed grains. Such limitation shall be applied on a uniform basis to all feed grain-producing farms.

"(D) The Secretary may make such adjustments in individual set-aside acreages under this section as the Secretary determines necessary—

"(i) to correct for abnormal factors affecting production; and

"(ii) to give due consideration to tillable acreage, crop-rotation practices, types of soil, soil and water conservation measures, topography, and such other factors as the Secretary determines necessary.

"(4)(A) The regulations issued by the Secretary under paragraphs (2) and (3) with respect to acreage required to be devoted to conservation uses shall assure protection of such acreage from weeds and wind and water erosion.

"(B) Subject to subparagraph (C), the Secretary may permit, subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage to be devoted to sweet sorghum, hay and grazing, or the production of guar, sesame, safflower, sunflower, castor beans, mustard seed, crambe, plantago ovato, flaxseed, triticale, rye, or other commodity, if the Secretary determines that such production is needed to provide an adequate supply of such commodities, is not likely to increase the cost of the price support program, and will not affect farm income adversely.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary shall permit, at the request of the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) for a State and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage diverted from production by participating producers in such State to be devoted to—

"(I) hay and grazing, in the case of the 1986 crop of feed grains; and

"(II) grazing, in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of feed grains.

"(ii) Haying and grazing shall not be permitted for any crop of feed grains under clause (i) during any 5-consecutive-month period that is established for such crop for a State by the State committee established under section 8(b) of such Act.

"(D) In determining the quantity of land to be devoted to conservation uses under an acreage limitation or set-aside program with respect to land that has been farmed under summer fallow practices, as defined by the Secretary, the Secretary shall consider the effects of soil erosion and such other factors as the Secretary considers appropriate.

"(5)(A) The Secretary may make land diversion payments to producers of feed grains, whether or not an acreage limitation or set-aside program for feed grains is in effect, if the Secretary determines that such land diversion payments are necessary to assist in adjusting the total national acreage of feed grains to desirable goals. Such land diversion payments shall be made to producers who, to the extent prescribed by the Secretary, devote to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland on the farm in accordance with land diversion contracts entered into by the Secretary with such producers.

"(B) The amounts payable to producers under land diversion contracts may be determined through the submission of bids for such contracts by producers in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe or such other means as the Secretary determines appropriate. In determining the acceptability of contract offers, the Secretary shall take into consideration the extent of the diversion to be undertaken by the producers and the productivity of the acreage diverted.

"(C) The Secretary shall limit the total acreage to be diverted under agreements in any county or local community so as not to affect adversely the economy of the county or local community.

"(6)(A) Any reduced acreage, set-aside acreage, and additional diverted acreage may be devoted to wildlife food plots or wildlife habitat in conformity with standards established by the Secretary in consultation with wildlife agencies.

"(B) The Secretary may pay an appropriate share of the cost of practices designed to carry out the purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) The Secretary may also pay an appropriate share of the cost of approved soil and water conservation practices (including practices that may be effective for a number of years) established by the producer on reduced acreage, set-aside acreage, or additional diverted acreage.

"(D) The Secretary may provide for an additional payment on such acreage in an amount determined by the Secretary to be appropriate in relation to the benefit to the general public if the producer agrees to permit, without other compensation, access to all or such portion of the farm, as the Secretary may prescribe, by the general public, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking, subject to applicable State and Federal regulations.

"(7)(A) An operator of a farm desiring to participate in the program conducted under this subsection shall execute an agreement with the Secretary providing for such participation not later than such date as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) The Secretary may, by mutual agreement with producers on a farm, terminate or modify any such agreement if the Secretary determines such action necessary because of an emergency created by drought or other disaster or to prevent or alleviate a shortage in the supply of agricultural commodities.

"(8) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subsection, in carrying out the program conducted under this subsection, the Secretary may prescribe production targets for participating farms expressed in bushels of production so that all participating farms achieve the same pro rata reduction in production as prescribed by the national production targets.

"(g)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of corn, grain sorghums, oats, and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, make payments available to producers who meet the requirements of this subsection.

"(2) Such payments shall be—

"(A) made in the form of such feed grains, respectively, owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation; and

"(B) subject to the availability of such feed grains.

"(3)(A) Payments under this subsection shall be determined in the same manner as provided in subsection (b).

"(B) The quantity of feed grains to be made available to a producer under this subsection shall be equal in value to the payments so determined under such subsection.

"(4) A producer shall be eligible to receive a payment under this subsection for a crop if the producer—

"(A) agrees to forgo obtaining a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a);

"(B) agrees to forgo receiving payments under subsection (c);

"(C) does not plant feed grains for harvest in excess of the crop acreage base reduced by one-half of any acreage required to be diverted from production under subsection (f); and

"(D) otherwise complies with this section.

"(h)(1) If the failure of a producer to comply fully with the terms and conditions of the program conducted under this section precludes the making of loans, purchases, and payments, the Secretary may, nevertheless, make such loans, purchases, and payments in such amounts as the Secretary determines are equitable in relation to the seriousness of the failure.

"(2) The Secretary may authorize the county and State committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) to waive or modify deadlines and other program requirements in cases in which lateness or failure to meet such other requirements does not affect adversely the operation of the program.

"(i) The Secretary may issue such regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out this section.

"(j) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(k) The provisions of section 8(g) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(g)) (relating to assignment of payments) shall apply to payments under this section.

"(l) The Secretary shall provide for the sharing of payments made under this section for any farm among the producers on the farm on a fair and equitable basis.

"(m) The Secretary shall provide adequate safeguards to protect the interests of tenants and sharecroppers.

"(n)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may not be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section.

"(2) If an acreage limitation program is established for a crop of feed grains under subsection (f)(2), producers who participate in the program may not plant acreage of another commodity for which there is an acreage limitation program in effect in excess of the crop acreage base for the crop for the farm.

"(3) If a set-aside program is established for a crop of feed grains under subsection (f)(3), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section.".

NONAPPLICABILITY OF SECTION 105 OF THE AGRICULTURAL ACT OF 1949 TO THE 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF FEED GRAINS

SEC. 402. Section 105 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1444b) shall not be applicable to the 1986 through 1990 crops of feed grains.

PRICE SUPPORT FOR CORN SILAGE

SEC. 403. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, effective only for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of feed grains, the Secretary of Agriculture may make available loans and purchases, as provided in this section, to producers on a farm who—

(1) for silage—

(A) cut corn (including mutilated corn) that the producers have produced in such crop year; or

(B) purchase or exchange corn (including mutilated corn) that has been produced in such crop year by another producer (including a producer that is not participating in an acreage limitation or set-aside program for such crop established by the Secretary); and

(2) participate in an acreage limitation or set-aside program for such crop of corn established by the Secretary.

(b) Such loans and purchases may be made on a quantity of corn of the same crop, other than the corn obtained for silage, acquired by the producer equivalent to a quantity determined by multiplying—

(1) the acreage of corn obtained for silage; by

(2) the lower of the farm program payment yield or the actual yield on a field, as determined by the Secretary, that is similar to the field from which such silage was obtained.

TITLE V—COTTON

LOAN RATES, TARGET PRICES, DISASTER PAYMENTS, ACREAGE LIMITATION PROGRAM, AND LAND DIVERSION FOR THE 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF UPLAND COTTON

SEC. 501. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by inserting after section 103 (7 U.S.C. 1444) the following new section:

"SEC. 103A. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall, on presentation of warehouse receipts reflecting accrued storage charges of not more than 60 days, make available for the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton to producers nonrecourse loans for a term of 10 months from the first day of the month in which the loan is made at such level, per pound, as will reflect for Strict Low Middling one and one-sixteenth inch upland cotton (micronaire 3.5 through 4.9) at average location in the United States at a level that is not less than—

"(A) in the case of the 1986 crop of upland cotton, 55 cents per pound; and

"(B) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, the smaller of—

"(i) 85 percent of the average price (weighted by market and month) of such quality of cotton as quoted in the designated United States spot markets during 3 years of the 5-year period ending July 31 in the year in which the loan level is announced, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period; or

"(ii) 90 percent of the average, for the 15-week period beginning July 1 of the year in which the loan level is announced, of the 5 lowest-priced growths of the growths quoted for Middling one and three-thirty-seconds inch cotton C.I.F. northern Europe (adjusted downward by the average difference during the period April 15 through October 15 of the year in which the loan is announced between such average northern European price quotation of such quality of cotton and the market quotations in the designated United States spot markets for Strict Low Middling one and one-sixteenth inch cotton (micronaire 3.5 through 4.9)).

"(2)(A) The loan level for any crop determined under paragraph (1)(B) may not be reduced by more than 5 percent from the loan level determined for the preceding crop nor below 50 cents per pound.

"(B) If for any crop the average northern European price determined under paragraph (1)(B)(ii) is less than the average United States spot market price determined under paragraph (1)(B)(i), the Secretary may increase the loan level to such level as the Secretary may deem appropriate, not in excess of the average United States spot market price determined under paragraph (1)(B)(i).

"(3) The loan level for any crop of upland cotton shall be determined and announced by the Secretary not later than November 1 of the calendar year preceding the marketing year for which such loan is to be effective, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, such determination and announcement shall be made as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985. Such level shall not thereafter be changed.

"(4)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), nonrecourse loans provided for in this section shall, on request of the producer during the 10th month of the loan period for the cotton, be made available for an additional term of 8 months.

"(B) A request to extend the loan period shall not be approved in any month in which the average price of Strict Low Middling one and one-sixteenth inch cotton (micronaire 3.5 through 4.9) in the designated spot markets for the preceding month exceeded 130 percent of the average price of such quality of cotton in such markets for the preceding 36-month period.

"(5)(A) If the Secretary determines that the prevailing world market price for upland cotton (adjusted to United States quality and location) is below the loan level determined under the foregoing provisions of this subsection, in order to make United States upland cotton competitive in world markets, the Secretary shall implement the provisions of Plan A or Plan B in accordance with this paragraph.

"(B) If the Secretary elects to implement Plan A, the Secretary shall permit a producer to repay a loan made for any crop at a level determined and announced by the Secretary at the same time the Secretary announces the loan level for such crop as determined under paragraph (3). Such repayment level for loans on such crops shall not be less than 80 percent of the loan level determined for the crop. Such repayment level, once announced for the crop, shall not thereafter be changed.

"(C)(i) If the Secretary elects to implement Plan B, except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary shall permit a producer to repay a loan made for any crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(I) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(II) the prevailing world market price for upland cotton (adjusted to United States quality and location), as determined by the Secretary.

"(ii) For each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of cotton, if the world market price for cotton (adjusted to United States quality and location) as determined by the Secretary, is less than 80 percent of the loan level determined for such crop, the Secretary may permit a producer to repay a loan made under this subsection for a crop at such level (not in excess of 80 percent of the loan level determined for such crop) as the Secretary determines will—

"(I) minimize potential loan forfeitures;

"(II) minimize the accumulation of cotton stocks by the Federal Government;

"(III) minimize the cost incurred by the Federal Government in storing cotton; and

"(IV) allow cotton produced in the United States to be marketed freely and competitively, both domestically and internationally.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, during the period beginning August 1, 1986, and ending July 31, 1991, if a program carried out under Plan A or Plan B fails to make United States upland cotton fully competitive in world markets and the prevailing world market price of upland cotton (adjusted to United States quality and location), as determined by the Secretary, is below the current loan repayment rate for upland cotton determined under subparagraph (A), to make United States upland cotton competitive in world markets and to maintain and expand domestic consumption and exports of upland cotton produced in the United States, the Secretary shall provide for the issuance of negotiable marketing certificates in accordance with this subparagraph.

"(ii) The Commodity Credit Corporation, under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, shall make payments, through the issuance of negotiable marketing certificates, to first handlers of cotton (persons regularly engaged in buying or selling upland cotton) who have entered into an agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to participate in the program established under this subparagraph. Such payments shall be made in such monetary amounts and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines will make upland cotton produced in the United States available at competitive prices, consistent with the purposes of this subparagraph, including such payments as may be necessary to make raw cotton in inventory on August 1, 1986, available on the same basis.

"(iii) The value of each certificate issued under clause (ii) shall be based on the difference between—

"(I) the loan repayment rate for upland cotton under Plan A or Plan B, as the case may be; and

"(II) the prevailing world market price of upland cotton, as determined by the Secretary under a published formula submitted for public comment before its adoption.

"(iv) The Commodity Credit Corporation, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may assist any person receiving marketing certificates under this subparagraph in the redemption of certificates for cash, or marketing or exchange of such certificates for (I) upland cotton owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation or (II) (if the Secretary and the person agree) other agricultural commodities or the products thereof owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation, at such times, in such manner, and at such price levels as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of the program established under this subparagraph. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any price restrictions that may otherwise apply to the disposition of agricultural commodities by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not apply to the redemption of certificates under this subparagraph.

"(v) Insofar as practicable, the Secretary shall permit owners of certificates to designate the commodities and the products thereof, including storage sites thereof, such owners would prefer to receive in exchange for certificates. If any certificate is not presented for redemption, marketing, or exchange within a reasonable number of days after the issuance of such certificate (as determined by the Secretary), reasonable costs of storage and other carrying charges, as determined by the Secretary, shall be deducted from the value of the certificate for the period beginning after such reasonable number of days and ending with the date of the presentation of such certificate to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(vi) The Secretary shall take such measures as may be necessary to prevent the marketing or exchange of agricultural commodities and products for certificates under this section from adversely affecting the income of producers of such commodities or products.

"(vii) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, certificates issued to cotton handlers under this subparagraph may be transferred to other handlers and persons approved by the Secretary.

"(E)(i) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(I) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for cotton; and

"(II) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall announce periodically the prevailing world market price for cotton.

"(ii) Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985, the Secretary shall—

"(I) publish in the Federal Register proposed regulations specifying such formula and mechanism; and

"(II) invite public comment on such proposal.

"(iii) The prevailing world market price established under this subparagraph shall be used for purposes of both Plan A and Plan B and marketing certificates under subparagraph (D).

"(b)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, make payments available to producers who, although eligible to obtain a loan under subsection (a), agree to forgo obtaining such loan in return for such payments.

"(2) A payment under this subsection shall be computed by multiplying—

"(A) the loan payment rate; by

"(B) the quantity of upland cotton the producer is eligible to place under loan.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the quantity of upland cotton eligible to be placed under loan may not exceed the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(B) the farm program payment yield established for the farm.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the loan payment rate shall be the amount by which—

"(A) the loan level determined for such crop under subsection (a); exceeds

"(B) the level at which a loan may be repaid under subsection (a).

"(5) The Secretary may make up to one-half the amount of a payment under this subsection available in the form of negotiable marketing certificates, subject to the terms and conditions provided in subsection (a)(5)(D).

"(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall make available to producers payments for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton in an amount computed by multiplying—

"(i) the payment rate; by

"(ii) the individual farm program acreage; by

"(iii) the farm program payment yield established for the crop for the farm.

"(B)(i) If an acreage limitation program under subsection (f)(2) is in effect for a crop of upland cotton and the producers on a farm devote a portion of the permitted upland cotton acreage of the farm (as determined in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(A)) equal to more than 8 percent of the permitted upland cotton acreage of the farm for the crop to conservation uses or nonprogram crops—

"(I) such portion of the permitted upland cotton acreage in excess of 8 percent of such acreage devoted to conservation uses or nonprogram crops shall be considered to be planted to upland cotton for the purpose of determining the individual farm program acreage in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(E) and for the purpose of determining the acreage on the farm required to be devoted to conservation uses in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(D); and

"(II) the producers shall be eligible for payments under this paragraph on such acreage, subject to the compliance of the producers with clause (ii).

"(ii) To be eligible for payments under clause (i), except as provided in clause (iii), the producers on the farm must actually plant upland cotton for harvest on at least 50 percent of the permitted upland cotton acreage of the farm.

"(iii) If a State or local agency has imposed in an area of a State or county a quarantine on the planting of upland cotton for harvest on farms in such area, the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) may recommend to the Secretary that payments be made under this paragraph, without regard to the requirement imposed under clause (ii), to producers in such area who were required to forgo the planting of upland cotton for harvest on acreage to alleviate or eliminate the condition requiring such quarantine. If the Secretary determines that such condition exists, the Secretary may make payments under this paragraph to such producers. To be eligible for payments under this clause, such producers may not plant wheat, feed grains, rice, cotton, or soybeans on such acreage.

"(iv) The upland cotton crop acreage base and upland cotton farm program payment yield of the farm shall not be reduced due to the fact that such portion of the permitted acreage of the farm was devoted to conserving uses or nonprogram crops.

"(v) Other than as provided in clauses (i) through (iv), payments may not be made under this subsection for any crop on a greater acreage than the acreage actually planted to upland cotton.

"(vi) Any acreage considered to be planted to upland cotton in accordance with clause (i) may not also be designated as conservation use acreage for the purpose of fulfilling any provisions under any acreage limitation or land diversion program requiring that the producers devote a specified acreage to conservation uses.

"(C) The payment rate for upland cotton shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of upland cotton exceeds the higher of—

"(i) the national average market price received by producers during the calendar year that includes the first 5 months of the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(ii) the loan level determined for such crop.

"(D) The established price for upland cotton shall not be less than $0.81 per pound for the 1986 crop, $0.794 per pound for the 1987 crop, $0.77 per pound for the 1988 crop, $0.745 per pound for the 1989 crop, and $0.729 per pound for the 1990 crop.

"(E) The total quantity of upland cotton on which payments would otherwise be payable to a producer on a farm for any crop under this subsection shall be reduced by the quantity on which any disaster payment is made to the producer for the crop under paragraph (2).

"(F) The Secretary may pay not more than 5 percent of the total amount of a payment made under this paragraph in the form of upland cotton. The use of upland cotton in making payments to producers shall be subject to a determination by the Secretary of the effect that such in-kind payments will have on market prices for any commodity. The Secretary shall report such determination to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

"(G) As used in this subsection, the term 'nonprogram crop' means any agricultural commodity other than wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, rice, or soybeans.

"(2)(A)(i) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that the producers on a farm are prevented from planting any portion of the acreage intended for upland cotton to upland cotton or other nonconserving crops because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the Secretary shall make a prevented planting disaster payment to the producers in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(I) the number of acres so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted to upland cotton for harvest (including any acreage that the producers were prevented from planting to upland cotton or other nonconserving crops in lieu of upland cotton because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers) in the immediately preceding year; by

"(II) 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established for the farm by the Secretary; by

"(III) a payment rate equal to 33⅓ percent of the established price for the crop.

"(ii) Payments made by the Secretary under this subparagraph may be made in the form of cash or from stocks of upland cotton held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the total quantity of upland cotton that the producers are able to harvest on any farm is less than the result of multiplying 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established for the farm for such crop by the acreage planted for harvest for such crop, the Secretary shall make a reduced yield disaster payment to the producers at a rate equal to 33⅓ percent of the established price for the crop for the deficiency in production below 75 percent for the crop.

"(C) Producers on a farm shall not be eligible for—

"(i) prevented planting disaster payments under subparagraph (A), if prevented planting crop insurance is available to the producers under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) with respect to the upland cotton acreage of the producers; or

"(ii) reduced yield disaster payments under subparagraph (B), if reduced yield crop insurance is available to the producers under such Act with respect to the upland cotton acreage of the producers.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding subparagraph (C), the Secretary may make a disaster payment to producers on a farm under this subsection if the Secretary determines that—

"(I) as the result of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the producers have suffered substantial losses of production either from being prevented from planting upland cotton or other nonconserving crops or from reduced yields;

"(II) such losses have created an economic emergency for the producers;

"(III) crop insurance indemnity payments under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) and other forms of assistance made available by the Federal Government to such producers for such losses is insufficient to alleviate such economic emergency; and

"(IV) additional assistance must be made available to such producers to alleviate such economic emergency.

"(ii) The Secretary may make such adjustments in the amount of payments made available under this paragraph with respect to an individual farm so as to assure the equitable allotment of such payments among producers, taking into account other forms of Federal disaster assistance provided to the producers for the crop involved.

"(d)(1)(A) Except for a crop with respect to which there is an acreage limitation program in effect under subsection (f), the Secretary shall proclaim a national program acreage for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton. The proclamation shall be made not later than November 1 of the calendar year preceding the year for which such acreage is established, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, such announcement shall be made as soon as practicable after the enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(B) The Secretary may revise the national program acreage first proclaimed for any crop year for the purpose of determining the allocation factor under paragraph (2) if the Secretary determines it necessary based on the latest information. The Secretary shall proclaim such revised national program acreage as soon as it is made.

"(C) The national program acreage for upland cotton shall be the number of harvested acres the Secretary determines (on the basis of the weighted national average of the farm program payment yields for the crop for which the determination is made) will produce the quantity (less imports) that the Secretary estimates will be utilized domestically and for export during the marketing year for such crop.

"(D) The national program acreage shall be subject to such adjustment as the Secretary determines necessary, taking into consideration the estimated carryover supply, so as to provide for an adequate but not excessive total supply of upland cotton for the marketing year for the crop for which such national program acreage is established. In no event shall the national program acreage be less than 10 million acres.

"(2) The Secretary shall determine a program allocation factor for each crop of upland cotton. The allocation factor (not to exceed 100 percent) shall be determined by dividing the national program acreage for the crop by the number of acres that the Secretary estimates will be harvested for such crop.

"(3)(A) The individual farm program acreage for each crop of upland cotton shall be determined by multiplying the allocation factor by the acreage of upland cotton planted for harvest on the farms for which individual farm program acreages are required to be determined.

"(B) The individual farm program acreage may not be further reduced by application of the allocation factor if the producers reduce the acreage of upland cotton planted for harvest on the farm from the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V by at least the percentage recommended by the Secretary in the proclamation of the national program acreage.

"(C) The Secretary shall provide fair and equitable treatment for producers on farms on which the acreage of upland cotton planted for harvest is less than the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V, but for which the reduction is insufficient to exempt the farm from the application of the allocation factor.

"(D) In establishing the allocation factor for upland cotton, the Secretary may make such adjustment as the Secretary deems necessary to take into account the extent of exemption of farms under the forgoing provisions of this subsection.

"(e) The farm program payment yields for farms for each crop of upland cotton shall be determined under title V.

"(f)(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, if the Secretary determines that the total supply of upland cotton, in the absence of an acreage limitation program, will be excessive taking into account the need for an adequate carryover to maintain reasonable and stable supplies and prices and to meet a national emergency, the Secretary may provide for any crop of upland cotton an acreage limitation program as described in paragraph (2).

"(B) In making a determination under clause (i), the Secretary shall take into consideration the number of acres placed in the conservation acreage reserve established under section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(C) If the Secretary elects to put an acreage limitation program into effect for any crop year, the Secretary shall announce any such program not later than November 1 of the calendar year preceding the year in which the crop is harvested, except that in the case of the 1986 crop, such announcement shall be made as soon as practicable after the enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(D) The Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practicable, carry out an acreage limitation program described in paragraph (2) for a crop of upland cotton in a manner that will result in a carryover of 4 million bales of upland cotton.

"(2)(A) If a upland cotton acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1), such limitation shall be achieved by applying a uniform percentage reduction (not to exceed 25 percent) to the upland cotton crop acreage base for the crop for each upland cotton-producing farm.

"(B) Except as provided in subsection (g), producers who knowingly produce upland cotton in excess of the permitted upland cotton acreage for the farm, as established in accordance with subparagraph (A), shall be ineligible for upland cotton loans and payments with respect to that farm.

"(C) Upland cotton crop acreage bases for each crop of upland cotton shall be determined under title V.

"(D)(i) A number of acres on the farm shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary. Such number shall be determined by dividing—

"(I) the product obtained by multiplying the number of acres required to be withdrawn from the production of upland cotton times the number of acres planted to such commodity; by

"(II) the number of acres authorized to be planted to such commodity under the limitation established by the Secretary.

"(ii) The number of acres determined under clause (i) is hereafter in this subsection referred to as 'reduced acreage'.

"(E) If an acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1) for a crop of upland cotton, subsection (d) shall not be applicable to such crop, including any prior announcement that may have been made under such subsection with respect to such crop. Except as provided in subsection (c)(1)(B), the individual farm program acreage shall be the acreage planted on the farm to upland cotton for harvest within the permitted upland cotton acreage for the farm as established under this paragraph.

"(3)(A) The regulations issued by the Secretary under paragraph (2) with respect to acreage required to be devoted to conservation uses shall assure protection of such acreage from weeds and wind and water erosion.

"(B) Subject to subparagraph (C), the Secretary may permit, subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage to be devoted to sweet sorghum, hay and grazing, or the production of guar, sesame, safflower, sunflower, castor beans, mustard seed, crambe, plantago ovato, flaxseed, triticale, rye, or other commodity, if the Secretary determines that such production is needed to provide an adequate supply of such commodities, is not likely to increase the cost of the price support program, and will not affect farm income adversely.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary shall permit, at the request of the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) for a State and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage diverted from production by participating producers in such State to be devoted to—

"(I) hay and grazing, in the case of the 1986 crop of upland cotton; and

"(II) grazing, in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of upland cotton.

"(ii) Haying and grazing shall not be permitted for any crop of upland cotton under clause (i) during any 5-consecutive-month period that is established for such crop for a State by the State committee established under section 8(b) of such Act.

"(4)(A) The Secretary may make land diversion payments to producers of upland cotton, whether or not an acreage limitation program for upland cotton is in effect, if the Secretary determines that such land diversion payments are necessary to assist in adjusting the total national acreage of upland cotton to desirable goals. Such land diversion payments shall be made to producers who, to the extent prescribed by the Secretary, devote to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland on the farm in accordance with land diversion contracts entered into by the Secretary with such producers.

"(B) The amounts payable to producers under land diversion contracts may be determined through the submission of bids for such contracts by producers in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe or through such other means as the Secretary determines appropriate. In determining the acceptability of contract offers, the Secretary shall take into consideration the extent of the diversion to be undertaken by the producers and the productivity of the acreage diverted.

"(C) The Secretary shall limit the total acreage to be diverted under agreements in any county or local community so as not to affect adversely the economy of the county or local community.

"(5)(A) The reduced acreage and additional diverted acreage may be devoted to wildlife food plots or wildlife habitat in conformity with standards established by the Secretary in consultation with wildlife agencies.

"(B) The Secretary may pay an appropriate share of the cost of practices designed to carry out the purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) The Secretary may provide for an additional payment on such acreage in an amount determined by the Secretary to be appropriate in relation to the benefit to the general public if the producer agrees to permit, without other compensation, access to all or such portion of the farm, as the Secretary may prescribe, by the general public, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking, subject to applicable State and Federal regulations.

"(7)(A) An operator of a farm desiring to participate in the program conducted under this subsection shall execute an agreement with the Secretary providing for such participation not later than such date as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) The Secretary may, by mutual agreement with producers on a farm, terminate or modify any such agreement if the Secretary determines such action necessary because of an emergency created by drought or other disaster or to prevent or alleviate a shortage in the supply of agricultural commodities.

"(g)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, make payments available to producers who meet the requirements of this subsection.

"(2) Such payments shall be—

"(A) made in the form of upland cotton owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation; and

"(B) subject to the availability of such upland cotton.

"(3)(A) Payments under this subsection shall be determined in the same manner as provided in subsection (b).

"(B) The quantity of upland cotton to be made available to a producer under this subsection shall be equal in value to the payments so determined under such subsection.

"(4) A producer shall be eligible to receive a payment under this subsection for a crop if the producer—

"(A) agrees to forgo obtaining a loan under subsection (a);

"(B) agrees to forgo receiving payments under subsection (c);

"(C) does not plant upland cotton for harvest in excess of the crop acreage base reduced by one-half of any acreage required to be diverted from production under subsection (f); and

"(D) otherwise complies with this section.

"(h)(1) If the failure of a producer to comply fully with the terms and conditions of the program formulated under this section precludes the making of loans and payments, the Secretary may, nevertheless, make such loans and payments in such amounts as the Secretary determines are equitable in relation to the seriousness of the failure.

"(2) The Secretary may authorize the county and State committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) to waive or modify deadlines and other program requirements in cases in which lateness or failure to meet such other requirements does not affect adversely the operation of the program.

"(i) The Secretary may issue such regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out this section.

"(j) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(k) The provisions of section 8(g) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(g)) (relating to assignment of payments) shall apply to payments under this section.

"(l) The Secretary shall provide for the sharing of payments made under this section for any farm among the producers on the farm on a fair and equitable basis.

"(m) The Secretary shall provide adequate safeguards to protect the interests of tenants and sharecroppers.

"(n)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, except as provided in paragraph (2), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may not be required as a condition of eligibility for loans or payments under this section.

"(2) The Secretary may require that, as a condition of eligibility of producers on a farm for loans or payments under this section, the acreage planted for harvest on the farm to any other commodity for which an acreage limitation program is in effect shall not exceed the crop acreage base for that commodity.

"(3) The Secretary may not require producers on a farm, as a condition of eligibility for loans or payments under this section for such farm, to comply with the terms and conditions of the upland cotton program with respect to any other farm operated by such producers.

"(o)(1) Whenever the Secretary determines that the average price of Strict Low Middling one and one-sixteenth inch cotton (micronaire 3.5 through 4.9) in the designated spot markets for a month exceeded 130 percent of the average price of such quality of cotton in such markets for the preceding 36 months, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President shall immediately establish and proclaim a special limited global import quota for upland cotton subject to the following conditions:

"(A) The quantity of the special quota shall be equal to 21 days of domestic mill consumption of upland cotton at the seasonally adjusted average rate of the most recent 3 months for which data are available.

"(B) If a special quota has been established under this subsection during the preceding 12 months, the quantity of the quota next established hereunder shall be the smaller of 21 days of domestic mill consumption calculated as set forth in subpara-graph (A) or the quantity required to increase the supply to 130 percent of the demand.

"(C) As used in subparagraph (B):

"(i) The term 'supply' means, using the latest official data of the Bureau of the Census, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of the Treasury—

"(I) the carryover of upland cotton at the beginning of the marketing year (adjusted to 480-pound bales) in which the special quota is established; plus

"(II) production of the current crop; plus

"(III) imports to the latest date available during the marketing year.

"(ii) The term 'demand' means—

"(I) the average seasonally adjusted annual rate of domestic mill consumption in the most recent 3 months for which data are available; plus

"(II) the larger of—

"(aa) average exports of upland cotton during the preceding 6 marketing years; or

"(bb) cumulative exports of upland cotton plus outstanding export sales for the marketing year in which the special quota is established.

"(D) When a special quota is established under this subsection, cotton may be entered under such quota during the 90-day period beginning on the effective date of the proclamation.

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), a special quota period may not be established that overlaps an existing quota period.".

TITLE VI—RICE

LOAN RATES, TARGET PRICES, DISASTER PAYMENTS, ACREAGE LIMITATION PROGRAM, AND LAND DIVERSION FOR THE 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF RICE

SEC. 601. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice, the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by inserting after section 101 (7 U.S.C. 1441) the following new section:

"SEC. 101A. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall make available to producers loans and purchases for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice at a level that is not less than—

"(A) in the case of the 1986 crop of rice, $7.20 per hundredweight; and

"(B) in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of rice, the higher of—

"(i) 85 percent of the simple average price received by producers, as determined by the Secretary, during the marketing years for the immediately preceding 5 crops of rice, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period; or

"(ii) $6.50 per hundredweight.

"(2) The loan level for a crop of rice determined under paragraph (1)(B) may not be reduced by more than 5 percent from the loan level determined for the preceding crop.

"(3) The loan and purchase level and the established price for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice shall be announced not later than January 31 of each calendar year for the crop harvested in such calendar year.

"(4) A loan made under this section shall have a term of not more than 9 months beginning after the month in which the application for the loan is made.

"(5)(A) The Secretary shall permit a producer to repay a loan made under paragraph (1) for a crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(i) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(ii) the higher of—

"(I) the loan level determined for such crop multiplied by 50 percent for each of the 1986 and 1987 crops, 60 percent for the 1988 crop, and 70 percent for each of the 1989 and 1990 crops; or

"(II) the prevailing world market price for rice, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(i) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for rice; and

"(ii) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall announce periodically the prevailing world market price for rice.

"(C)(i) As a condition of permitting a producer to repay a loan as provided in subparagraph (A), the Secretary may require a producer to purchase marketing certificates equal in value to an amount that does not exceed one-half the difference, as determined by the Secretary, between the amount of the loan obtained by the producer and the amount of the loan repayment. Such certificates shall be negotiable.

"(ii) Such certificates shall be redeemable for rice owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation valued at the prevailing market price, as determined by the Secretary. If such rice is not available in the State in which the rice pledged as collateral for the loan was produced or at such other location outside of such State as may be approved by the owner of such certificate, such certificate shall be redeemable in cash.

"(iii) The Commodity Credit Corporation, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall assist any person receiving marketing certificates under this subparagraph in the redemption or marketing of such certificates. Insofar as practicable, the Secretary shall permit an owner of a certificate to designate the storage facility at which such owner would prefer to receive rice in exchange for such certificate.

"(iv) If any such certificate is not presented for redemption or marketing within a reasonable number of days after issuance, as determined by the Secretary, reasonable costs of storage and other carrying charges, as determined by the Secretary, shall be deducted from the value of the certificate for the period beginning after such reasonable number of days and ending with the date of the presentation of such certificate to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(6) For purposes of this section, the simple average price received by producers for the immediately preceding marketing year shall be based on the latest information available to the Secretary at the time of the determination.

"(b)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice, make payments available to producers who, although eligible to obtain a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a), agree to forgo obtaining such loan or agreement in return for such payments.

"(2) A payment under this subsection shall be computed by multiplying—

"(A) the loan payment rate; by

"(B) the quantity of rice the producer is eligible to place under loan.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the quantity of rice eligible to be placed under loan may not exceed the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the individual farm program acreage for the crop; by

"(B) the farm program payment yield established for the farm.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the loan payment rate shall be the amount by which—

"(A) the loan level determined for such crop under subsection (a); exceeds

"(B) the level at which a loan may be repaid under subsection (a).

"(5) The Secretary shall make up to one-half the amount of a payment under this subsection available in the form of negotiable marketing certificates, subject to the terms and conditions provided in subsection (a)(5)(C).

"(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall make available to producers payments for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice in an amount computed by multiplying—

"(i) the payment rate; by

"(ii) the individual farm program acreage; by

"(iii) the farm program payment yield established for the crop for the farm.

"(B)(i) If an acreage limitation program under subsection (f)(2) is in effect for a crop of rice and the producers on a farm devote a portion of the permitted rice acreage of the farm (as determined in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(A)) equal to more than 8 percent of the permitted rice acreage of the farm for the crop to conservation uses or nonprogram crops—

"(I) such portion of the permitted rice acreage in excess of 8 percent of such acreage devoted to conservation uses or nonprogram crops shall be considered to be planted to rice for the purpose of determining the individual farm program acreage in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(E) and for the purpose of determining the acreage on the farm required to be devoted to conservation uses in accordance with subsection (f)(2)(D); and

"(II) the producers shall be eligible for payments under this paragraph on such acreage, subject to the compliance of the producers with clause (ii).

"(ii) To be eligible for payments under clause (i), except as provided in clause (iii), the producers on the farm must actually plant rice for harvest on at least 50 percent of the permitted rice acreage of the farm.

"(iii) If a State or local agency has imposed in an area of a State or county a quarantine on the planting of rice for harvest on farms in such area, the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) may recommend to the Secretary that payments be made under this paragraph, without regard to the requirement imposed under clause (ii), to producers in such area who were required to forgo the planting of rice for harvest on acreage to alleviate or eliminate the condition requiring such quarantine. If the Secretary determines that such condition exists, the Secretary may make payments under this paragraph to such producers. To be eligible for payments under this clause, such producers may not plant wheat, feed grains, cotton, or soybeans on such acreage.

"(iv) The rice crop acreage base and rice farm program payment yield of the farm shall not be reduced due to the fact that such portion of the permitted acreage of the farm was devoted to conserving uses or nonprogram crops.

"(v) Other than as provided in clauses (i) through (iv), payments may not be made under this subsection for any crop on a greater acreage than the acreage actually planted to rice.

"(vi) Any acreage considered to be planted to rice in accordance with clause (i) may not also be designated as conservation use acreage for the purpose of fulfilling any provisions under any acreage limitation or land diversion program requiring that the producers devote a specified acreage to conservation uses.

"(C) The payment rate for rice shall be the amount by which the established price for the crop of rice exceeds the higher of—

"(i) the national average market price received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year for such crop, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(ii) the loan level determined for such crop.

"(D) The established price for rice shall not be less than $11.90 per hundredweight for the 1986 crop, $11.66 per hundredweight for the 1987 crop, $11.30 per hundredweight for the 1988 crop, $10.95 per hundredweight for the 1989 crop, and $10.71 per hundredweight for the 1990 crop.

"(E) The total quantity of rice on which payments would otherwise be payable to a producer on a farm for any crop under this subsection shall be reduced by the quantity on which any disaster payment is made to the producer for the crop under paragraph (2).

"(F) The Secretary may pay not more than 5 percent of the total amount of a payment made under this paragraph in the form of rice. The use of rice in making payments to producers shall be subject to a determination by the Secretary of the effect that such in-kind payments will have on market prices for any commodity. The Secretary shall report such determination to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

"(G) As used in this subsection, the term 'nonprogram crop' means any agricultural commodity other than wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, rice, or soybeans.

"(2)(A)(i) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that the producers on a farm are prevented from planting any portion of the acreage intended for rice to rice or other nonconserving crops because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the Secretary shall make a prevented planting disaster payment to the producers in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(I) the number of acres so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted to rice for harvest (including any acreage that the producers were prevented from planting to rice or other nonconserving crops in lieu of rice because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers) in the immediately preceding year; by

"(II) 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established for the farm by the Secretary; by

"(III) a payment rate equal to 33⅓ percent of the established price for the crop.

"(ii) Payments made by the Secretary under this subparagraph may be made in the form of cash or from stocks of rice held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), if the Secretary determines that because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the total quantity of rice that the producers are able to harvest on any farm is less than the result of multiplying 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established for the farm for such crop by the acreage planted for harvest for such crop, the Secretary shall make a reduced yield disaster payment to the producers at a rate equal to 33⅓ percent of the established price for the crop for the deficiency in production below 75 percent for the crop.

"(C) Producers on a farm shall not be eligible for—

"(i) prevented planting disaster payments under subparagraph (A), if prevented planting crop insurance is available to the producers under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) with respect to the rice acreage of the producers; or

"(ii) reduced yield disaster payments under subparagraph (B), if reduced yield crop insurance is available to the producers under such Act with respect to the rice acreage of the producers.

"(D)(i) Notwithstanding subparagraph (C), the Secretary may make a disaster payment to producers on a farm under this subsection if the Secretary determines that—

"(I) as the result of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the producers have suffered substantial losses of production either from being prevented from planting rice or other nonconserving crops or from reduced yields;

"(II) such losses have created an economic emergency for the producers;

"(III) crop insurance indemnity payments under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) and other forms of assistance made available by the Federal Government to such producers for such losses is insufficient to alleviate such economic emergency; and

"(IV) additional assistance must be made available to such producers to alleviate such economic emergency.

"(ii) The Secretary may make such adjustments in the amount of payments made available under this paragraph with respect to an individual farm so as to assure the equitable allotment of such payments among producers, taking into account other forms of Federal disaster assistance provided to the producers for the crop involved.

"(d)(1)(A) Except for a crop with respect to which there is an acreage limitation program in effect under subsection (f), the Secretary shall proclaim a national program acreage for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice. The proclamation shall be made not later than January 31 of each calendar year for the crop harvested in that calendar year.

"(B) The Secretary may revise the national program acreage first proclaimed for any crop year for the purpose of determining the allocation factor under paragraph (2) if the Secretary determines it necessary based on the latest information. The Secretary shall proclaim such revised national program acreage as soon as it is made.

"(C) The national program acreage for rice shall be the number of harvested acres the Secretary determines (on the basis of the weighted national average of the farm program payment yields for the crop for which the determination is made) will produce the quantity (less imports) that the Secretary estimates will be utilized domestically and for export during the marketing year for such crop.

"(D) If the Secretary determines that carryover stocks of rice are excessive or an increase in stocks is needed to assure desirable carryover, the Secretary may adjust the national program acreage by the quantity the Secretary determines will accomplish the desired increase or decrease in carryover stocks.

"(2) The Secretary shall determine a program allocation factor for each crop of rice. The allocation factor for rice shall be determined by dividing the national program acreage for the crop by the number of acres that the Secretary estimates will be harvested for such crop. In no event may the allocation factor for any crop of rice be more than 100 percent nor less than 80 percent.

"(3)(A) The individual farm program acreage for each crop of rice shall be determined by multiplying the allocation factor by the acreage of rice planted for harvest on the farms for which individual farm program acreages are required to be determined.

"(B) The individual farm program acreage may not be further reduced by application of the allocation factor if the producers reduce the acreage of rice planted for harvest on the farm from the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V by at least the percentage recommended by the Secretary in the proclamation of the national program acreage.

"(C) The Secretary shall provide fair and equitable treatment for producers on farms on which the acreage of rice planted for harvest is less than the crop acreage base established for the farm under title V, but for which the reduction is insufficient to exempt the farm from the application of the allocation factor.

"(D) In establishing the allocation factor for rice, the Secretary may make such adjustment as the Secretary deems necessary to take into account the extent of exemption of farms under the foregoing provisions of this subsection.

"(e) The farm program payment yields for farms for each crop of rice shall be determined under title V.

"(f)(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, if the Secretary determines that the total supply of rice, in the absence of an acreage limitation program, will be excessive taking into account the need for an adequate carryover to maintain reasonable and stable supplies and prices and to meet a national emergency, the Secretary may provide for any crop of rice an acreage limitation program as described in paragraph (2).

"(B) In making a determination under clause (i), the Secretary shall take into consideration the number of acres placed in the conservation acreage reserve established under section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(C) If the Secretary elects to put an acreage limitation program into effect for any crop year, the Secretary shall announce any such program not later than January 31 of the calendar year in which the crop is harvested.

"(D) The Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practicable, carry out an acreage limitation program described in paragraph (2) for a crop of rice in a manner that will result in a carryover of 30 million hundredweight of rice.

"(2)(A) If a rice acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1), such limitation shall be achieved by applying a uniform percentage reduction (not to exceed 35 percent) to the rice crop acreage base for the crop for each rice-producing farm.

"(B) Except as provided in subsection (g), producers who knowingly produce rice in excess of the permitted rice acreage for the farm, as established in accordance with subparagraph (A), shall be ineligible for rice loans, purchases, and payments with respect to that farm.

"(C) Rice crop acreage bases for each crop of rice shall be determined under title V.

"(D)(i) A number of acres on the farm shall be devoted to conservation uses, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary. Such number shall be determined by dividing—

"(I) the product obtained by multiplying the number of acres required to be withdrawn from the production of rice times the number of acres planted to such commodity; by

"(II) the number of acres authorized to be planted to such commodity under the limitation established by the Secretary.

"(ii) The number of acres determined under clause (i) is hereafter in this subsection referred to as 'reduced acreage'.

"(E) If an acreage limitation program is announced under paragraph (1) for a crop of rice, subsection (d) shall not be applicable to such crop, including any prior announcement that may have been made under such subsection with respect to such crop. Except as provided in subsection (c)(1)(B), the individual farm program acreage shall be the acreage planted on the farm to rice for harvest within the permitted rice acreage for the farm as established under this paragraph.

"(3)(A) The regulations issued by the Secretary under paragraph (2) with respect to acreage required to be devoted to conservation uses shall assure protection of such acreage from weeds and wind and water erosion.

"(B) Subject to subparagraph (C), the Secretary may permit, subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage to be devoted to sweet sorghum, hay and grazing, or the production of guar, sesame, safflower, sunflower, castor beans, mustard seed, crambe, plantago ovato, flaxseed, triticale, rye, or other commodity, if the Secretary determines that such production is needed to provide an adequate supply of such commodities, is not likely to increase the cost of the price support program, and will not affect farm income adversely.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary shall permit, at the request of the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) for a State and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, all or any part of such acreage diverted from production by participating producers in such State to be devoted to—

"(I) hay and grazing, in the case of the 1986 crop of rice; and

"(II) grazing, in the case of each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of rice.

"(ii) Haying and grazing shall not be permitted for any crop of rice under clause (i) during any 5-consecutive-month period that is established for such crop for a State by the State committee established under section 8(b) of such Act.

"(4)(A) The Secretary may make land diversion payments to producers of rice, whether or not an acreage limitation program for rice is in effect, if the Secretary determines that such land diversion payments are necessary to assist in adjusting the total national acreage of rice to desirable goals. Such land diversion payments shall be made to producers who, to the extent prescribed by the Secretary, devote to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland on the farm in accordance with land diversion contracts entered into by the Secretary with such producers.

"(B) The amounts payable to producers under land diversion contracts may be determined through the submission of bids for such contracts by producers in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe or through such other means as the Secretary determines appropriate. In determining the acceptability of contract offers, the Secretary shall take into consideration the extent of the diversion to be undertaken by the producers and the productivity of the acreage diverted.

"(C) The Secretary shall limit the total acreage to be diverted under agreements in any county or local community so as not to affect adversely the economy of the county or local community.

"(5)(A) The reduced acreage and additional diverted acreage may be devoted to wildlife food plots or wildlife habitat in conformity with standards established by the Secretary in consultation with wildlife agencies.

"(B) The Secretary may pay an appropriate share of the cost of practices designed to carry out the purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) The Secretary may provide for an additional payment on such acreage in an amount determined by the Secretary to be appropriate in relation to the benefit to the general public if the producer agrees to permit, without other compensation, access to all or such portion of the farm, as the Secretary may prescribe, by the general public, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking, subject to applicable State and Federal regulations.

"(7)(A) An operator of a farm desiring to participate in the program conducted under this subsection shall execute an agreement with the Secretary providing for such participation not later than such date as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) The Secretary may, by mutual agreement with producers on a farm, terminate or modify any such agreement if the Secretary determines such action necessary because of an emergency created by drought or other disaster or to prevent or alleviate a shortage in the supply of agricultural commodities.

"(g)(1) The Secretary may, for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice, make payments available to producers who meet the requirements of this subsection.

"(2) Such payments shall be—

"(A) made in the form of rice owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation; and

"(B) subject to the availability of such rice.

"(3)(A) Payments under this subsection shall be determined in the same manner as provided in subsection (b).

"(B) The quantity of rice to be made available to a producer under this subsection shall be equal in value to the payments so determined under such subsection.

"(4) A producer shall be eligible to receive a payment under this subsection for a crop if the producer—

"(A) agrees to forgo obtaining a loan or purchase agreement under subsection (a);

"(B) agrees to forgo receiving payments under subsection (c);

"(C) does not plant rice for harvest in excess of the crop acreage base reduced by one-half of any acreage required to be diverted from production under subsection (f); and

"(D) otherwise complies with this section.

"(h)(1) If the failure of a producer to comply fully with the terms and conditions of the program formulated under this section precludes the making of loans, purchases, and payments, the Secretary may, nevertheless, make such loans, purchases, and payments in such amounts as the Secretary determines are equitable in relation to the seriousness of the failure.

"(2) The Secretary may authorize the county and State committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) to waive or modify deadlines and other program requirements in cases in which lateness or failure to meet such other requirements does not affect adversely the operation of the program.

"(i) The Secretary may issue such regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out this section.

"(j) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(k) The provisions of section 8(g) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(g)) (relating to assignment of payments) shall apply to payments under this section.

"(l) The Secretary shall provide for the sharing of payments made under this section for any farm among the producers on the farm on a fair and equitable basis.

"(m) The Secretary shall provide adequate safeguards to protect the interests of tenants and sharecroppers.

"(n)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, except as provided in paragraph (2), compliance on a farm with the terms and conditions of any other commodity program may not be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section.

"(2) The Secretary may require that, as a condition of eligibility of producers on a farm for loans, purchases, or payments under this section, the acreage planted for harvest on the farm to any other commodity for which an acreage limitation program is in effect shall not exceed the crop acreage base established for the farm for that commodity.

"(3) The Secretary may not require producers on a farm, as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments under this section for such farm, to comply with the terms and conditions of the rice program with respect to any other farm operated by such producers.".

MARKETING LOAN FOR THE 1985 CROP OF RICE

SEC. 602. Effective for the 1985 crop of rice, section 101(i)(1) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1441(i)(1)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after the paragraph designation; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(B)(i) Beginning April 15, 1986, the Secretary shall permit an eligible producer to repay a loan made under subparagraph (A) with respect to the 1985 crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(I) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(II) the prevailing world market price for rice, as determined by the Secretary.

"(ii) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(I) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for rice; and

"(II) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall announce periodically the prevailing world market price for rice.

"(iii) To be eligible to repay a loan in accordance with clause (i), a producer must have a loan made under subparagraph (A) outstanding on April 15, 1986.

"(iv) A loan made under this subsection shall have a term of not more than 9 months beginning after the month in which the application for the loan is made. The Secretary may extend the maturity date of loans made for the 1985 crop of rice as necessary to permit the orderly marketing of such rice.

"(v) As a condition to permitting a producer to repay a loan as provided in this subparagraph, the Secretary may require a producer to purchase negotiable marketing certificates equal in value to an amount that does not exceed the difference, as determined by the Secretary, between the amount of the loan obtained by the producer and the amount of the loan repayment. Such certificates shall be negotiable.

"(vi) Such certificates shall be redeemable for rice owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation valued at the prevailing market price, as determined by the Secretary. If such rice is not available in the State in which the rice pledged as collateral for the loan was produced or at such other location outside of such State as may be approved by the owner of such certificate, such certificate shall be redeemable in cash.

"(vii) The Commodity Credit Corporation, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall assist any person receiving marketing certificates under this subparagraph in the redemption or marketing of such certificates. Insofar as practicable, the Secretary shall permit an owner of a certificate to designate the storage facility at which such owner would prefer to receive rice in exchange for such certificate.

"(viii) If any such certificate is not presented for redemption or marketing within a reasonable number of days after issuance, as determined by the Secretary, reasonable costs of storage and other carrying charges, as determined by the Secretary, shall be deducted from the value of the certificate for the period beginning after such reasonable number of days and ending with the date of the presentation of such certificate to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"(C)(i) Beginning April 15, 1986, the Secretary shall, for the 1985 crop of rice, make payments available to—

"(I) producers who have produced rice, and although eligible to obtain a loan or purchase agreement under this subsection did not obtain such loan or agreement, and have not sold or delivered such rice under a sales contract; and

"(II) producers who have produced rice that is not eligible to be placed under loan and have not sold or delivered such rice under a sales contract.

"(ii) A payment under this subparagraph shall be computed by multiplying—

"(I) the loan payment rate; by

"(II) the quantity of rice the producer has not sold or delivered under a sales contract.

"(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the loan payment rate shall be the amount by which—

"(I) the loan level determined for the 1985 crop; exceeds

"(II) the level at which a loan may be repaid under subparagraph (B).

"(iv) The Secretary may make all or part of a payment under this subparagraph in the form of negotiable marketing certificates, subject to the terms and conditions provided in subparagraph (B).

"(D) The payment limitation provided in section 1101 of the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 (7 U.S.C. 1308) shall not apply to—

"(i) any gain realized by a producer from repaying a loan for the 1985 crop of rice at the rate permitted under subparagraph (B); or

"(ii) any payment received for a crop of rice under subparagraph (C).".

MARKETING CERTIFICATES

SEC. 603. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever, during the period beginning August 1, 1986, and ending July 31, 1991, the world price for a class of rice (adjusted to United States qualities and location), as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, is below the current loan repayment rate for that class of rice, to make United States rice competitive in world markets and to maintain and expand exports of rice produced in the United States, the Commodity Credit Corporation, under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, shall make payments, through the issuance of negotiable marketing certificates, to persons who have entered into an agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to participate in the program established under this section. Such payments shall be made in such monetary amounts and subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines will make rice produced in the United States available at competitive prices consistent with the purposes of this section, including such payments as may be necessary to make rice in inventory on August 1, 1986, available on the same basis.

(b) The value of each certificate issued under subsection (a) shall be based on the difference between—

(1) the loan repayment rate for the class of rice; and

(2) the prevailing world market price for the class of rice, as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture under a published formula submitted for public comment before its adoption.

(c) The Commodity Credit Corporation, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, may assist any person receiving marketing certificates under this section in the redemption of certificates for cash, or marketing or exchange of such certificates for (1) rice owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation or (2) (if the Secretary and the person agree) other agricultural commodities or the products thereof owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation, at such times, in such manner, and at such price levels as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of the program established under this section. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any price restrictions that may otherwise apply to the disposition of agricultural commodities by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not apply to the redemption of certificates under this section.

(d) Insofar as practicable, the Secretary shall permit owners of certificates to designate the commodities and the products thereof, including storage sites thereof, such owners would prefer to receive in exchange for certificates. If any certificate is not presented for redemption, marketing, or exchange within a reasonable number of days after the issuance of such certificate (as determined by the Secretary), reasonable costs of storage and other carrying charges, as determined by the Secretary, shall be deducted from the value of the certificate for the period beginning after such reasonable number of days and ending with the date of the presentation of such certificate to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(e) The Secretary of Agriculture shall take such measures as may be necessary to prevent the marketing or exchange of agricultural commodities and the products thereof for certificates under this section from adversely affecting the income of producers of such commodities or products.

(f) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, certificates issued to rice exporters under this section may be transferred to other exporters and persons approved by the Secretary.

TITLE VII—PEANUTS

SUSPENSION OF MARKETING QUOTAS AND ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

SEC. 701. The following provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 shall not be applicable to the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts:

(1) Subsections (a) through (j) of section 358 (7 U.S.C. 1358(a)-(j)).

(2) Subsections (a) through (h) of section 358a (7 U.S.C. 1358a(a)-(h)).

(3) Subsections (a), (b), (d), and (e) of section 359 (7 U.S.C. 1359(a), (b), (d), (e)).

(4) Part I of subtitle C of title III (7 U.S.C. 1361 et seq.).

(5) Section 371 (7 U.S.C. 1371).

NATIONAL POUNDAGE QUOTA AND FARM POUNDAGE QUOTA

SEC. 702. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts, section 358 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1358) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(q)(1) The national poundage quota for peanuts for each of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years shall be established by the Secretary at a level that is equal to the quantity of peanuts (in tons) that the Secretary estimates will be devoted in each such marketing year to domestic edible, seed, and related uses, except that the national poundage quota for any such marketing year shall not be less than 1,100,000 tons.

"(2) The national poundage quota for a marketing year shall be announced by the Secretary not later than December 15 preceding such marketing year.

"(r) The national poundage quota established under subsection (q) shall be apportioned among the States so that the poundage quota allocated to each State shall be equal to the percentage of the national poundage quota allocated to farms in the State for 1985.

"(s)(1)(A) A farm poundage quota for each of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years shall be established—

"(i) for each farm that had a farm poundage quota for peanuts for the 1985 marketing year; and

"(ii) if the poundage quota apportioned to a State under subsection (r) for any such marketing year is larger than such quota for the immediately preceding marketing year, for each other farm on which peanuts were produced for marketing in at least 2 of the 3 immediately preceding crop years, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) The farm poundage quota for each of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years for each farm described in subparagraph (A)(i) of the preceding sentence shall be the same as the farm poundage quota for such farm for the immediately preceding marketing year, as adjusted under paragraph (2), but not including—

"(i) any increases for undermarketings from previous years; or

"(ii) any increases resulting from the allocation of quotas voluntarily released for 1 year under paragraph (7).

The farm poundage quota, if any, for each of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years for each farm described in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be equal to the quantity of peanuts allocated to such farm for such year under paragraph (2).

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, if the farm poundage quota, or any part thereof, is permanently transferred in accordance with section 358a, the receiving farm shall be considered as possessing the farm poundage quotas (or portion thereof) of the transferring farm for all subsequent marketing years.

"(2)(A) If the poundage quota apportioned to a State under subsection (r) for any of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years is increased over the poundage quota apportioned to the State for the immediately preceding marketing year, such increase shall be allocated equally among—

"(i) all farms in the State for each of which a farm poundage quota was established for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the allocation is being made; and

"(ii) all other farms in the State on each of which peanuts were produced in at least 2 of the 3 immediately preceding crop years, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) If the poundage quota apportioned to a State under subsection (r) for any of the 1987 through 1990 marketing years is decreased from the poundage quota apportioned to the State under such subsection for the immediately preceding marketing year, such decrease shall be allocated among all the farms in the State for each of which a farm poundage quota was established for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the allocation is being made.

"(3)(A) Insofar as practicable and on such fair and equitable basis as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe, the farm poundage quota established for a farm for any of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years shall be reduced to the extent that the Secretary determines that the farm poundage quota established for the farm for any 2 of the 3 marketing years preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made was not produced, or considered produced, on the farm.

"(B) For the purposes of this paragraph, the farm poundage quota for any such preceding marketing year shall not include—

"(i) any increases for undermarketing of quota peanuts from previous years; or

"(ii) any increase resulting from the allocation of quotas voluntarily released for one year under paragraph (7).

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the farm poundage quota shall be considered produced on a farm if—

"(A) the farm poundage quota was not produced on the farm because of drought, flood, or any other natural disaster, or any other condition beyond the control of the producer, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(B) the farm poundage quota for the farm was released voluntarily under paragraph (7) for only 1 of the 3 marketing years immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made.

"(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(A) the farm poundage quota established for a farm under this subsection, or any part of such quota, may be permanently released by the owner of the farm, or the operator with the permission of the owner; and

"(B) the poundage quota for the farm for which such quota is released shall be adjusted downward to reflect the quota that is so released.

"(6)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the total amount of the farm poundage quotas reduced or voluntarily released from farms in a State for any marketing year under paragraphs (3) and (5) shall be allocated, as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe, to other farms in the State on which peanuts were produced in at least 2 of the 3 crop years immediately preceding the year for which such allocation is being made.

"(B) Not less than 25 percent of such total amount of farm poundage quota in the State shall be allocated to farms for which no farm poundage quota was established for the immediately preceding year's crop.

"(7)(A) The farm poundage quota, or any portion thereof, established for a farm for a marketing year may be voluntarily released to the Secretary to the extent that such quota, or any part thereof, will not be produced on the farm for the marketing year. Any farm poundage quota so released in a State shall be allocated to other farms in the State on such basis as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

"(B) Any adjustment in the farm poundage quota for a farm under subparagraph (A) shall be effective only for the marketing year for which it is made and shall not be taken into consideration in establishing a farm poundage quota for the farm from which such quota was released for any subsequent marketing year.

"(8)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the farm poundage quota for a farm for any marketing year shall be increased by the number of pounds by which the total marketings of quota peanuts from the farm during previous marketing years (excluding any marketing year before the marketing year for the 1984 crop) were less than the total amount of applicable farm poundage quotas (disregarding adjustments for undermarketings from previous marketing years) for such marketing years.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), no increase for undermarketings in previous marketing years shall be made to the poundage quota for any farm to the extent that the poundage quota for such farm for the marketing year was reduced under paragraph (3) for failure to produce.

"(C) Any increases in farm poundage quotas under this paragraph shall not be counted against the national poundage quota for the marketing year involved.

"(D) Any increase in the farm poundage quota for a farm for a marketing year under this paragraph may be used during the marketing year by the transfer of additional peanuts produced on the farm to the quota loan pool for pricing purposes on such basis as the Secretary shall by regulation prescribe.

"(9) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subsection, if the total of all increases in individual farm poundage quotas under paragraph (8) exceeds 10 percent of the national poundage quota for the marketing year in which such increases shall be applicable, the Secretary shall adjust such increases so that the total of all such increases does not exceed 10 percent of the national poundage quota.

"(t)(1) For each farm for which a farm poundage quota is established under subsection (s), and when necessary for purposes of this Act, a farm yield of peanuts shall be determined for each such farm.

"(2) Such yield shall be equal to the average of the actual yield per acre on the farm for each of the 3 crop years in which yields were highest on the farm out of the 5 crop years 1973 through 1977.

"(3) If peanuts were not produced on the farm in at least 3 years during such 5-year period or there was a substantial change in the operation of the farm during such period (including, but not limited to, a change in operator, lessee who is an operator, or irrigation practices), the Secretary shall have a yield appraised for the farm. The appraised yield shall be that amount determined to be fair and reasonable on the basis of yields established for similar farms that are located in the area of the farm and on which peanuts were produced, taking into consideration land, labor, and equipment available for the production of peanuts, crop rotation practices, soil and water, and other relevant factors.

"(u)(1) Not later than December 15 of each calendar year, the Secretary shall conduct a referendum of producers engaged in the production of quota peanuts in the calendar year in which the referendum is held to determine whether such producers are in favor of or opposed to poundage quotas with respect to the crops of peanuts produced in the five calendar years immediately following the year in which the referendum is held, except that, if as many as two-thirds of the producers voting in any referendum vote in favor of poundage quotas, no referendum shall be held with respect to quotas for the second, third, fourth, and fifth years of the period.

"(2) The Secretary shall proclaim the result of the referendum within 30 days after the date on which it is held.

"(3) If more than one-third of the producers voting in the referendum vote against quotas, the Secretary also shall proclaim that poundage quotas will not be in effect with respect to the crop of peanuts produced in the calendar year immediately following the calendar year in which the referendum is held.

"(v) For the purposes of this part and title I of the Agricultural Act of 1949:

"(1) The term 'additional peanuts' means, for any marketing year—

"(A) any peanuts that are marketed from a farm for which a farm poundage quota has been established and that are in excess of the marketings of quota peanuts from such farm for such year; and

"(B) all peanuts marketed from a farm for which no farm poundage quota has been established in accordance with subsection (s).

"(2) The term 'crushing' means the processing of peanuts to extract oil for food uses and meal for feed uses, or the processing of peanuts by crushing or otherwise when authorized by the Secretary.

"(3) The term 'domestic edible use' means use for milling to produce domestic food peanuts (other than those described in paragraph (2)) and seed and use on a farm, except that the Secretary may exempt from this definition seeds of peanuts that are used to produce peanuts excluded under section 359(c), are unique strains, and are not commercially available.

"(4) The term 'quota peanuts' means, for any marketing year, any peanuts produced on a farm having a farm poundage quota, as determined in subsection (s), that—

"(A) are eligible for domestic edible use as determined by the Secretary;

"(B) are marketed or considered marketed from a farm; and

"(C) do not exceed the farm poundage quota of such farm for such year.".

SALE, LEASE, OR TRANSFER OF FARM POUNDAGE QUOTA

SEC. 703. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts, section 358a of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1358a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(k)(1) Subject to such terms, conditions, or limitations as the Secretary may prescribe, the owner, or the operator with permission of the owner, of any farm for which a farm poundage quota has been established under this Act may sell or lease all or any part of such poundage quota to any other owner or operator of a farm within the same county for transfer to such farm, except that any such lease of poundage quota may be entered into in the fall or after the normal planting season but only—

"(A) if the quota has been planted on the farm from which the quota is to be leased; and

"(B) under such terms and conditions as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

"(2) The owner or operator of a farm may transfer all or any part of the farm poundage quota for such farm to any other farm owned or controlled by such owner or operator that is in the same county or in a county contiguous to such county in the same State and that had a farm poundage quota for the preceding year's crop.

"(3) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), in the case of any State for which the poundage quota allocated to the State was less than 10,000 tons for the preceding year's crop, all or any part of a farm poundage quota may be transferred by sale or lease or otherwise from a farm in one county to a farm in another county in the same State.

"(l) Transfers (including transfer by sale or lease) of farm poundage quotas under this section shall be subject to all of the following conditions:

"(1) No transfer of the farm poundage quota from a farm subject to a mortgage or other lien shall be permitted unless the transfer is agreed to by the lienholders.

"(2) No transfer of the farm poundage quota shall be permitted if the county committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act determines that the receiving farm does not have adequate tillable cropland to produce the farm poundage quota.

"(3) No transfer of the farm poundage quota shall be effective until a record thereof is filed with the county committee of the county to which such transfer is made and such committee determines that the transfer complies with this section.

"(4) Such other terms and conditions that the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.".

MARKETING PENALTIES; DISPOSITION OF ADDITIONAL PEANUTS

SEC. 704. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts, section 359 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1359) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(m)(1)(A) The marketing of any peanuts for domestic edible use in excess of the farm poundage quota for the farm on which such peanuts are produced shall be subject to penalty at a rate equal to 140 percent of the support price for quota peanuts for the marketing year in which such marketing occurs.

"(B) For purposes of this section, the marketing year for peanuts shall be the 12-month period beginning August 1 and ending July 31.

"(C) The marketing of any additional peanuts from a farm shall be subject to the same penalty unless such peanuts, in accordance with regulations established by the Secretary, are—

"(i) placed under loan at the additional loan rate in effect for such peanuts under section 108B of the Agricultural Act of 1949 and not redeemed by the producers;

"(ii) marketed through an area marketing association designated pursuant to section 108B(3)(A) of the Agricultural Act of 1949; or

"(iii) marketed under contracts between handlers and producers pursuant to subsection (q).

"(2) Such penalty shall be paid by the person who buys or otherwise acquires the peanuts from the producer or, if the peanuts are marketed by the producer through an agent, the penalty shall be paid by such agent. Such person or agent may deduct an amount equivalent to the penalty from the price paid to the producer.

"(3) If the person required to collect the penalty fails to collect such penalty, such person and all persons entitled to share in the peanuts marketed from the farm or the proceeds thereof shall be jointly and severally liable for the amount of the penalty.

"(4) Peanuts produced in a calendar year in which farm poundage quotas are in effect for the marketing year beginning therein shall be subject to such quotas even though the peanuts are marketed prior to the date on which such marketing year begins.

"(5) If any producer falsely identifies or fails to certify planted acres or fails to account for the disposition of any peanuts produced on such planted acres, an amount of peanuts equal to the farm's average yield, as determined under section 358(t), times the planted acres, shall be deemed to have been marketed in violation of permissible uses of quota and additional peanuts. Any penalty payable under this paragraph shall be paid and remitted by the producer.

"(6) The Secretary shall authorize, under such regulations as the Secretary shall issue, the county committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act to waive or reduce marketing penalties provided for under this subsection in cases in which such committees determine that the violations that were the basis of the penalties were unintentional or without knowledge on the part of the parties concerned.

"(7) Errors in weight that do not exceed one-tenth of 1 percent in the case of any one marketing document shall not be considered to be marketing violations except in cases of fraud or conspiracy.

"(n)(1) Only quota peanuts may be retained for use as seed or for other uses on a farm. When so retained, quota peanuts shall be considered as marketings of quota peanuts, except that the Secretary may exempt from consideration as marketings of quota peanuts seeds of peanuts that are used to produce peanuts excluded under subsection (c), are unique strains, and are not commercially available.

"(2) Additional peanuts shall not be retained for use on a farm and shall not be marketed for domestic edible use, except as provided in subsection (r).

"(3) Seed for planting of any peanut acreage in the United States shall be obtained solely from quota peanuts marketed or considered marketed for domestic edible use.

"(o) On a finding by the Secretary that the peanuts marketed from any crop for domestic edible use by a handler are larger in quantity or higher in grade or quality than the peanuts that could reasonably be produced from the quantity of peanuts having the grade, kernel content, and quality of the quota peanuts acquired by such handler from such crop for such marketing, such handler shall be subject to a penalty equal to 140 percent of the loan level for quota peanuts on the quantity of peanuts that the Secretary determines are in excess of the quantity, grade, or quality of the peanuts that could reasonably have been produced from the peanuts so acquired.

"(p)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall require that the handling and disposal of additional peanuts be supervised by agents of the Secretary or by area marketing associations designated pursuant to section 108B(3)(A) of the Agricultural Act of 1949.

"(2)(A) Supervision of the handling and disposal of additional peanuts by a handler shall not be required under paragraph (1) if the handler agrees in writing, prior to any handling or disposal of such peanuts, to comply with regulations that the Secretary shall issue.

"(B) The regulations issued by the Secretary under subparagraph (A) shall include, but need not be limited to, the following provisions:

"(i) Handlers of shelled or milled peanuts may export peanuts classified by type in all of the following quantities (less such reasonable allowance for shrinkage as the Secretary may prescribe):

"(I) Sound split kernel peanuts in an amount equal to twice the poundage of such peanuts purchased by the handler as additional peanuts.

"(II) Sound mature kernel peanuts in an amount equal to the poundage of such peanuts purchased by the handler as additional peanuts less the amount of sound split kernel peanuts purchased by the handler as additional peanuts.

"(III) The remaining quantity of total kernel content of peanuts purchased by the handler as additional peanuts and not crushed domestically.

"(ii) Handlers shall ensure that any additional peanuts exported are evidenced by onboard bills of lading, other appropriate documentation as may be required by the Secretary, or both.

"(iii) If a handler suffers a loss of peanuts as a result of fire, flood, or any other condition beyond the control of the handler, the portion of such loss allocated to contracted additional peanuts shall not be greater than the portion of the handler's total peanut purchases for the year attributable to contracted additional peanuts purchased for export by the handler during such year.

"(3) A handler shall submit to the Secretary adequate financial guarantees, as well as evidence of adequate facilities and assets, to ensure the handler's compliance with the obligation to export peanuts.

"(4) Quota and additional peanuts of like type and segregation or quality may, under regulations issued by the Secretary, be commingled and exchanged on a dollar value basis to facilitate warehousing, handling, and marketing.

"(5)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the failure by a handler to comply with regulations issued by the Secretary governing the disposition and handling of additional peanuts shall subject the handler to a penalty at a rate equal to 140 percent of the loan level for quota peanuts on the quantity of peanuts involved in the violation.

"(B) A handler shall not be subject to a penalty for failure to export additional peanuts if such peanuts were not delivered to the handler.

"(6) If any additional peanuts exported by a handler are reentered into the United States in commercial quantities as determined by the Secretary, the importer thereof shall be subject to a penalty at a rate equal to 140 percent of the loan level for quota peanuts on the quantity of peanuts reentered.

"(q)(1) Handlers may, under such regulations as the Secretary may issue, contract with producers for the purchase of additional peanuts for crushing, export, or both.

"(2) Any such contract shall be completed and submitted to the Secretary (or if designated by the Secretary, the area marketing association) for approval before August 1 of the year in which the crop is produced.

"(3) Each such contract shall contain the final price to be paid by the handler for the peanuts involved and a specific prohibition against the disposition of such peanuts for domestic edible or seed use.

"(r)(1) Subject to section 407 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, any peanuts owned or controlled by the Commodity Credit Corporation may be made available for domestic edible use, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary, so long as doing so does not result in substantially increased cost to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Additional peanuts received under loan shall be offered for sale for domestic edible use at prices not less than those required to cover all costs incurred with respect to such peanuts for such items as inspection, warehousing, shrinkage, and other expenses, plus—

"(A) not less than 100 percent of the loan value of quota peanuts if the additional peanuts are sold and paid for during the harvest season on delivery by and with the written consent of the producer;

"(B) not less than 105 percent of the loan value of quota peanuts if the additional peanuts are sold after delivery by the producer but not later than December 31 of the marketing year; or

"(C) not less than 107 percent of the loan value of quota peanuts if the additional peanuts are sold later than December 31 of the marketing year.

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for the period from the date additional peanuts are delivered for loan to March 1 of the calendar year following the year in which such additional peanuts were harvested, the area marketing association designated pursuant to section 108B(3)(A) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 shall have sole authority to accept or reject lot list bids when the sales price, as determined under this subsection, equals or exceeds the minimum price at which the Commodity Credit Corporation may sell its stocks of additional peanuts.

"(B) The area marketing association and the Commodity Credit Corporation may agree to modify the authority granted by subparagraph (A) to facilitate the orderly marketing of additional peanuts.

"(s)(1) The person liable for payment or collection of any penalty provided for in this section shall be liable also for interest thereon at a rate per annum equal to the rate per annum of interest that was charged the Commodity Credit Corporation by the Treasury of the United States on the date such penalty became due.

"(2) This section shall not apply to peanuts produced on any farm on which the acreage harvested for nuts is one acre or less if the producers who share in the peanuts produced on such farm do not share in the peanuts produced on any other farm.

"(3) Until the amount of the penalty provided by this section is paid, a lien on the crop of peanuts with respect to which such penalty is incurred, and on any subsequent crop of peanuts subject to farm poundage quotas in which the person liable for payment of the penalty has an interest, shall be in effect in favor of the United States.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the liability for and the amount of any penalty assessed under this section shall be determined in accordance with such procedures as the Secretary by regulation may prescribe. The facts constituting the basis for determining the liability for or amount of any penalty assessed under this section, when officially determined in conformity with the applicable regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall be final and conclusive and shall not be reviewable by any other officer or agency of the Government.

"(B) Nothing in this section shall be construed as prohibiting any court of competent jurisdiction from reviewing any determination made by the Secretary with respect to whether such determination was made in conformity with the applicable law and regulations.

"(C) All penalties imposed under this section shall for all purposes be considered civil penalties.

"(5)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Secretary may reduce the amount of any penalty assessed against handlers under this section if the Secretary finds that the violation on which the penalty is based was minor or inadvertent, and that the reduction of the penalty will not impair the operation of the peanut program.

"(B) The amount of any penalty imposed on a handler under this section that resulted from the failure to export contracted additional peanuts may not be reduced by the Secretary.".

PRICE SUPPORT PROGRAM

SEC. 705. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts, the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by adding after section 108A the following:

"PRICE SUPPORT FOR 1986 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF PEANUTS

"SEC. 108B. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(1)(A) The Secretary shall make price support available to producers through loans, purchases, and other operations on quota peanuts for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops.

"(B)(i) The national average quota support rate for the 1986 crop of quota peanuts shall be equal to the national average support rate established for the 1985 crop of quota peanuts, adjusted by the Secretary by a percentage equal to the percentage of any increase in the prices paid by producers for commodities and services, interest, taxes, and wage rates during the period beginning with calendar year 1981 and ending with calendar year 1985, as determined by the Secretary.

"(ii) The national average quota support rate for each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of quota peanuts shall be the national average quota support rate for the immediately preceding crop, adjusted to reflect any increase, during the calendar year immediately preceding the marketing year for the crop for which a level of support is being determined, in the national average cost of peanut production, excluding any change in the cost of land, except that in no event shall the national average quota support rate for any such crop exceed by more than 6 percent the national average quota support rate for the preceding crop.

"(C) The levels of support so announced shall not be reduced by any deductions for inspection, handling, or storage.

"(D) The Secretary may make adjustments for location of peanuts and such other factors as are authorized by section 403.

"(E) The Secretary shall announce the level of support for quota peanuts of each crop not later than February 15 preceding the marketing year for the crop for which the level of support is being determined.

"(2)(A) The Secretary shall make price support available to producers through loans, purchases, or other operations on additional peanuts for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops at such levels as the Secretary finds appropriate, taking into consideration the demand for peanut oil and peanut meal, expected prices of other vegetable oils and protein meals, and the demand for peanuts in foreign markets, except that the Secretary shall set the support rate on additional peanuts at a level estimated by the Secretary to ensure that there are no losses to the Commodity Credit Corporation on the sale or disposal of such peanuts.

"(B) The Secretary shall announce the level of support for additional peanuts of each crop not later than February 15 preceding the marketing year for the crop for which the level of support is being determined.

"(3)(A)(i) In carrying out paragraphs (1) and (2), the Secretary shall make warehouse storage loans available in each of the three producing areas (described in section 1446.60 of title 7 of the Code of Federal Regulations (January 1, 1985)) to a designated area marketing association of peanut producers that is selected and approved by the Secretary and that is operated primarily for the purpose of conducting such loan activities. The Secretary may not make warehouse storage loans available to any cooperative that is engaged in operations or activities concerning peanuts other than those operations and activities specified in this section and section 359 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

"(ii) Such area marketing associations shall be used in administrative and supervisory activities relating to price support and marketing activities under this section and section 359 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

"(iii) Loans made under this subparagraph shall include, in addition to the price support value of the peanuts, such costs as the area marketing association reasonably may incur in carrying out its responsibilities, operations, and activities under this section and section 359 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

"(B)(i) The Secretary shall require that each area marketing association establish pools and maintain complete and accurate records by area and segregation for quota peanuts handled under loan and for additional peanuts placed under loan, except that separate pools shall be established for Valencia peanuts produced in New Mexico. Bright hull and dark hull Valencia peanuts shall be considered as separate types for the purpose of establishing such pools.

"(ii) Net gains on peanuts in each pool, unless otherwise approved by the Secretary, shall be distributed only to producers who placed peanuts in the pool and shall be distributed in proportion to the value of the peanuts placed in the pool by each producer. Net gains for peanuts in each pool shall consist of the following:

"(I) For quota peanuts, the net gains over and above the loan indebtedness and other costs or losses incurred on peanuts placed in such pool plus an amount from the pool for additional peanuts, to the extent of the net gains from the sale for domestic food and related uses of additional peanuts in the pool for additional peanuts equal to any loss on disposition of all peanuts in the pool for quota peanuts.

"(II) For additional peanuts, the net gains over and above the loan indebtedness and other costs or losses incurred on peanuts placed in the pool for additional peanuts less any amount allocated to offset any loss on the pool for quota peanuts as provided in subclause (I).

"(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section:

"(A) Any distribution of net gains on additional peanuts shall be first reduced to the extent of any loss by the Commodity Credit Corporation on quota peanuts placed under loan.

"(B)(i) The proceeds due any producer from any pool shall be reduced by the amount of any loss that is incurred with respect to peanuts transferred from an additional loan pool to a quota loan pool under section 358(s)(8) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

"(ii) Losses in area quota pools, other than losses incurred as a result of transfers from additional loan pools to quota loan pools under section 358(s)(8) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, shall be offset by any gains or profits from pools in other production areas (other than separate type pools established under paragraph (3)(B)(i) for Valencia peanuts produced in New Mexico) in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulation prescribe.

"(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no price support may be made available by the Secretary for any crop of peanuts with respect to which poundage quotas have been disapproved by producers, as provided for in section 358(u) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.".

REPORTS AND RECORDS

SEC. 706. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts, the first sentence of section 373(a) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1373(a)) is amended by inserting before "all brokers and dealers in peanuts" the following: "all producers engaged in the production of peanuts,".

SUSPENSION OF CERTAIN PRICE SUPPORT PROVISIONS

SEC. 707. Section 101 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1441) shall not be applicable to the 1986 through 1990 crops of peanuts.

TITLE VIII—SOYBEANS

SOYBEAN PRICE SUPPORT

SEC. 801. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of soybeans, section 201 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446) is amended by—

(1) inserting "soybeans," after "tung nuts," in the first sentence; and

(2) adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(i)(1)(A) The Secretary shall support the price of soybeans through loans and purchases in each of the 1986 through 1990 marketing years as provided in this subsection.

"(B) The support price for the 1986 and 1987 crops of soybeans shall be $5.02 per bushel.

"(C) The support price for each of the 1988 through 1990 crops of soybeans shall be established at a level equal to 75 percent of the simple average price received by producers for soybeans in the preceding 5 marketing years, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period, except that the level of price support may not be reduced by more than 5 percent in any year and in no event below $4.50 per bushel.

"(2) If the Secretary determines that the level of loans or purchases computed for a marketing year under paragraph (1) would discourage the exportation of soybeans and cause excessive stocks of soybeans in the United States, the Secretary may reduce the level of loans and purchases for soybeans for the marketing year by the amount the Secretary determines necessary to maintain domestic and export markets for soybeans, except that the level of loans and purchases may not be reduced by more than 5 percent in any year and in no event below $4.50 per bushel. Any reduction in the loan and purchase level for soybeans under this paragraph shall not be considered in determining the loan and purchase level for soybeans for subsequent years.

"(3)(A) If the Secretary determines that such action will assist in maintaining the competitive relationship of soybeans in domestic and export markets after taking into consideration the cost of producing soybeans, supply and demand conditions, and world prices for soybeans, the Secretary may permit a producer to repay a loan made under this subsection for a crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(i) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(ii) the prevailing world market price for soybeans, as determined by the Secretary.

"(B) If the Secretary makes the determination described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation—

"(i) a formula to define the prevailing world market price for soybeans; and

"(ii) a mechanism by which the Secretary shall periodically announce the prevailing world market price for soybeans.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the soybean marketing year is the 12-month period beginning on September 1 and ending on August 31.

"(5)(A) The Secretary shall make a preliminary announcement of the level of price support for soybeans for a marketing year not earlier than 30 days before the beginning of the marketing year. The announced level shall be based on the latest information and statistics available at the time of the announcement.

"(B) The Secretary shall make a final announcement of such level as soon as complete information and statistics are available on prices for the 5 years preceding the beginning of the marketing year. Such final level of support may not be announced later than October 1 of the marketing year with respect to which the announcement is made. The final level of support may not be less than the level of support provided for in the preliminary announcement.

"(6) Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(A) the Secretary shall not require participation in any production adjustment program for soybeans or any other commodity as a condition of eligibility for price support for soybeans;

"(B) the Secretary shall not permit the planting of soybeans for harvest on reduced acreage or acreage set aside or diverted from production under any other Federal Government program;

"(C) the Secretary may not authorize payments to producers to cover the cost of storing soybeans; and

"(D) soybeans may not be considered an eligible commodity for any reserve program.".

TITLE IX—SUGAR

SUGAR PRICE SUPPORT

SEC. 901. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of sugar beets and sugarcane, section 201 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446) (as amended by section 801 of this Act) is further amended by—

(1) striking out "honey, and milk" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "honey, milk, sugar beets, and sugarcane"; and

(2) adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) The price of each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of sugar beets and sugarcane, respectively, shall be supported in accordance with this subsection.

"(2) The Secretary shall support the price of domestically grown sugarcane through nonrecourse loans at such level as the Secretary determines appropriate but not less than 18 cents per pound for raw cane sugar, except that such level may be increased under paragraph (4).

"(3) The Secretary shall support the price of domestically grown sugar beets through nonrecourse loans at such level as the Secretary determines is fair and reasonable in relation to the loan level for sugarcane.

"(4)(A) The Secretary may increase the support price for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of domestically grown sugarcane and sugar beets from the price determined for the preceding crop based on such factors as the Secretary determines appropriate, including changes (during the 2 crop years immediately preceding the crop year for which the determination is made) in the cost of sugar products, the cost of domestic sugar production, and other circumstances that may adversely affect domestic sugar production.

"(B) If the Secretary makes a determination not to increase the support price under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall submit a report containing the findings, decision, and supporting data for such determination to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

"(5) The Secretary shall announce the loan rate to be applicable during any fiscal year under this subsection as far in advance of the beginning of that fiscal year as is practicable consistent with the purposes of this subsection.

"(6) Loans under this subsection during any fiscal year shall be made available not earlier than the beginning of such fiscal year and shall mature before the end of such fiscal year.".

PREVENTION OF SUGAR LOAN FORFEITURES

SEC. 902. (a) Beginning with the quota year for sugar imports which begins after the 1985/1986 quota year, the President shall use all authorities available to the President as is necessary to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to operate the sugar program established under section 201 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446) at no cost to the Federal Government by preventing the accumulation of sugar acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(b) Effective only for the 1985/1986 quota year for sugar imports, the President shall—

(1) modify the 1985/1986 quota year for imports for sugar so that such quota year will end no earlier than December 31, 1986, and rearrange the shipping schedules so that shipments are divided equally throughout the quota year, as extended; or

(2) require that the sugar program be administered in such a manner as will result in the forfeiture of sugar held by the Commodity Credit Corporation as collateral for price support loans in a quantity no greater than the total quantity (determined by the Secretary of Agriculture) that would have been forfeited to the Commodity Credit Corporation had the 1985/1986 quota year been modified as prescribed in clause (1).

(c) Beginning with the quota year for sugar imports which begins after the 1985/1986 quota year, the President shall not allocate any of the sugar import quota under such provisions to any country that is a net importer of sugar derived from sugarcane or sugar beets unless the appropriate officials of that country verify to the President that that country does not import for reexport to the United States any sugar produced in Cuba.

WHEAT AND FEED GRAIN EXPORT CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS

SEC. 1006. Effective for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains, the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 107F (as added by section 1005 of this Act), the following new section:

"SEC. 107F. (a)(1) The Secretary may establish a program, applicable to any of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat or feed grains, to provide incentives for the export of any of such crops of wheat and feed grains from private stocks. The program for any such crop established under this subsection by the Secretary shall include the following terms:

"(A) The Secretary shall issue wheat or feed grain export certificates to producers to whom the Secretary makes loans and payments under section 107D or 105C, respectively, for a crop if such producers comply with the terms and conditions of the program for such crop.

"(B) Each such certificate shall bear a monetary denomination and a designation specifying a quantity of the crop of the commodity involved, selected by the Secretary.

"(C) The aggregate quantity of wheat or feed grains specified in all export certificates distributable to eligible producers of the crop involved shall be equal to—

"(i) the aggregate amount of wheat or feed grains produced by producers participating in the program for the crop under section 107D or 105C, as determined by multiplying the acreage planted by each such producer for harvest times the farm program payment yield for the commodity, times

"(ii) an export production factor.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the export production factor for a crop shall be determined by the Secretary by dividing the quantity of such crop harvested domestically that the Secretary estimates will not be used domestically and will be available for export (excluding the portion of the crop expected to be added to carryover stocks) during the marketing year for such crop by the quantity of such crop that the Secretary estimates will be harvested domestically.

"(D) Wheat or feed grain export certificates shall be distributed among eligible producers in a manner that will ensure that each eligible producer receives certificates having an aggregate face value that represents an equal rate of return per unit of wheat or feed grains produced by such producer for such crop. For purposes of determining such rate of return, the Secretary shall take into consideration regional variations in the costs incurred by producers to market the commodity (including transportation costs).

"(E) An export certificate issued under this subsection shall be redeemed by the Secretary for a cash amount equal to the monetary denomination on such certificate (or, at the option of the Secretary, a quantity of the commodity involved having a current fair market value equal to such amount) only on presentation by a holder who exports a quantity of the crop involved (including processed wheat or feed grains) equal to the quantity designated in the certificate and only if the Secretary has not redeemed previously an export certificate issued under this subsection presented in connection with the particular wheat or feed grains so exported.

"(2) The Secretary shall carry out this subsection through the Commodity Credit Corporation. If sufficient fund are available to the Corporation, there shall be expended to carry out this subsection with respect to the export of the crop of wheat or feed grains involved an amount not less than the product of multiplying—

"(A) 21 cents for wheat, 11 cents for corn, and such amounts for grain sorghums, oats, and, if designated by the Secretary, barley as the Secretary determines fair and reasonable in relation to the amount specified for corn, times

"(B) the aggregate of the wheat or feed grain acreage planted to the commodity for harvest by producers participating in the program for the crop with respect to which deficiency payments are available under section 107D or 105C, times

"(C) the average of the program yields for the crop.

"(3) Funds expended to carry out export certificate programs established under this subsection shall be in addition to, and not in place of, funds authorized by any other law to be expended to finance or encourage the export of wheat or feed grains.

"(4) For purposes of facilitating the transfer of export certificates under this subsection, the Commodity Credit Corporation may buy and sell certificates in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(b)(1) Effective for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat of feed grains, the Secretary may issue to eligible producers (who, for purposes of this subsection, are producers of wheat or feed grains paticipating in the program under this Act for such crop who meet the requirements of paragraph (2)) export marketing certificates, denominated in bushels of wheat or feed grains, as applicable, for the crop, which shall be used, under such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe consistent with the provisions of this subsection, as follows:

"(A) Not later than 3 months before the beginning of the marketing year for a crop of wheat or feed grains, the Secretary may issue to eligible producers that plant at least 50 percent of the farm's wheat or feed grain crop acreage base for such crop, export marketing certificates to be applicable to such marketing year that, in the aggregate, shall equal the quantity of the commodity the Secretary estimates will be exported during the marketing year. Each such eligible producer shall receive certificate for a quantity of the commodity that bears the same ratio to the quantity of estimated exports as the producer's crop acreage base for that crop of the commodity bears to the aggregate total of all such eligible producers' crop acreage bases for that crop, rounded upward to the nearest full bushel.

"(B) The denomination of export marketing certificates shall be 1 bushel (with no accompanying cash face value), except that the Secretary may issue certificates in multiples of such denomination, and any certificate in the multiple of such denomination, may be exchanged by the producer, at the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office, for certifications representing an equivalent quantity of the commodity in different multiples, to facilitate the operation of the program under this subsection. Each export marketing certificate shall designate the producer by name and the crop involved.

"(C) If 7 months after the beginning of the marketing year for the crop, the Secretary determines that the amount of the commodity that will be exported during the marketing year for that crop will exceed the aggregate quantity of the commodity represented by all the export marketing certificates so issued, the Secretary may issue addtional export marketing certificates to producers that initially received certificates for the crop sufficient to cover the additional exports, such certificates to be apportioned among such producers so that producer receives the same portion of the additional certificates issued that the producer received of the export certificates initially issued for the crop, as provided in subparagraph (A), rounded upward to the nearest full bushel.

"(D) Producers may convey export marketing certificates issued under this subsection to purchasers of the commodity involved sold by the producers at any time prior to the end of the marketing year for the crop described in the certificate. If a producer has less wheat or feed grains to sell than the quantity represented by the export marketing certificates issued to the producer, because of the reduced production or other reason or because, in the case of additional certificates issued under subparagraph (C), the producer had disposed of the producer's wheat or feed grains prior to the issuance of such additional certificates, the producer, at any time prior to the end of the marketing year for the crop involved, may sell the extra export marketing certificates to any person for such price as agreed on by the producer and purchaser. Any certificate may be reconveyed without restriction.

"(2) To be eligible to receive export certificates under this subsection for a crop of wheat or feed grains, a producer of such commodity must participate in the program under this title for such crop, and—

"(A) if there is no acreage limitation or set-aside in effect for the crop, limit the acreage on the farm planted to the crop for harvest to the farm's wheat or feed grain crop acreage base, as applicable;

"(B) if an acreage limitation is in effect for the crop, limit the acreage on the farm planted to the crop acreage base, as applicable, reduced to the extent required under the acreage limitation program, and comply with any other terms of the acreage limitation program established by the Secretary; or

"(C) if a set-aside program is in effect for the crop, comply with the set-aside and other terms of the set-aside program established by the Secretary.

"(3) Whenever the Secretary issues certificates under this subsection for a crop of wheat or feed grains, no person may export wheat or feed grains or products thereof, from the United States during the marketing year for the crop without surrendering to the Secretary, at the time of export, export marketing certificates for such crop representing the quantity of the commodity being exported or, in the case of wheat or feed grain products, the equivalent quantity of the commodity contained in the products being exported. Persons that fail to comply with the requirements of the preceding sentence shall be subject, for each violation thereof, to a fine of not more than $25,000 or imprisonment for not to exceed 1 year, or both such fine and imprisonment. This paragraph shall not apply to exports of commodities or products owned by the Federal Government or any agency or instrumentality thereof, nor to commodities or products provided to the exporter by the Commodity Credit Corporation under an export development program.

"(4) Any person who falsely makes, issues, alters, forges, or counterfeits any export marketing certificate, or with fraudulent intent possesses, transfers, or uses any such falsely make, issued, altered, forced, or counterfeited export marketing certificate, shall be subject to a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment of not more than 10 years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

"(5) For purposes of facilitating the transfer of export certificates under this subsection, the Commodity Credit Corportation may buy and sell certificates in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.".

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION SALES PRICE RESTRICTIONS

SEC. 1007. Effective only for the marketing years for the 1986 through 1990 crops, section 407 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1427) is amended by—

(1) in the third sentence, striking out the langauge following the third colon and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Corporation may not sell any of its stocks of wheat, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, and rye, respectively, at less (A) 115 percent of the current national average loan rate for the commodity, adjusted for such current market differentials reflecting grade, quality, location, and other value factors as the Secretary determines appropriate plus reasonable carrying charges, or (B) if the Secretary permits the repayment of loans made for a crop of the commodity at a rate that is less than the loan level determined for such crop, 115 percent of the average loan repayment rate that is determined for such crop during the period of such loans.";

(2) in the fifth sentence, striking out "current basic county support rate including the value of any applicable price-support payment in kind (or a comparable price if there is no current basic county support rate)" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "current basic county loan rate (or a comparable price if there is no current basic county loan rate)"; and

(3) in the seventh sentence, striking out ", but in no event shall the purchase price exceed the then current support price for such commodities" and inserting in lieu thereof: "or unduly affecting market prices, but in no event shall the purchase price exceed the Corporation's minimum sales price for such commodities for unrestricted use".

DISASTER PAYMENTS FOR 1985 THROUGH 1990 CROPS OF PEANUTS, SOYBEANS, SUGAR BEETS, AND SUGARCANE

SEC. 1008. Effective only for the 1985 through 1990 crops of peanuts, soybeans, sugar beets, and sugarcane, section 201 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446) (as amended by section 901 of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) If the Secetary determines that the producers on a farm are prevented from planting any portion of the acreage on the farm intended for peanuts, soybeans, sugar beets, or sugarcane to peanuts, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, or other nonconserving crops because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the Secretary may make a prevented planting disaster payment to the producers in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the number of acres so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted to peanuts soybeans, sugar beets, or sugarcane for harvest (including any acreage that the producers were prevented from planting to such commodity or to other nonconserving crops in lieu of peanuts, soybeans, sugar beets, or sugarcane because of drought, flood or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers) in the immediately preceding year, by

"(B) 75 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary, by

"(C) a payment rate equal to 50 percent of the loan and purchase level for the crop.

"(2) If the secretary determines that because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers, the total quantity of peanuts, soybeans, sugar beets, or sugarcane that the producers are able to harvest on any farm is less than the result of multiplying 60 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary for such crop by the acreage planted for harvest for such crop, the Secretary may make a reduced yield disaster payment to the producers at a rate equal to 50 percent of the loan and purchase level for the crop for the deficiency in production below 60 percent for the crop.

"(3) The Secretary may make such adjustments in the amount of payments made available under this paragraph with respect to an individual farm so as to assure the equitable allotment of such payments among producers, taking into account other forms of Federal disaster assistance provided to the producers for the crop involved.".

COST REDUCTION OPTIONS

SEC. 1009. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever the Secretary of Agriculture determines that an acting authorized under subsection (c), (d), or (e) will reduce the total of the direct and indirect costs to the Federal Government of a commodity program administered by the Secretary without adversely affecting income to small- and medium-sized producers participating in such program, the Secretary shall take such action with respect to the commodity program involved.

(b) In the announcement of the specific provisions of any commodity program administered by the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary shall include a statement setting forth which, if any, of the actions are to be initially included in the program, and a statement that the Secretary reserves the right to initiate at a later date any action not previously included but authorized by this section, including the right to reopen and change a contract entered into by a producer under the program if the producer voluntarily agrees to the change.

(c) When a nonrecourse loan program is in effect for a crop of a commodity, the Secretary may enter the commercial market to purchase such commodity if the Secretary determines that the cost of such purchases plus appropriate carrying charges will probably be less than the comparable cost of later acquiring the commodity through defaults on nonrecourse loans under the program.

(d) When the domestic market price of a commodity for which a nonrecourse loan program is in effect is insufficient to cover the principal and accumulated interest on a loan made under such program, thereby encouraging default by a producer, the Secretary may provide for settlement of such loan and redemption by the producer of the commodity securing such loan for less than the total of the principal and all interest accumulated thereon if the Secretary determines that such reduction in the settlement price will yield savings to the Federal Government due to—

(1) receipt by the Federal Government of a portion rather than none of the accumulated interest;

(2) avoidance of default; or

(3) elimination of storage, handling, and carrying charges on the forfeited commodity, but the Secretary may not reduce the settlement price to less than the principal due on the loan.

(e) When a production control or loan program is in effect for a crop of a major agricultural commodity, the Secretary may at any time prior to harvest reopen the program to participating producers for the purpose of accepting bids from producers for the conversion of acreage planted to such crop to diverted acres in return for payment in kind from Commodity Credit Corporation surplus stocks of the commodity to which the acreage was planted, if the Secretary determines that (1) changes in domestic or world supply or demand conditions have substantially changed after announcement of the program for that crop, and (2) without action to further adjust production, the Federal Government and producers will be faced with a burdensome and costly surplus. Such payments in kind shall not be included within the payment limitation of $50,000 per person established under section 1001 of this Act, but shall be limited to a total $20,000 per year per producer for any one commodity.

(f) The authority provided in this section shall be in addition to, and not in place of, any authority granted to the Secretary under any other provision of law.

MULTIYEAR SET-ASIDES

SEC. 1010. Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

(1) The Secretary of Agriculture may enter into multiyear set-aside contracts for a period not to extend beyond the 1990 crops. Such contracts may be entered into only as a part of the programs in effect for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, and rice, and only producers participating in one or more of such programs shall be eligible to contract with the Secretary under this section Producers agreeing to a multiyear set-aside agreement shall be required to devote the set-aside acreage to vegetative cover capable of maintaining itself through such period to provide soil protection, water quality enhancement, wildlife production, and natural beauty. Grazing of livestock under this section shall be prohibited, except in areas of a major disaster, as determined by the President, if the Secretary finds there is a need for such grazing as a result of such disaster. Producers entering into agreements under this section shall also agree to comply with all applicable State and local laws and regulations governing noxious weed control.

(2) The Secretary shall provide cost-sharing incentives to farm operators for the establishment of vegetative cover, whenever a multiyear set-aside contract is entered into under this section.

(3) The Secretary may issue such regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out this section.

(4) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

SUPPLEMENTAL SET-ASIDE AND ACREAGE LIMITATION AUTHORITY

SEC. 1011. Effective for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains, section 113 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445h) is amended to read as follows:

"SUPPLEMENTAL SET-ASIDE AND ACREAGE LIMITATION AUTHORITY

"SEC. 113. Notwithstanding any other provision of law or prior announcement made by the Secretary to the contrary, the Secretary may announce and provide for a set-aside or acreage limitation program under section 105C or 107D for one or more of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains if the Secretary determines that such action is in the public interest as a result of the imposition of restrictions on the export of any such commodity by the President or other member of the executive branch of the Federal Government. To carry out effectively a set-aside or acreage limitation program authorized under this section, the Secretary may make such modifications and adjustments in such program as the Secretary determines necessary because of any delay in instituting such program.".

SEC. 1012. (a) Except as provided by subsection (b), effective beginning with the 1986 crops, section 110 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445e) is amended by—

(1) in the first sentence of subsection (a)—

(A) striking out "and" after "supply" and inserting in lieu thereof a comma; and

(B) inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", and provide for adequate, but not excessive, carryover stocks to ensure a reliable supply of the commodities";

(2) in the third sentence of subsection (b)—

(A) in clause (1), striking out "nor more than five years" and inserting in lieu thereof ", with extensions as warranted by market conditions";

(B) in clause (4), striking out "before the market price for wheat or feed grains has reached" and inserting in lieu thereof "when the total amount of wheat or feed grains in storage under programs under this section is below the upper limits for such storage as set forth in clauses (A) and (B) of subsection (e)(2) and the market price for wheat or feed grains is below";

(C) in clause (5), striking out "a specified level, as determined by the Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "the higher of 140 percent of the nonrecourse loan rate for the commodity or the established price for such commodity, as determined under title I";

(3) adding at the end of subsection (b) the following:

"Whenever—

"(A)(i) the total quantity of wheat stored under storage programs established under this section is less than 17 percent of the estimated total domestic and export usage of wheat during the then current marketing year for wheat, as determined by the Secretary; or

"(ii) the total quantity of feed grains stored under storage programs established under this section is less than 7 percent of the estimated total domestic and export usage of feed grains during the then current marketing year for feed grains, as determined by the Secretary; and

"(B) the market price of the commodity, as determined by the Secretary, does not exceed 140 percent of the nonrecourse loan rate for the commodity;

"(B) The upper limit on the total quantity of feed grains that may be stored under such programs shall not exceed 15 percent of the estimated total domestic and export usage of feed grains during the marketing year for the crop, as determined by the Secretary.

Subtitle B—Uniform Base Acreage and Yield Provisions

ACREAGE BASE AND PROGRAM YIELD SYSTEM FOR THE WHEAT, FEED GRAIN, UPLAND COTTON, AND RICE PROGRAMS

SEC. 1031. Effective for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, and rice, the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) is amended by inserting after title IV the following new title:

"TITLE V—ACREAGE BASE AND PROGRAM YIELD SYSTEM FOR THE WHEAT, FEED GRAIN, UPLAND COTTON, AND RICE PROGRAMS

"SEC. 501. The purpose of this title is to prescribe a system for establishing farm and crop acreage bases and program yields for the wheat, feed grain, upland cotton, and rice programs under this Act that is efficient, equitable, flexible, and predictable.

"SEC. 502. For purposes of this title—

"(1) the term 'program crop' means any crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, or rice; and

"(2) the term 'county committee' means the county committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h(b)) for the county in which the farm is administratively located.

"SEC. 503. (a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall provide for the establishment and maintenance of farm acreage bases for the 1986 and subsequent crop years.

"(2) With respect to the 1986 crop year, the Secretary may forgo the establishment of farm acreage bases under this title.

"(b)(1) The county committee, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, shall determine the farm acreage base for a farm for a crop year. Such farm acreage base shall include the number of acres equal to the sum of the crop acreage bases for the farm.

"(2) In the case of farm acreage bases established for the 1987 and subsequent crop years, the determination of the farm acreage base shall also include (in addition to the crop acreage bases for the farm) the sum of (A) the average of the acreage on the farm planted to soybeans in the 1986 and subsequent crop years, and (B) the average of the acreage on the farm devoted by the producer to a conserving use in the normal course of farming operations in the 1986 and subsequent crop years.

"SEC. 504. (a)(1) The Secretary shall provide for the establishment and maintenance of crop acreage bases for each program crop, including any program crop produced under an established practice of double cropping. The sum of the crop acreage bases for all program crops produced on any farm for any crop year shall not exceed the farm acreage base for such farm for such crop year, except to the extent that the excess is due to an established practice of double cropping.

"(2) The term 'double cropping' means a farming practice, as defined by the Secretary, which has been carried out on a farm in at least 3 of the 5 crop years immediately preceding the crop year for which the crop acreage base for the farm is established.

"(b)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the crop acreage base for a program crop for any farm for the 1986 and subsequent crop years shall be the number of acres that is equal to the average of the acreage planted and considered planted to such program crop for harvest on the farm in each of the five crop years preceding such crop year.

"(B)(i) In the case of upland cotton and rice, except as provided in clause (ii), if no planted and considered planted acreage has been established for a farm for each of the five crop years preceding such crop year, the crop acreage base for such crop shall be equal to the average of the acreage planted and considered planted to such crop for harvest on the farm in each of the five crop years preceding such crop year, excluding all crop years in which planted and considered planted acreage was not established for the farm.

"(ii) Any crop acreage base established in accordance with paragraph (1)(A) and paragraph (1)(B)(i) shall not exceed a number of acres equal to the average of the acreage planted and considered planted to such crop for harvest on the farm in each of the two crop years preceding such crop year.

"(2) The acreage considered planted to a program crop shall include—

"(A) any reduced acreage, set-aside acreage, and diverted acreage on the farm;

"(B) any acreage on the farm that producers were prevented from planting to such crop because of drought, flood, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producers;

"(C) acreage in an amount equal to the difference between the permitted acreage for a program crop and the acreage planted to the crop, if the acreage considered to be planted is planted to a nonprogram crop, other than soybeans and extra long staple cotton; and

"(D) any acreage on the farm which the Secretary determines is necessary to be included in establishing a fair and equitable crop acreage base.

"(3) For the purpose of determining the crop acreage base for the 1986 and subsequent crop years for any farm, the county committee, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may construct a planting history for such crop if—

"(A) planting records for such crop for any of the five crop years preceding such crop year are incomplete or unavailable; or

"(B) during at least one but not more than four of the five crop years preceding such crop year, the program crop was not produced on the farm.

"(c) The Secretary may make adjustments to reflect crop rotation practices and to reflect such other factors as the Secretary determines should be considered in determining a fair and equitable crop acreage base.

"(d) If a county committee determines, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, that the occurrence of a natural disaster or other similar condition beyond the control of the producer prevented the planting of a program crop on any farm within the county (or substantially destroyed any such program crop after it had been planted but before it had been harvested), the producer may plant any other crop, including any other program crop, on the acreage of such farm that, but for the occurrence of such disaster or other condition, would have been devoted to the production of a progam crop. For purposes of determining the farm acreage base or the crop acreage base, any acreage on the farm on which a substitute crop, including any program crop, is planted under this subsection shall be taken into account as if such acreage had been planted to the program crop for which the other crop was substituted.

"SEC. 505. (a) the Secretary may provide for an upward adjustment of any crop acreage base for any farm for any crop year. Except as provided in subsection (d), such adjustment may not exceed the number of acres that is equal to 10 percent of the farm acreage base for such farm for such crop year. Any upward adjustment in a crop acreage base must be offset by an equivalent downward adjustment in one or more other crop acreage bases established for the farm for such crop year.

"(b) the Secretary may suspend, on a nationwide basis, any limitation contained in subsection (a) with respect to the crop acreage base for any program crop if the Secretary determines that—

"(1) a short supply or other similar emergency situation exists with respect to the program crop; or

"(2) market factors exist that require the suspension of the limitation to achieve the purposes of the program.

"SEC. 506. (a) The Secretary shall provide for the establishment of a farm program payment yield for each farm for each program crop for each crop year.

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the farm program payment yield for each of the 1986 and 1987 crop years shall be the average of the farm program payment yields for the farm for the 1981 through 1985 crop years, excluding the year in which such yield was the highest and the year in which such yield was the lowest.

"(2) If no crop of the commodity was produced on the farm or no farm program payment yield was established for the farm for any of the 1981 through 1985 crop years, the farm program payment yield shall be established on the basis of the average farm program payment yield for such crop years for similar farms in the area.

"(3) If the Secretary determines such action is necessary, the Secretary may establish national, State, or county program payment yields on the basis of—

"(A) historical yields, as adjusted by the Secretary to correct for abnormal factors affecting such yields in the historical period; or

"(B) the Secretary's estimate of actual yields for the crop year involved if historical yield data is not available.

"(4) If national, State, or country program payment yields are established, the farm program payment yields shall balance to the national, State, or county program payment yields.

"(c)(1) With respect to the 1988 and subsequent crop years, the Secretary may (A) establish the farm program payment yield as provided in subsection (b), or (B) establish a farm program payment yield for any program crop for any farm on the basis of the average of the yield per harvested acre for the crop for such farm for each of the five crop years immediately preceding such crop year, excluding the crop year with the highest yield per harvested acre, the crop year with the lowest yield per harvested acre, and any crop year in which such crop was not planted on the farm. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the farm program payment yield for the 1983 through 1986 crop years and the actual yield per harvested acre with respect to the 1987 and subsequent crop years shall be used in determining farm program payment yields.

"(2) The county committee, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may adjust any program yield for any program crop for any farm if the program yield for the crop on the farm does not accurately reflect the productive potential of the farm because of the occurrence of a natural disaster or other similar condition beyond the control of the producer.

"(d) In the case of any farm for which the actual yield per harvested acre for any program crop referred to in subsection (c)(1) for any crop year is not available, the county committee may assign the farm a yield for the crop for such crop year on the basis of actual yields for the crop for such crop year on similar farms in the area.

"SEC. 507. Effective for each of the 1986 and subsequent crop years, each county committee, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, may require any producer who seeks to establish a farm acreage base, crop acreage base, or farm program payment yield for a farm for a crop year to provide planting and production history of such farm for each of the five crop years immediately preceding such crop year.

"SEC. 508. Each county committee may, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, provide for the establishment of a farm acreage base, crop acreage base, and farm program payment yield with respect to any farm administratively located within the county if such farm acreage base, crop acreage base, or farm program payment yield cannot otherwise be established under this title. Such bases and farm program payment yields shall be established in a fair and equitable manner, but no such bases or farm program payment yields shall be established for a farm if the producer on such farm is subject to sanctions under any provision of Federal law for cultivating highly erodible land or converted wetland.

"SEC. 509. The Secretary shall establish an administrative appeal procedure which provides for an administrative review of determinations made with respect to farm acreage bases, crop acreage bases, and farm program payment yields.".

Subtitle C—Honey

HONEY PRICE SUPPORT

"SEC. 1041. Effective only for the 1986 through 1990 crops of honey, subsection (b) of section 201 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) For each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of honey, the price of honey shall be supported through loans, purchases, or other operations as follows:

"(A) For the 1986 crop, the loan and purchase level for honey shall be 64 cents per pound.

"(B) For the 1987 crop, the loan and purchase level for honey shall be 63 cents per pound.

"(C) For each of the 1988, 1989, and 1990 crops, the loan and purchase level for honey shall be the same as the level established for the preceding crop year reduced by 5 percent, except that such level may not be less than an amount equal to 75 percent of the simple average price received by producers of honey in the 5 preceding crop years, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period.

"(2) The Secretary may permit a producer to repay a loan made to the producer under this subsection for a crop at a level that is the lesser of—

"(A) the loan level determined for such crop; or

"(B) such level as the Secretary determines will—

"(i) minimize the number of loan forfeitures;

"(ii) not result in excessive total stocks of honey;

"(iii) reduce the costs incurred by the Federal Government in storing honey; and

"(iv) maintain the competitiveness of honey in domestic and export markets.

"(3)(A) If the Secretary determines that a person has knowingly pledged adulterated or imported honey as collateral to secure a loan made under this subsection, such person shall, in addition to any other penalties or sanctions prescribed by law, be ineligible for a loan, purchase, or payment under this subsection for the 3 crop years succeeding such determination.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), honey shall be considered adulterated if—

"(i) any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for such honey;

"(ii) such honey contains a poisonous or deleterious substance that may render such honey injurious to health, except that in any case in which such substance is not added to such honey, such honey shall not be considered adulterated if the quantity of such substance in or on such honey does not ordinarily render it injurious to health; or

"(iii) such honey is for any other reason unsound, unhealthy, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human consumption.".

SEC. 1108. Section 302(c)(1)(C) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1727a(c)(1)(C)) is amended by striking out "15" and inserting in lieu thereof "10".

USE OF SURPLUS COMMODITIES IN INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

SEC. 1109. Section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1431) is amended by—

(1) striking out the last two sentences of subsection (a); and

(2) amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The Secretary, subject to the requirements of paragraph (10), may furnish eligible commodities for carrying out programs of assistance in developing countries and friendly countries under title II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 and under the Food for Progress Act of 1985, as approved by the Secretary, and for such purposes as are approved by the Secretary. To ensure that the furnishing of commodities under this subsection is coordinated with and complements other United States foreign assistance, assistance under this subsection shall be coordinated through the mechanism designated by the President to coordinate assistance under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954.

"(2) As used in this subsection, the term 'eligible commodities' means—

"(A) dairy products, grains, and oilseeds acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation through price support operations that the Secretary determines meet the criteria specified in subsection (a); and

"(B) such other edible agricultural commodities as may be acquired by the Secretary or the Commodity Credit Corporation in the normal course of operations and that are available for disposition under this subsection, except that no such commodities may be acquired for the purpose of their use under this subsection.

"(3)(A) Commodities may not be made available for disposition under this subsection in amounts that (i) will, in any way, reduce the amounts of commodities that traditionally are made available through donations to domestic feeding programs or agencies, or (ii) will prevent the Secretary from fulfilling any agreement entered into by the Secretary under a payment-in-kind program under this Act or other Acts administered by the Secretary.

"(B)(i) The requirements of section 401(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 shall apply with respect to commodities furnished under this subsection. Commodities may not be furnished for disposition to any country under this subsection except on determinations by the Secretary that—

"(I) the receiving country has the absorptive capacity to use the commodities efficiently and effectively; and

"(II) such disposition of the commodities will not interfere with usual marketings of the United States, nor disrupt world prices of agricultural commodities and normal patterns of commercial trade with developing countries.

"(ii) The requirement for safeguarding usual marketings of the United States shall not be used to prevent the furnishing under this subsection of any eligible commodity for use in countries that—"(I) have not traditionally purchased the commodity from the United States; or

"(II) do not have adequate financial resources to acquire the commodity from the United States through commercial sources or through concessional sales arrangements.

"(C) The Secretary shall take reasonable precautions to ensure that—

"(i) commodities furnished under this subsection will not displace or interfere with sales that otherwise might be made; and

"(ii) sales or barter under paragraph (7) will not unduly disrupt world prices of agricultural commodities nor normal patterns of commercial trade with friendly countries.

"(4) Agreements may be entered into under this subsection to provide eligible commodities in installments over an extended period of time.

"(5)(A) Section 203 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 shall apply to the commodities furnished under this subsection.

"(B) The Commodity Credit Corporation may pay the processing and domestic handling costs incurred, as authorized under this subsection, in the form of eligible commodities, as defined in paragraph (2)(A), if the Secretary determines that such in-kind payment will not disrupt domestic markets.

"(6) The cost of commodities furnished under this subsection, and expenses incurred under section 203 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 in connection with those commodities, shall be in addition to the level of assistance programmed under that Act and shall not be considered expenditures for international affairs and finance.

"(7) Eligible commodities, and products thereof, furnished under this subsection may be sold or bartered only with the approval of the Secretary and solely as follows:

"(A) Sales and barter that are incidental to the donation of the commodities or products.

"(B) Sales and barter to finance the distribution, handling, and processing costs of the donated commodities or products in the importing country or in a country through which such commodities or products must be transshipped, or other activities in the importing country that are consistent with providing food assistance to needy people.

"(C) Sales and barter of commodities and products furnished to intergovernmental agencies or organizations, insofar as they are consistent with normal programming procedures in the distribution of commodities by those agencies or organizations.

"(D)(i) Sales of commodities and products furnished to nonprofit and voluntary agencies, or cooperatives, for food assistance under agreements that provide for the use, by the agency or cooperative, of foreign currency proceeds generated from such sale of commodities or products for the purposes established in clause (ii) of this subparagraph.

"(ii) Foreign currency proceeds generated from the sales of commodities and products under this subparagraph shall be used by nonprofit and voluntary agencies, or cooperatives, for activities carried out by the agency or cooperative that will enhance the effectiveness of transportation, distribution, and use of commodities and products donated under this subsection, including food for work programs and cooperative and agricultural projects.

"(iii) Except as otherwise provided in clause (v), such agreements, taken together for each fiscal year, shall provide for sales of commodities and products for foreign currency proceeds in amounts that are, in the aggregate, not less than 5 percent of the aggregate value of all commodities and products furnished for carrying out programs of assistance under this subsection in such fiscal year. The minimum allocation requirements of this clause apply with respect to commodities and products made available under this subsection for carrying out programs of assistance under title II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, and not with respect to commodities and products made available to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985.

"(iv) Foreign currency proceeds generated from the sale of commodities or products under this subparagraph shall be expended within the country of origin within one year of acquisition of such currency, except that the Secretary may permit the use of such proceeds (I) in countries other than the country of origin as necessary to expedite the transportation of commodities and products furnished under this subsection, and (II) after one year of acquisition as appropriate to achieve the purposes of clause (i).

"(v) The provisions of clause (iii) of this subparagraph establishing minimum annual allocations for sales and use of proceeds shall not apply to the extent that there have not been sufficient requests for such sales and use of proceeds nor to the extent required under paragraph (3).

"(E) Sales and barter to cover expenses incurred under paragraph (5)(a).

No portion of the proceeds or services realized from sales or barter under this paragraph may be used to meet operating and overhead expenses, except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (C) and except for personnel and administrative costs incurred by local cooperatives.

"(8)(A) To the maximum extent practicable, expedited procedures shall be used in the implementation of this subsection.

"(B) The Secretary shall be responsible for regulations governing sales and barter, and the use of foreign currency proceeds, under paragraph (7) of this subsection that will provide reasonable safeguards to prevent the occurrence of abuses in the conduct of activities provided for in paragraph (7).

"(9)(A) Each recipient of commodities and products approved for sale or barter under paragraph (7) shall report to the Secretary information with respect to the items required to be included in the Secretary's report pursuant to clauses (i) through (iv) of subparagraph (B). Reports pursuant to this subparagraph shall be submitted in accordance with regulations of the Secretary. Such regulations shall require at least one report annually, to be submitted not later than December 31 following the end of the fiscal year in which the commodities and products are received; except that a report shall not be required with respect to fiscal year 1985.

"(B) Not later than February 15, 1987, and annually thereafter, the Secretary shall report to the Congress on sales and barter, and use of foreign currency proceeds, under paragraph (7) during the preceding fiscal year. Such report shall include information on—

"(i) the quantity of commodities furnished for such sale or barter;

"(ii) the amount of funds (including dollar equivalents for foreign currencies) and value of services generated from such sales and barter in such fiscal year;

"(iii) how such funds and services were used;

"(iv) the amount of foreign currency proceeds that were used under agreements under subparagraph (D) of paragraph (7) in such fiscal year, and the percentage of the quantity of all commodities and products furnished under this subsection in such fiscal year such use represented;

"(v) the Secretary's best estimate of the amount of foreign currency proceeds that will be used, under agreements under subparagraph (D) of paragraph (7), in the then current fiscal year and the next following fiscal year (if all requests for such use are agreed to), and the percentage that such estimated use represents of the quantity of all commodities and products that the Secretary estimates will be furnished under this subsection in each such fiscal year;

"(vi) the effectiveness of such sales, barter, and use during such fiscal year in facilitating the distribution of commodities and products under this subsection;

"(vii) the extent to which sales, barter, or uses—

"(I) displace or interfere with commercial sales of United States agricultural commodities and products that otherwise would be made,

"(II) affect usual marketings of the United States,

"(III) disrupt world prices of agricultural commodities or normal patterns of trade with friendly countries, or

"(IV) discourage local production and marketing of agricultural commodities in the countries in which commodities and products are distributed under this subsection; and

"(viii) the Secretary's recommendations, if any, for changes to improve the conduct of sales, barter, or use activities under paragraph (7).

"(10)(A) Subject to the limitations established under paragraph (3), the Secretary shall make available for disposition under this subsection in each of the fiscal years 1986 through 1990 not less than the minimum quantities of eligible commodities specified in subparagraph (B).

"(B) The minimum quantity of eligible commodities that shall be made available for disposition under this subsection in each fiscal year shall be—

"(i) 500,000 metric tons of grains and oilseeds from the Corporation's uncommitted stocks, or an amount equal to 10 percent of the Corporation's uncommitted stocks of grains and oilseeds as of the end of such fiscal year (as estimated by the Secretary), whichever is less; and

"(ii) 10 percent of the Corporation's uncommitted stocks of dairy products, but not less than 150,000 metric tons of such products to the extent that uncommitted stocks are available.

The Secretary shall make such estimation of expected year-end levels of the Corporation's uncommitted stocks prior to the beginning of the fiscal year. The Secretary's determination as to the amount of the Corporation's stocks that shall be made available for disposition under this subsection for such fiscal year shall be published in the Federal Register, along with a breakdown by kind of commodity and the quantity of each kind of commodity that shall be made available, before the beginning of such fiscal year.

"(C) Of the aggregate amounts made available each fiscal year pursuant to both clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (B), not less than 75,000 metric tons shall be made available to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985.

"(D)(i) The Secretary—

"(I) may waive the minimum quantity requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) for a fiscal year to the extent that the Secretary determines and reports to Congress that there are not sufficient requests for eligible commodities under this subsection for such fiscal year, except that the waiver authority of this subclause may not be used to waive the minimum quantity requirement of subparagraph (C);

"(II) may waive the minimum quantity requirement of subparagraph (C) in accordance with subsection (f)(2) of the Food for Progress Act of 1985; and

"(III) may waive the minimum quantity requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) for a fiscal year, if the Secretary determines that the restrictions on the furnishing of commodities under paragraph (3) prevent the making available of commodities in such quantities.

"(ii) For any fiscal year in which the minimum levels of uncommitted Commodity Credit Corporation stocks specified in subparagraph (B) are not made available and during which any requests for commodities under this subsection are rejected, the Secretary shall provide a detailed, written explanation to Congress, at the end of such fiscal year, of the reasons for the rejections of such requests.

"(11)(A) The Secretary may furnish eligible commodities under this subsection in connection with (i) concessional sales agreements entered into under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 or other statutes, or (ii) agricultural export bonus or promotion programs carried out under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act or other statutes.

"(B) Eligible commodities may be furnished by the Secretary under this subsection in connection with agreements by recipient countries to acquire additional agricultural commodities from the United States through commercial arrangements.

"(C) The amount of any commodity furnished under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of this paragraph in any fiscal year shall not be considered for the purpose of determining whether the requirements of paragraph (10)(A) of this subsection have been met during such fiscal year.".

FOOD FOR PROGRESS

SEC. 1110. (a) This section may be cited as the "Food for Progress Act of 1985".

(b) In order to use the food resources of the United States more effectively in support of countries that have made commitments to introduce or expand free enterprise elements in their agricultural economies through changes in commodity pricing, marketing, input availability, distribution, and private sector involvement, the President is authorized to enter into agreements with developing countries to furnish commodities made available pursuant to subsections (e) and (f) of this section. Such agreements may provide for commodities to be furnished on a multiyear basis.

(c) As used in this section, the term "commodities" means agricultural commodities and the products thereof.

(d) In determining whether to enter into an agreement with countries under this section, the President shall consider whether a potential recipient country is committed to carry out, or is carrying out, policies that promote economic freedom, private, domestic production of food commodities for domestic consumption, and the creation and expansion of efficient domestic markets for the purchase and sale of such commodities. Such policies may provide for, among other things—

(1) access, on the part of farmers in the country, to private, competitive markets for their product;

(2) market pricing of commodities to foster adequate private sector incentives to individual farmers to produce food on a regular basis for the country's domestic needs;

(3) establishment of market-determined foreign exchange rates;

(4) timely availability of production inputs (such as seed, fertilizer, or pesticides) to farmers;

(5) access to technologies appropriate to the level of agricultural development in the country; and

(6) construction of facilities and distribution systems necessary to handle perishable products.

(e)(1) The Commodity Credit Corporation shall make available to the President such commodities determined to be available under section 401 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 as the President may request for purposes of furnishing commodities under this section.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation may use funds appropriated to carry out title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 in carrying out this section with respect to commodities made available under that Act.

(3) The Commodity Credit Corporation may finance the sale and exportation of commodities, made available under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, which are furnished to a developing country under this section. Payment by a developing country for commodities made available under that Act which are purchased on credit terms under this section shall be on the same basis as the terms provided in section 106 of that Act.

(4) In the case of commodities made available under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 for purposes of this section, section 203 of that Act shall apply to commodities furnished on a grant basis to a developing country under this section and section 401(b) of that Act shall apply to all commodities furnished to a developing country under this section.

(f)(1) Commodities made available under section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 for use in carrying out this section shall be provided to developing countries on a grant basis.

(2) Not less than 75,000 metric tons shall be made available pursuant to section 416(b)(10)(C) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 to carry out this section unless the President determines there are an insufficient number of eligible recipients.

(3) In carrying out section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, the Commodity Credit Corporation may purchase commodities for use under this section if—

(A) the Commodity Credit Corporation does not hold stocks of such commodities; or

(B) Commodity Credit Corporation stocks are insufficient to satisfy commitments made in agreements entered into under this section and such commodities are needed to fulfill such commitments.

(4) No funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation in excess of $30,000,000 (exclusive of the cost of commodities) may be used to carry out this section with respect to commodities made available under section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 unless authorized in advance in appropriation Acts.

(5) The cost of commodities made available under section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 which are furnished under this section, and the expenses incurred in connection with furnishing such commodities, shall be in addition to the level of assistance programmed under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 and may not be considered expenditures for international affairs and finance.

(g) Not more than 500,000 metric tons of commodities may be furnished under this section in each of the fiscal years 1986 through 1990.

(h) An agreement entered into under this section shall prohibit the resale or transshipment of the commodities provided under the agreement to other countries.

(i) In entering into agreements under this section, the President shall take reasonable steps to avoid displacement of any sales of United States commodities that would otherwise be made to such countries.

(j) Within 90 days after the end of each fiscal year in which an agreement entered into with a country under this section is in effect, the President shall report to the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate on the status of such agreement and the progress being made to implement private, free enterprise agricultural policies for long-term agricultural development in such country.

(k) This section shall be effective during the period beginning October 1, 1985, and ending September 30, 1990.

(b) The Congress finds that additional steps should be taken to use the agricultural abundance produced by American farmers—

"(2) to the extent that sales for dollars under the terms applicable to such sales are not possible, for foreign currencies on credit terms and on terms that permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement; or

"(3) for foreign currencies for use under section 108 on terms that permit conversion to dollars.

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), for each of the fiscal years 1986 through 1990 sales for foreign currencies for use under section 108 under agreements entered into under this title shall be made at an annual level of not less than 10 percent of the aggregate value of all sales of agricultural commodities under this title.

"(2) The President may reduce the minimum level of sales for foreign currencies required under paragraph (1) during any fiscal year in which the President determines that the level of agricultural commodities furnished under this title will be significantly reduced as a result of compliance with the requirement under paragraph (1).

"(c) Agreements for sales for foreign currency in a developing country for use under section 108 may not be entered into to the extent that such agreements would generate currency in amounts that cannot be productively used and absorbed in the private sector of such country.

"(d) Sales for foreign currencies for use under section 108 under agreements entered into under this title shall be made on such terms and conditions as are specified in such agreements.".

(d) Section 103 of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1703) is amended—

Such agreement for sale shall establish a schedule for such conversion but need not specify the exchange rate for such conversion;";

(5) by striking out "Take" in subsection (o) and inserting in lieu thereof "take";

(g) Section 106(b) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, agreements under this title for the sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms may provide that proceeds from the sale of the commodities in the recipient country shall be used for such private sector development activities as are mutually agreed upon by the United States and the recipient government.

"(B) Proceeds used for private sector development activities pursuant to this paragraph shall be deposited in jointly programmed accounts to be loaned by the recipient government to one or more financial intermediaries operating within the country for use by those financial intermediaries for loans to private individuals, private and voluntary organizations, corporations, cooperatives, and other entities within such country. In the case of a cooperative or private and voluntary organization, proceeds may be granted to defray the startup costs of becoming a financial intermediary. Such proceeds shall not be used to promote the production of commodities or the products thereof that will compete, as determined by the President, in world markets with similar commodities or the products thereof produced in the United States.".

(h) Such Act is amended by inserting after section 107 (7 U.S.C. 1707) the following new section:

"SEC. 108. Procurement and other contracting requirements, normally applicable to appropriated funds, shall not apply to such foreign currency.

"(2) Prior to loaning the foreign currencies as provided in this section, the President shall take such steps as may be necessary to assure that the availability of such foreign currencies to financial intermediaries is adequately publicized within the purchasing country.

"(b) To be eligible to obtain foreign currency under this section, a financial intermediary must enter into an agreement with the President under which the intermediary agrees to use such currency to make loans to private individuals, cooperatives, corporations, or other entities within a developing country, at reasonable rates of interest, for the purpose of financing—

"(1) productive, private enterprise investment within such country, including such investment in projects carried out by cooperatives, nonprofit voluntary organizations, and other entities found to be qualified by the President;

"(2) private enterprise facilities for aiding the utilization and distribution, and increasing the consumption of and markets for, United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof; or

"(3) private enterprise support of self-help measures and projects.

"(c) An agreement entered into under this section shall specify the terms and conditions under which the foreign currency shall be used and subsequently repaid, including the following terms and conditions:

"(2)(A) A financial intermediary shall repay a loan made under this section, plus accrued interest, at such times and in such manner as will permit conversion of such foreign currency to dollars in accordance with the schedule for such conversion.

"(B) A financial intermediary may repay a loan made under this section prior to the repayment date specified in such agreement.

"(3) To be eligible to receive financing from a financial intermediary under this section, an entity or venture must—

"(B) not be owned or controlled, in whole or in part, by the government or any governmental subdivision of the developing country.

"(4)(A) The rate of interest charged on funds loaned to a financial intermediary under this section shall be such rate as is determined by the President and the intermediary.

"(B) In the case of a cooperative or nonprofit voluntary agency that is acting as a financial intermediary, the President may charge a lower rate of interest on funds loaned to such intermediary under this section than is charged to other types of intermediaries or make a grant from currencies received from sales made under section 101(a)(3) of this Act to defray the startup costs of becoming a financial intermediary.

"(5) No currency made available under this section may be used to promote the production of agricultural commodities or the products thereof that will compete, as determined by the President, in world markets with similar agricultural commodities or the products thereof produced in the United States.

"(6) The President may not require a developing country to guarantee the repayment of a loan made to a financial intermediary under this section as a condition of receipt of such loan.

"(7) A financial intermediary shall take such steps as may be necessary to publicize in the developing country the availability of loan funds under this section.

"(2) Currencies repaid by financial intermediaries shall, as determined by the President—

"(A) be used to finance additional productive, private enterprise investment under agreements with financial intermediaries entered into under this section;

"(B) be used for the development of new markets for United States agricultural commodities;

"(C) be used for the payment of United States obligations (including obligations entered into pursuant to other laws of the United States); or

"(D) be converted to dollars.

"(3) Section 1306 of title 31, United States Code, shall apply to currencies used for the purpose specified in paragraph (2)(C).

"(e)(1) Any agreement entered into under this section and section 106(b)(4) shall be subject to periodic audit to determine whether the terms and conditions of the agreement are being fulfilled.

"(2) Not later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year, the President shall report to the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate on the activities carried out under this section and section 106(b)(4) during the preceding fiscal year, including an evaluation of the impact of investment under this section and section 106(b)(4) on the development of agricultural-related private enterprise in each participating country.

"(f) The President may provide agricultural technical assistance to further the purposes of this section, including the funding of market development activities. To the maximum extent practicable, the President shall use at least 5 percent of the foreign currencies obtained for use under this section from sales of agricultural commodities made under agreements entered into under this title after the date of enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985 to carry out such assistance.

"(g) For each of the fiscal years 1986 through 1990, and in accordance with the provisions of section 106(b)(4) and this section, the President is encouraged to channel foreign currencies, in an amount equivalent to 25 percent of the value of sales agreements under this title, for loans for private enterprise investment provided there are appropriate proposals for such an amount of foreign currencies.

"(h) The provisions of this section apply notwithstanding any other provision of law.

"(i) As used in this section and in section 106(b)(4)—

The President shall include information concerning such immunization activities in the annual reports required by section 634 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, including a report on the estimated number of immunizations provided each year pursuant to this subsection.

(3)(A) appraise the various programs and activities of the Federal Government, as they affect the United States agricultural industry, for the purpose of determining the extent to which such programs and activities are contributing or not contributing to such industry; and

(B) make recommendations to the President and Congress with respect to the effectiveness of such programs and activities in contributing to such industry.

(d) Section 5312 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Special Assistant for Agricultural Trade and Food Aid."

Subtitle B—Maintenance and Development of Export Markets

TRADE POLICY DECLARATION

SEC. 1121. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the volume and value of United States agricultural exports have significantly declined in recent years as a result of unfair foreign competition and the high value of the dollar;

(2) this decline has been exacerbated by the lack of uniform and coherent objectives in United States agricultural trade policy and the absence of direction and coordination in trade policy formulation;

(3) agricultural interests have been underrepresented in councils of government responsible for determining economic policy that has contributed to a strengthening of the United States dollar;

(4) foreign policy objectives of the United States have been introduced into the trade policy process in a manner injurious to the goal of maximizing United States economic interests through trade; and

(5) the achievement of that goal is in the best interests of the United States.

(b) It is hereby declared to be the agricultural trade policy of the United States to—

(1) provide through all means possible agricultural commodities and their products for export at competitive prices, with full assurance of quality and reliability of supply;

(2) support the principle of free trade and the promotion of fairer trade in agricultural commodities and their products;

(3) cooperate fully in all efforts to negotiate with foreign countries reductions in current barriers to fair trade;

(4) counter aggressively unfair foreign trade practices using all available means, including export restitution, export bonus programs, and, if necessary, restrictions on United States imports of foreign agricultural commodities and their products, as a means to encourage fairer trade;

(5) remove foreign policy constraints to maximize United States economic interests through agricultural trade; and

(6) provide for consideration of United States agricultural trade interests in the design of national fiscal and monetary policy that may foster continued strength in the value of the dollar.

TRADE LIBERALIZATION

SEC. 1122. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the present high level of agricultural protectionism contrasts sharply with the general trade liberalization that has been achieved since the inception of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (hereinafter referred to as "GATT"); and

(2) GATT procedures should explicitly recognize the protective effect of domestic subsidies that alter trade indirectly by reducing the demand for imports and increasing the supply of exports.

(b) It is the sense of Congress that the President should negotiate with other parties to GATT to revise GATT rules and codes with the goal of reducing agricultural export subsidies, tariffs, and nontariff barriers to trade.

AGRICULTURAL TRADE CONSULTATIONS

SEC. 1123. (a) To improve the orderly marketing of United States agricultural commodities, to achieve higher income for United States producers of agricultural commodities, and to reduce the likelihood of an agricultural commodity price war and the need for export subsidy programs, the Secretary of Agriculture shall, in coordination with the United States Trade Representative, confer with representatives of other major agricultural producing countries and, at the earliest possible date, initiate and pursue agricultural trade consultations among major agricultural producing countries.

(b) It is the sense of Congress that the objectives of the consultations called for in subsection (a) should be to—

(1) increase the exchange of information on worldwide agricultural production, demand, and commodity supply levels;

(2) determine a more equitable sharing of responsibility for maintaining agricultural commodity reserves and managing supplies of agricultural commodities; and

(3) attain increased cooperation in restraining export subsidy programs.

(c) The Secretary of Agriculture shall report to Congress by July 1, 1986, and annually thereafter through fiscal year 1990, on the progress of efforts to initiate and pursue the consultations called for in subsection (a), including any agreements reached with respect to the objectives set forth in subsection (b).

TARGETED EXPORT ASSISTANCE

SEC. 1124. (a) For export activities authorized to be carried out by the Secretary of Agriculture or the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Secretary of Agriculture shall use under this section, in addition to any funds or commodities otherwise required under this Act to be used for such activities, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, and each of the fiscal years thereafter through September 30, 1990, not less than $325,000,000 of funds of, or an equal value of commodities owned by, the Corporation.

(b)(1) Funds or commodities made available for use under this section shall be used by the Secretary only to counter or offset the adverse effect on the export of a United States agricultural commodity or the product thereof of a subsidy (as defined in paragraph (2)), import quotas, or other unfair trade practices of a foreign country.

(2) As used in paragraph (1), the term subsidy includes an export subsidy, tax rebate on exports, financial assistance on preferential terms, financial assistance for operating losses, assumption of costs or expenses of production, processing, or distribution, a differential export tax or duty exemption, a domestic consumption quota, or other method of furnishing or ensuring the availability of raw materials at artificially low prices.

(c) The Secretary shall provide export assistance under this section on a priority basis in the case of—

(1) agricultural commodities and the products thereof with respect to which there has been a favorable decision under section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411); or

(2) agricultural commodities and the products thereof for which exports have been adversely affected, as defined by the Secretary, by retaliatory actions related to a favorable decision under section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411).

SHORT-TERM EXPORT CREDIT

SEC. 1125. (a) In making available any guarantees of the repayment of credit extended on terms of up to 3 years in connection with the export sale of United States agricultural commodities or the products thereof, the Commodity Credit Corporation shall take into account—

(1) the credit needs of countries that are potential purchasers of United States agricultural exports;

(2) the creditworthiness of such countries; and

(3) whether the availability of Commodity Credit Corporation guarantees will improve the competitive position of United States agricultural exports in world markets.

(b) Effective for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986 and each fiscal year thereafter through the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, the Commodity Credit Corporation shall make available not less than $5,000,000,000 in credit guarantees under its export credit guarantee program for short-term credit extended to finance the export sales of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Agriculture may not charge an origination fee with respect to any credit guarantee transaction under the Export Credit Guarantee Program (GSM-102) in excess of an amount equal to one percent of the credit extended under the transaction.

COOPERATOR MARKET DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

SEC. 1126. (a) It is the sense of Congress that the cooperator market development program of the Foreign Agricultural Service should be continued to help develop new markets and expand and maintain existing markets for United States agricultural commodities, using nonprofit agricultural trade organizations to the maximum extent practicable.

(b) The cooperator market development program shall be exempt from the requirements of Circular A 110 issued by the Office of Management and Budget.

(c) Subclause (B) of section 1207(a)(5) of the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 (7 U.S.C. 1736m(a)(5)(B)) is amended to read as follows: "(B) funding an export market development program for value-added farm products and processed foods at a higher funding level than that provided during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985; and".

DEVELOPMENT AND EXPANSION OF MARKETS FOR UNITED STATES AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

SEC. 1127. (a)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Agriculture (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall formulate and carry out a program under which agricultural commodities and the products thereof acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation are provided to United States exporters, users, and processors and foreign purchasers at no cost to encourage the development, maintenance, and expansion of export markets for United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof, including value-added or high-value agricultural products produced in the United States.

(2)(A) The term "agricultural commodities", as used in this section in referring to United States agricultural commodities, includes, but is not limited to—

(i) wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, and dairy products produced in the United States;

(ii) any other agricultural commodity produced in the United States that is determined by the Secretary of Agriculture to be in surplus supply and that can be purchased with funds available under section 32 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved August 24, 1935; and

(iii) products of the commodities and products described in clauses (i) and (ii) that are processed in the United States.

(B) United States agricultural commodities, as described in clause (ii) of subparagraph (A), may not be purchased with funds available under section 32 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved August 24, 1935, for the sole purpose of use under the program under this section; and such commodities, or products thereof, may not be furnished to a United States user, exporter, processor, or foreign purchaser under the program under this section except by mutual agreement of such user, exporter, processor, or purchaser and the Secretary.

(3) In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary may provide such commodities in order to make United States commodities more competitive and shall, to the extent necessary, provide such commodities and products—

(A) to counter or offset—

(i) the adverse effect on the export of a United States agricultural commodity or the product thereof of a subsidy (as defined in paragraph (4)) or other unfair trade practice of a foreign country that directly or indirectly benefits producers, processors, or exporters of agricultural commodities in such foreign country;

(ii) the adverse effects of United States agricultural price support levels that are temporarily above the export prices offered by overseas competitors in export markets; or

(iii) fluctuations in the exchange rate of the United States dollar against other major currencies; and

(B) in conjunction with an intermediate export credit program conducted by the Commodity Credit Corporation—

(i) for the export sale of breeding animals (including, but not limited to, cattle, swine, sheep, and poultry), including the cost of freight from the United States to designated points of entry in other nations; and

(ii) for the establishment of facilities in the importing nation to improve handling, marketing, processing, storage, or distribution of imported agricultural commodities (through the use of local currency generated from the import and sale of United States agricultural commodities or the products thereof to finance all or part of such facilities).

(4) As used in paragraph (3)(A)(i), the term "subsidy" includes an export subsidy, tax rebate on exports, financial assistance on preferential terms, financial assistance for operating losses, assumption of costs or expenses of production, processing, or distribution, a differential export tax or duty exemption, a domestic consumption quota, or other method of furnishing or ensuring the availability of raw materials at artificially low prices.

(b) In carrying out the program established by this section, the Secretary of Agriculture—

(1) shall take such action as may be necessary to ensure that the program provides equal treatment to domestic and foreign purchasers and users of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof in any case in which the importation of a manufactured product made, in whole or in part, from a commodity or the product thereof made available for export under this section would place domestic users of the commodity or the product thereof at a competitive disadvantage;

(2) shall, to the extent that agricultural commodities and the products thereof are to be provided to foreign purchasers during any fiscal year, consider for participation all interested foreign purchasers, giving priority to those who have traditionally purchased United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof and who continue to purchase such commodities and the products thereof on an annual basis in quantities greater than the level of purchases in a previous representative period;

(3) shall encourage increased use and avoid displacing usual marketings of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof;

(4) shall take reasonable precautions to prevent the resale or transshipment to other countries, or use for other than domestic use in the importing country, of agricultural commodities or the products thereof the export of which is assisted under this section; and

(5) may provide to a United States exporter, user, processor, or foreign purchaser, under the program, agricultural commodities of a kind different than the agricultural commodity involved in the transaction for which assistance under this section is being provided.

(c)(1) If a country does not meet the financial qualifications for export credit or credit guarantees provided by the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Secretary may provide to such country agricultural commodities and the products thereof acquired by the Corporation to the extent necessary to reduce the cost to such country of purchasing United States agricultural commodities and to allow such country to meet such qualifications.

(2) The Secretary shall review and adjust annually the quantity of commodities provided to a country under paragraph (1) in order to encourage such country to place greater reliance on increased use of commercial trade to meet the qualifications referred to in paragraph (1).

(d)(1) In carrying out this section, the Secretary may make green dollar export certificates available to commercial exporters of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof.

(2) The Secretary shall make such certificates available under such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines appropriate.

(3) The amount of such certificates to be made available to an exporter may be determined—

(A) on the basis of competitive bids submitted by exporters; or

(B) by announcement of the Secretary.

(4)(A) An exporter may redeem a green dollar export certificate for commodities owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(B) For purposes of redeeming such certificates, the Secretary may establish values for such commodities that are different than the acquisition prices of such commodities.

(5) Such certificates—

(A) may be transferred among commercial exporters of United States agricultural commodities; and

(B) shall be redeemed within 6 months after the date of issuance.

(e) The Secretary of Agriculture shall carry out the program established by this section through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(f) Any price restrictions that otherwise may be applicable to dispositions of agricultural commodities owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not apply to agricultural commodities provided under this section.

(g) The program established under this section shall be in addition to, and not in place of, any authority granted to the Secretary of Agriculture or the Commodity Credit Corporation under any other provision of law.

(h) The authority provided under this section shall terminate on September 30, 1990.

(i) During the period beginning October 1, 1985, and ending September 30, 1988, the Secretary shall use agricultural commodities and the products thereof referred to in subsection (a) that are equal in value to not less than $2,000,000,000 to carry out this section. To the maximum extent practicable, such commodities shall be used in equal amounts during each of the years in such period.

POULTRY, BEEF AND PORK MEATS AND MEAT-FOOD PRODUCTS, EQUITABLE TREATMENT

SEC. 1128. In the case of any program operated by the Secretary of Agriculture during the years 1986 through 1989, for the purpose of encouraging or enhancing commercial sales in foreign export markets of agricultural products or commodities produced in the United States, which program includes the payment of a bonus or incentive (in cash, commodities, or other benefits) provided to the purchaser, the Secretary shall seek to expend annually at least 15 per centum of the total funds available (or 15 per centum of the value of any commodities employed to encourage such sales) for program activities to likewise encourage and enhance the export sales of poultry, beef or pork meat and meat products.

PILOT BARTER PROGRAM FOR EXCHANGE OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR STRATEGIC MATERIALS

SEC. 1129. Section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(d)(1) The Secretary shall establish and carry out a pilot program under which strategic or other materials that the United States does not produce domestically in amounts sufficient for its requirements and for which national stockpile or reserve goals established by law are unmet shall be acquired in exchange for commodities meeting the criteria specified in subsection (a).

"(2) The program established under paragraph (1) shall be carried out through agreements with at least two countries.

"(3) In establishing the pilot program under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall give priority to—

"(A) the acquisition of materials that involve less risk of loss through deterioration and have lower storage costs than the agricultural commodities or products for which they are exchanged; and

"(B) nations with food and currency reserve shortages.

"(4) To the extent practical, the Secretary shall use private channels of commerce to consummate any exchange of commodities for materials under the program.

"(5) Any materials acquired under the programs shall be held by the Commodity Credit Corporation and may be transferred, on a reimbursable basis, to any Department or agency of the United States that has responsibility for any reserve or other need for the material. Any material acquired, in excess of any required reserve, may be sold by the Corporation to the extent authorized by the Secretary taking into consideration any effect that such sale may have on the commercial market of such material.

"(6) The program established by the Secretary shall be carried out during the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, and September 30, 1987, and the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress, not later than 60 days after the end of each such fiscal year with respect to the operation of the program.".

(B) other trade practices that may impede the entry of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof into such countries; and

(2) identify opportunities for the export of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof to such countries.

(b) The Secretary shall annually compile the information contained in such reports and make such information available to Congress, the Agricultural Policy Advisory Committee, and the agricultural technical advisory committees established under section 135 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2155), and other interested parties.

(B) are inconsistent with the Agreement on Interpretation and Application of Articles VI, XVI, and XXIII of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade,

(C) nullify or impair benefits accruing to the United States under international agreements, or

(D) cause serious prejudice to the interests of the United States; and

STUDY TO REDUCE FOREIGN EXCHANGE RISK

SEC. 1134. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility, practicability and cost of implementing a program to reduce the risk of foreign exchange fluctuations that is incurred by the purchasers of United States agricultural exports under United States export credit promotion programs. The purpose of the study is to examine whether the GSM-102 program and all other United States export credit initiatives relating to agricultural exports would be enhanced by the United States assuming the foreign exchange risk of the buyer which resulted from a rise in the value of the United States dollar compared to the trade-weighted index of the dollar. The index referred to is the "trade-weighted index" published by the Department of Commerce as a measurement of the relative buying power of the dollar compared to the currencies of nations trading with the United States. The elements of the program to be considered in this study would include the following:

(1) On the date a foreign buyer receives GSM-102 or other credit for purposes of purchasing United States agricultural products, the maximum loan repayment exchange rate would be tied to the trade-weighted value of the United States dollar on the same date.

(2) If in the future the United States dollar gains in strength (a higher trade-weighted index), the buyer would continue to repay the loan at the lower value fixed at the time the GSM-102 credit was extended.

(3) If the United States dollar falls in value during the term of the repayment period, the foreign buyer could calculate his repayment on the lower dollar value.

(b) Not later than six months after the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall report the results of such study to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

Subtitle C—Export Transportation of Agricultural Commodities

FINDINGS AND DECLARATIONS

SEC. 1141. (a) The Congress finds and declares—

(1) that a productive and healthy agricultural industry and a strong and active United States maritime industry are vitally important to the economic well-being and national security objectives of our Nation;

(2) that both industries must compete in international markets increasingly dominated by foreign trade barriers and the subsidization practices of foreign governments; and

(3) that increased agricultural exports and the utilization of United States merchant vessels contribute positively to the United States balance of trade and generate employment opportunities in the United States.

(b) It is therefore declared to be the purpose and policy of the Congress in this subtitle—

(1) to enable the Department of Agriculture to plan its export programs effectively, by clarifying the ocean transportation requirements applicable to such programs;

(2) to take immediate and positive steps to promote the growth of the cargo carrying capacity of the United States merchant marine;

(3) to expand international trade in United States agricultural commodities and products and to develop, maintain, and expand markets for United States agricultural exports;

(4) to improve the efficiency of administration of both the commodity purchasing and selling and the ocean transportation activities associated with export programs sponsored by the Department of Agriculture;

(5) to stimulate and promote both the agricultural and maritime industries of the United States and encourage cooperative efforts by both industries to address their common problems; and

(5) to provide in the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, for the appropriate disposition of these findings and purposes.

EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS FROM THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE CARGO PREFERENCE LAWS

"(4) under which credit or credit guarantees for not to exceed 3 years are extended by the Commodity Credit Corporation to finance or guarantee export sales of United States agricultural commodities or the products thereof; or

"(5) under which agricultural commodities or the products thereof owned or controlled by or under loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation are exchanged or bartered for materials, goods, equipment, or services, but only if such materials, goods, equipment, or services are of a value at least equivalent to the value of the agricultural commodities or products exchanged or bartered therefor (determined on the basis of prevailing world market prices at the time of the exchange or barter), but nothing in this subsection shall be construed to exempt from the cargo preference provisions referred to in section 901b any requirement otherwise applicable to the materials, goods, equipment, or services imported under any such transaction.

"SHIPMENT REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN EXPORTS SPONSORED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

"SEC. 901b. "(2)(A) In order to provide for effective and equitable administration of the cargo preference laws the calendar year for the purpose of compliance with minimum percentage requirements shall be for 12 month periods commencing April 1, 1986.

"(B) In addition, the Secretary of Transportation, in administering this subsection and section 901(b), and consistent with these sections, shall take such steps as may be necessary and practicable without detriment to any port range to preserve during calendar years 1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989 the percentage share, or metric tonnage of bagged, processed, or fortified commodities, whichever is lower, experienced in calendar year 1984 as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, of waterborne cargoes exported from Great Lake ports pursuant to title II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1721 et seq.).

"(d) As used in subsection (b), the term 'export activity' does not include inspection or weighing activities, other activities carried out for health or safety purposes, or technical assistance provided in the handling of commercial transactions.

"(e)(1) The prevailing world market price as to agricultural commodities or the products thereof shall be determined under sections 901a through 901d in accordance with procedures established by the Secretary of Agriculture. The Secretary shall prescribe such procedures by regulation, with notice and opportunity for public comment, pursuant to section 553 of title 5, United States Code.

"(2) In the event that a determination of the prevailing world market price of any other type of materials, goods, equipment, or service is required in order to determine whether a barter or exchange transaction is subject to subsection (b)(6) or (b)(7), such determination shall be made by the Secretary of Agriculture in consultation with the heads of other appropriate Federal agencies.

"MINIMUM TONNAGE

"SEC. 901c. (a)(1) For fiscal year 1986 and each fiscal year thereafter, the minimum quantity of agricultural commodities to be exported under programs subject to section 901b shall be the average of the tonnage exported under such programs during the base period defined in subsection (b), discarding the high and low years.

"(2) The President may waive the minimum quantity for any fiscal year required under paragraph (1) if he determines and reports to the Congress, together with his reasons, that such quantity cannot be effectively used for the purposes of such programs or, based on a certification by the Secretary of Agriculture, that the commodities are not available for reasons which include the unavailability of funds.

"(b) The base period utilized for computing the minimum tonnage quantity referred to in subsection (a) for any fiscal year shall be the five fiscal years beginning with the sixth fiscal year preceding such fiscal year and ending with the second fiscal year preceding such fiscal year.

"FINANCING OF SHIPMENT OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES IN UNITED STATES-FLAG VESSELS

"SEC. 901d. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall finance any increased ocean freight charges incurred in any fiscal year which result from the application of section 901b.

"(b) If in any fiscal year the total cost of ocean freight and ocean freight differential for which obligations are incurred by the Department of Agriculture and the Commodity Credit Corporation on exports of agricultural commodities and products thereof under the agricultural export programs specified in section 901b(b) exceeds 20 percent of the value of such commodities and products and the cost of such ocean freight and ocean freight differential on which obligations are incurred by such Department and Corporation during such year, the Secretary of Transportation shall reimburse the Department of Agriculture and the Commodity Credit Corporation for the amount of such excess. For the purpose of this subsection, commodities shipped from the inventory of the Commodity Credit Corporation shall be valued as provided in section 403(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1733(b)).

"(c) For the purpose of meeting those expenses required to be assumed under subsections (a) and (b), the Secretary of Transportation shall issue to the Secretary of the Treasury such obligations in such forms and denominations, bearing such maturities and subject to such terms and conditions, as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such obligations shall be at a rate of interest as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods of maturity comparable to the average maturities of such obligations during the month preceding the issuance of such obligations of the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase any obligations of the Secretary of Transportation issued under this subsection and, for the purpose of purchasing such obligations, the Secretary of the Treasury may use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under chapter 31 of title 31, United States Code, after the date of the enactment of this Act and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such chapter are extended to include any purchases of the obligations of the Secretary of Transportation under this subsection. All redemptions and purchases by the Secretary of the Treasury of the obligations of the Secretary of Transportation shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States.

"(d) There is authorized to be appropriated annually for each fiscal year, commencing with the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1986, an amount sufficient to reimburse the Secretary of Transportation for the costs, including administrative expenses and the principal and interest due on the obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury incurred under this section. Reimbursement of any such costs shall be made with appropriated funds, as provided in this section, rather than through cancellation of notes.

"(e) Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, in the event that the Secretary of Transportation is unable to obtain the funds necessary to finance the increased ocean freight charges resulting from the requirements of subsections (a) and (b) and section 901b(a), the Secretary of Transportation shall so notify the Congress within 10 working days of the discovery of such insufficiency.

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 901e. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of sections 901a through 901k.

"TERMINATION OF SECTIONS 901A THROUGH 901K

"SEC. 901f. The operation of sections 901a through 901k shall terminate 90 days after the date on which a notification is made pursuant to section 901d(e), except with respect to shipments of agricultural commodities and products subject to contracts entered into before the expiration of such 90-day period, unless within such 90-day period the Secretary of Transportation proclaims that funds are available to finance increased freight charges resulting from the requirements of sections 901b(a) and 901d (a) and (b). In the event of termination under this section, nothing in sections 901a through 901d shall be construed as exempting export activities from or subjecting export activities to the cargo preference laws except to the extent those activities are exempt under section 4(b) of Public Law 95-501 (7 U.S.C. 1707a(b). In the event of termination under this section, the 50-percent requirement in section 901(b) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 shall be in full effect.

"NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMISSION ON AGRICULTURAL EXPORT TRANSPORTATION POLICY

"SEC. 901g. (a) There is hereby established an advisory commission to be known as the National Advisory Commission on Agricultural Export Transportation Policy (hereafter in this section through section 901j referred to as the 'Commission').

"(b)(1) The Commission shall be composed of 16 members.

"(2) Eight members of the Commission shall be appointed by the President.

"(3) The chairman and ranking minority members of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, of the Subcommittee on Merchant Marine of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, of the House Committee on Agriculture, and of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries shall serve as members of the Commission.

"(4)(A) Four of the members appointed by the President shall be representatives of agricultural producers, cooperatives, merchandisers, and processors of agricultural commodities.

"(c)(1) The members of the Commission shall elect a Chairman from among its members.

"(2) Any vacancy in the Commission does not affect its powers but shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made.

"DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION

"SEC. 901h. (a) It shall be the duty of the Commission to conduct a comprehensive study and review of the ocean transportation of agricultural exports subject to the cargo preference laws referred to in section 901b and to make recommendations to the President and the Congress for improving the efficiency of such transportation on United States-flag vessels in order to reduce the costs incurred by the United States in connection with such transportation. In carrying out such study and review, the Commission shall consider the extent to which any unfair or discriminatory practices of foreign governments increase the cost to the United States of transporting agricultural commodities subject to such cargo preference laws.

"(b)(1) The Commission shall submit an interim report to the President and the Congress not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this subtitle and such other interim reports as the Commission considers advisable.

"(2) The Commission shall submit a final report containing its findings and recommendations to the President and the Congress not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this subtitle. The report shall include recommendations for any changes in the provisions of paragraph (1) that would help assure that the cost of ocean freight and ocean freight differential incurred by the Department of Agriculture and the Commodity Credit Corporation on the agricultural export programs specified in section 901b, is not increased above historical levels as a result of the extra demand for United States-flag vessels caused by section 901b.

"(3) Sixty days after the submission of the final report, the Commission shall cease to exist.

"(c) The Commission shall include in its reports submitted pursuant to subsection (b) recommendations concerning the feasibility and desirability of achieving the following goals with respect to the ocean transportation of agricultural commodities subject to the cargo preference laws referred to in section 901b:

"(1) Ensuring that the timing of commodity purchase agreements entered into by the United States in connection with the export of such commodities, and the methods of implementing such agreements, will minimize cost to the United States.

"(2) Ensuring that shipments of such commodities are made on the most modern and efficient United States-flag vessels available.

"(3) Ensuring that shipments of such commodities are made under the most advantageous terms available, including—

"(A) charters for full shiploads;

"(B) charters for intermediate or long term;

"(C) charters for consecutive voyages and contracts of affreightment; and

"(D) adjustment of rates in the event that vessels used for shipments of such commodities also carry cargoes on return voyages.

"(4) Reduction and elimination of impediments, including delays in port, to the efficient loading and operation of the vessels employed for shipment of such commodities.

"(5) Utilization of open and competitive bidding for the ocean transportation of such commodities.

"INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE TO BE FURNISHED TO THE COMMISSION

"SEC. 901i. (a) Each department, agency, and instrumentality of the United States, including independent agencies, shall furnish to the Commission, upon request made by the Chairman, such statistical data, reports, and other information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out its functions.

"(b) The Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Transportation shall make available to the Commission such staff, personnel, and administrative services as may reasonably be required to carry out the Commission's duties.

"COMPENSATION AND TRAVEL AND SUBSISTENCE EXPENSES OF COMMISSION MEMBERS

"SEC. 901j. Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation in addition to compensation they may otherwise be entitled to receive as employees of the United States or as Members of Congress, but shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of duties vested in the Commission.

Subtitle E—Trade Practices

TOBACCO PESTICIDE RESIDUES

SEC. 1161. (a) Section 213 of the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 (7 U.S.C. 511r) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law:

"(1)(A) All flue-cured or burley tobacco offered for importation into the United States shall be accompanied by a certification by the importer, in such form as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, that the tobacco does not contain any prohibited residue of any pesticide that has been canceled, suspended, revoked, or otherwise prohibited under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 135 et seq.). Any flue-cured or burley tobacco that is not accompanied by such certification shall be inspected by the Secretary at the point of entry to determine whether that tobacco meets the pesticide residue requirements. Subsection (d) of this section shall apply with respect to fees and charges imposed to cover the costs of such inspection.

"(B) Any tobacco that is determined by the Secretary not to meet the pesticide residue requirements shall not be permitted entry into the United States.

"(C) The customs fraud provisions under section 592 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended (19 U.S.C. 1592), and criminal fraud provisions under section 1001 of title 18, United States Code, shall apply with respect to the certification requirement in subparagraph (A).

"(2) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for pesticide residue standards with respect to pesticides that are cancelled, suspended, revoked, or otherwise prohibited under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 135 et seq.), that shall apply to flue-cured and burley tobacco, whether domestically produced or imported.

"(3) The Secretary, to such extent and at such times as the Secretary determines appropriate, shall sample and test flue-cured and burley tobacco offered for importation or for sale in the United States to determine whether it conforms with the pesticide residue requirements. The Secretary shall by regulation impose fees and charges for such inspections.

"(4) If the Secretary determines, as a result of tests conducted under paragraph (3), that certain flue-cured or burley tobacco offered for importation does not meet the requirements of this subsection, then such tobacco shall not be permitted entry into the United States.

"(5)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), if the Secretary determines that domestically produced flue-cured or burley tobacco does not meet the requirements of this section, such tobacco may not be moved in commerce among the States and shall be destroyed by the Secretary.

"(B) This paragraph shall apply only to tobacco produced after the date of enactment of this provision that receives price support under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1281 et seq.) or the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.).".

(b) The second sentence of section 213(d) of such Act is amended by inserting "and subsection (e)" after "subsection (a)(1)".

ASSESSMENT OF EXPORT DISPLACEMENT

SEC. 1162. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture shall assess each program, project, or activity administered by the Secretary or the Department of Agriculture that—

(1) provides assistance for establishing, expanding, or facilitating the production, marketing, or use of any agricultural commodity in a foreign country; and

(2) the Secretary determines is likely to have a detrimental impact on efforts to promote the export of United States agricultural commodities; in order to determine if such program, project, or activity is likely to have such a detrimental impact.

(b) The Secretary shall provide the results of the assessment required under subsection (a)—

(1) in the case of current programs, projects, or activities, in a report made to the Congress not later than one year from the date of enactment of this section; and

(2) in the case of programs, projects, or activities undertaken after the date of enactment of this section, on a regular basis.

EXPORT SALES OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

SEC. 1163. (a) In each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1988, the Secretary of Agriculture shall sell for export, at such prices as the Secretary determines appropriate, not less than 150,000 metric tons of dairy products owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation, of which not less than 100,000 metric tons shall be butter and not less than 20,000 metric tons shall be cheese, if that disposition of such commodities will not interfere with the usual marketings of the United States nor disrupt world prices of agricultural commodities and normal patterns of commercial trade.

(b) Such sales shall be made through the Commodity Credit Corporation under existing authority available to the Secretary or the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(c) Through September 30, 1988, the Secretary shall report semiannually to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate on the volume of sales made under this section.

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES

SEC. 1164. The Congress finds that—

(1) United States producers and processors of citrus, wheat flour, poultry, canned fruits, and raisins have filed petitions under section 302 of the Trade Act of 1974 alleging that the subsidies and discriminatory tariffs of the European Communities are inconsistent with the principles and terms of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (hereafter referred to in this section as the "GATT") and have placed United States exporters at a competitive disadvantage;

(2) throughout the past decade, the European Communities has repeatedly rebuffed extensive United States efforts to resolve these matters through bilateral consultations and multilateral negotiations, as well as through consultations under the provisions of the GATT;

(3) after many years of frustrated discussions, the United States had no choice but to invoke the dispute settlement procedures of the GATT as the only remaining means of seeking redress for American producers and processors;

(4) investigatory panels, established by the GATT to review United States complaints with respect to citrus, canned fruits, and raisins, concluded that European Communities subsidies and discriminatory tariffs had nullified and impaired rights of United States exporters and were in violation of the GATT and recommended that the European Communities take necessary steps to rectify the matters;

(5) the European Communities has effectively and repeatedly prevented adoption by the GATT of each of these reports, most recently, the favorable report involving the 15-year-old citrus complaint;

(6) on May 1, 1985, the President concluded that the GATT dispute settlement process with respect to the citrus complaint was terminated and, pursuant to section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974, the President had to consider a subsequent course of action to redress the injury to United States citrus exporters;

(7) on June 20, 1985, the President announced that a reasonable and appropriate course of action in response to the unwillingness of the European Communities to implement the unanimous finding of the GATT panel or to negotiate a mutually acceptable resolution of the citrus complaint is to withdraw an equivalent amount of concessions from imported European Communities pasta products and, in response, the European Communities notified the United States that the European Communities would retaliate by increasing the European Communities duties on United States lemon and walnut imports;

(8) on July 19, 1985, the United States and the European Communities agreed to suspend until October 31, 1985, the tariff increases, in order to provide the European Communities with additional time to resolve the citrus complaint; and

(9) despite this suspension, the European Communities has failed to present to the United States an acceptable proposal to resolve the citrus complaint, and effective November 1, 1985, the United States reinstated the pasta tariff increase, and in turn, the European Communities reinstated the lemon and walnut tariff increase.

(b) The President shall take all appropriate and feasible action within the power of the Presidency (including, but not limited to, the actions described in section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411)) to—

(1) ensure a prompt and satisfactory resolution of all complaints regarding subsidies and discriminatory tariffs of the European Communities which—

(A) are set forth in petitions filed under section 302 of the Trade Act of 1974 by United States exporters of citrus, wheat flour, poultry, canned fruits, and raisins, and

(B) are pending before the GATT on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(2) balance the level of concessions in the trade between the United States and the European Communities.

THAI RICE

SEC. 1165. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) Rice ranks 9th among major domestic field crops in value of production;

(2) Rice accounts for about 5 percent of the value of major field crops produced in the United States;

(3) The value of domestic rice production annually is over $1,500,000,000;

(4) Ending stocks for rice have sharply increased since 1980;

(5) The projected 1985–1986 carryover of rice as a percentage of annual use is 62 percent;

(6) Between 1980 and 1983, rice stocks rose and prices fell, pushing rice program costs from less than one-tenth to over nine-tenths of the value of United States rice production;

(7) Over the last several years, the percentage of world rice exports from the United States has fallen from a high of 25 percent to 18 percent in 1985;

(8) In the last several years, Thailand has become the largest rice exporter in the world, accounting for 30 percent of the world market;

(9) Thai rice imports into the United States have displaced normal sales of United States rice and have increased Government costs;

(10) In 1983, the United States imported 33.2 million pounds of rice from Thailand, in 1984 the United States imported 51.3 million pounds of rice (an increase of 53 percent), and in the first six months of 1985, rice imports from Thailand to the United States have already reached 58.3 million pounds; and

(11) A petition has been filed with the Department of Commerce asking that countervailing duties be imposed upon imports of Thai rice into the United States.

(b) Based upon these findings, it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) our domestic rice industry is of vital importance and must be protected from unfair foreign competition; and

(2) the Secretary of Commerce should give immediate consideration to the countervailing duty petition referred to in subsection (a)(11).

END USERS OF IMPORTED TOBACCO

SEC. 1166. Section 213 of the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 (7 U.S.C. 511r) is amended by adding after the subsection added by section 1161 of this Act the following:

"(f)(1) The certification required under subsection (e)(1) of this section shall also include the identification of any and all end users of such tobacco of which the importer has knowledge. Any flue-cured or burley tobacco permitted entry into the United States must be accompanied by a written identification of any and all end users of such tobacco. In cases in which the importer has no knowledge of the identity of an end user, the importer shall identify any and all purchasers to whom the importer expects to transfer such imported tobacco. The importer shall file with the Department of Agriculture an amended statement if, at any time after the time of entry of such tobacco imports, the importer has knowledge of any additional purchaser or end user. In those cases in which the importer has not identified all end users of such imported tobacco, the Secretary of Agriculture shall take all steps available to ascertain the identity of any and all such end users, including requesting such information from purchasers of such imported tobacco. Domestic purchasers of imported tobacco shall be required to supply any relevant information to the Department of Agriculture upon demand under this subsection.

"(2) The Secretary shall provide to the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, and the House Committee on Agriculture, on or before April 1, 1986, a report on the implementation of this authority to identify each end user and purchaser of imported tobacco. Such report shall identify the end users and purchasers of imported tobacco and the quantity, in pounds, bought by such end user or purchaser, as well as all steps taken by the Department of Agriculture to ascertain such identities. The Secretary shall provide an additional report, beginning November 15, 1986, and annual reports thereafter, on the implementation of this authority.

"(3) As used in this subsection, the term 'end user of imported tobacco' means—

"(A) a domestic manufacturer of cigarettes or other tobacco products;

"(B) an entity that mixes, blends, processes, alters in any manner, or stores, imported tobacco for export; and

"(C) any other individual that the Secretary may identify as making use of imported tobacco for the production of tobacco products.".

BARTER OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL MATERIALS

SEC. 1167. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the Commodity Credit Corporation, the General Services Administration, and the Department of Agriculture have authority to barter or exchange agricultural commodities for strategic and critical materials for the national defense stockpile;

(2) from 1950 to 1973, the Department of Agriculture conducted a highly successful barter program using agricultural commodities to acquire strategic and critical materials;

(3) private commercial firms in the United States have entered into effective barter agreements with foreign governments or private parties in foreign countries to barter or exchange commodities and services to supplement customary commercial transactions in international markets;

(4) barter can be an effective secondary method of reducing excess supplies of agricultural commodities and adding needed strategic and critical materials to the national defense stockpile;

(5) barter can be used to help overcome certain currency exchange and balance-of-trade problems and to develop new markets for United States agricultural products;

(6) barter can be used to promote United States foreign policy interests; and

(7) several nations are potential partners in a revival of a coherent and well-managed government barter program.

(b) Section 4(h) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714b(h)) is amended—

(1) in the fourth sentence—

(A) by striking out "is authorized," and inserting in lieu thereof "shall, to the maximum extent practicable, in consultation with the Secretary of State, and"; and

(B) by striking out "to";

(2) in the fifth sentence, by striking out "normal commercial trade channels shall be utilized and priority shall be given" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Secretary shall: (1) use normal commercial trade channels; (2) take action to avoid displacing usual marketings of United States agricultural commodities and the products thereof; (3) take reasonable precautions to prevent the resale or transshipment to other countries, or use for other than domestic use in the importing country, of agricultural commodities used for such exchange; and (4) give priority";

(3) by inserting after the fifth sentence the following new sentence: "The Corporation may solicit bids from, and utilize, private trading firms to effect such exchange of goods.";

(4) in the eighth sentence (as amended by clause (3)), by striking out "when" and inserting in lieu thereof "in the same fiscal year such materials are"; and

(5) by inserting after the eighth sentence (as amended by clause (3)) the following new sentence: "If the volume of petroleum products (including crude oil) stored in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve is less than the level prescribed under section 154 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6234), the Corporation shall, to the maximum extent practicable and with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, make available annually to the Secretary of Energy, upon the request of the Secretary of Energy, a quantity of agricultural products owned by the Corporation with a market value at the time of such request of at least $300,000,000 for use by the Secretary of Energy in acquiring petroleum products (including crude oil) produced abroad for placement in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve through an exchange of such agricultural products. The terms and conditions of each such exchange, including provisions for full reimbursement to the Commodity Credit Corporation, shall be determined by the Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of Agriculture.".

(c) Section 310 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1727g) is amended by inserting after the second sentence the following new sentence: "To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall solicit bids from, and utilize, private trading firms to arrange or make barters or exchanges for strategic or other materials under clause (a).".

(d)(1) The Secretary of Agriculture shall encourage United States exporters of agricultural commodities and the products thereof to barter such commodities and products for foreign products needed by such exporters.

(2) The Secretary shall provide technical advice and assistance relating to the barter of agricultural commodities and the products thereof to any United States exporter who requests such advice or assistance.

(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the land capability class or rate of erosion for a field shall be that determined by the Secretary to be the predominant class or rate of erosion under regulations issued by the Secretary.

(8) The term "hydric soil" means soil that, in its undrained condition, is saturated, flooded, or ponded long enough during a growing season to develop an anaerobic condition that supports the growth and regeneration of hydrophytic vegetation.

(9) The term "hydrophytic vegetation" means a plant growing in—

(A) water; or

(B) a substrate that is at least periodically deficient in oxygen during a growing season as a result of excessive water content.

(10) The term "in-kind commodities" means commodities that are normally produced on land that is the subject of an agreement entered into under subtitle D.

(11) The term "rental payment" means a payment made by the Secretary to an owner or operator of a farm or ranch containing highly erodible cropland to compensate the owner or operator for retiring such land from crop production and placing such land in the conservation acreage reserve in accordance with subtitle D.

(12) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Agriculture.

(13) The term "shelterbelt" means a vegetative barrier with a linear configuration composed of trees, shrubs, and other approved perennial vegetation.

(14) The term "State" means each of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands of the United States, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, or the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(15) The term "vegetative cover" means—

(A) perennial grasses, legumes, forbs, or shrubs with an expected life span of 5 or more years; or

(B) trees.

(16) The term "wetland", except when such term is part of the term "converted wetland", means land that has a predominance of hydric soils and that is inundated or saturated by surface or groundwater at a frequency and duration sufficient to support, and that under normal circumstances does support, a prevalence of hydrophytic vegetation typically adapted for life in saturated soil conditions.

(b) The Secretary shall develop—

(1) criteria for the identification of hydric soils and hydrophytic vegetation; and

(2) lists of such soils and such vegetation.

SUBTITLE B—HIGHLY ERODIBLE LAND CONSERVATION

(E) a loan made, insured, or guaranteed under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.) or any other provision of law administered by the Farmers Home Administration, if the Secretary determines that the proceeds of such loan will be used for a purpose that will contribute to excessive erosion of highly erodible land; or

(2) a payment made under section 4 or 5 of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714b or 714c) during such crop year for the storage of an agricultural commodity acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

EXEMPTIONS

SEC. 1212. (a)(1) During the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending on the later of January 1, 1990, or the date that is 2 years after the date land on which a crop of an agricultural commodity is produced was mapped by the Soil Conservation Service for purposes of classifying such land under the land capability classification system in effect on the date of enactment of this Act, except as provided in paragraph (2), no person shall become ineligible under section 1211 for program loans, payments, and benefits as the result of the production of a crop of an agricultural commodity on any land that was—

(A) cultivated to produce any of the 1981 through 1985 crops of an agricultural commodity; or

(B) set aside, diverted or otherwise not cultivated under a program administered by the Secretary for any such crops to reduce production of an agricultural commodity.

(2) If, as of January 1, 1990, or 2 years after the Soil Conservation Service has completed a soil survey for the farm, whichever is later, a person is actively applying a conservation plan based on the local Soil Conservation Service technical guide and approved by the local soil conservation district, in consultation with the Secretary, or by the Secretary, such person shall have until January 1, 1995, to comply with the plan without being subject to program ineligibility.

(b) No person shall become ineligible under section 1211 for program loans, payments, and benefits as the result of the production of a crop of an agricultural commodity—

(1) planted before the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) planted during any crop year beginning before the date of enactment of this Act;

(3) on highly erodible land in an area—

(A) within a conservation district, under a conservation system that has been approved by a conservation district after the district has determined that the conservation system is in conformity with technical standards set forth in the Soil Conservation Service technical guide for such district; or

(B) not within a conservation district, under a conservation system determined by the Secretary to be adequate for the production of such agricultural commodity on any highly erodible land subject to this title; or

(4) on highly erodible land that is planted in reliance on a determination by the Soil Conservation Service that such land was not highly erodible land, except that this paragraph shall not apply to any agricultural commodity that was planted on any land after the Soil Conservation Service determines that such land is highly erodible land.

(c) Section 1211 shall not apply to a loan described in section 1211 made before the date of enactment of this Act.

SOIL SURVEYS

SEC. 1213. The Secretary shall, as soon as is practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, complete soil surveys on those private lands that do not have a soil survey suitable for use in determining the land capability class for purposes of this subtitle. In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall, insofar as possible, concentrate on those localities where significant amounts of highly erodible land are being converted to the production of agricultural commodities.

SUBTITLE C—WETLAND CONSERVATION

PROGRAM INELIGIBILITY

SEC. 1221. Except as provided in section 1222, subject to subtitle E, and notwithstanding any other provision of law, following the date of enactment of this Act, any person who in any crop year produces an agricultural commodity on converted wetland shall be ineligible for—

(1) as to any commodity produced during that crop year by such person—

(A) any type of price support or payment made available under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.), the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.), or any other Act;

(E) a loan made, insured, or guaranteed under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.) or any other provision of law administered by the Farmers Home Administration, if the Secretary determines that the proceeds of such loan will be used for a purpose that will contribute to conversion of wetlands (other than as provided in this subtitle) to produce an agricultural commodity; or

(2) a payment made under section 4 or 5 of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714b or 714c) during such crop year for the storage of an agricultural commodity acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

EXEMPTIONS

SEC. 1222. (a) No person shall become ineligible under section 1221 for program loans, payments, and benefits as the result of the production of a crop of an agricultural commodity on—

(1) converted wetland if the conversion of such wetland was commenced before the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) an artificial lake, pond, or wetland created by excavating or diking non-wetland to collect and retain water for purposes such as water for livestock, fish production, irrigation (including subsurface irrigation), a settling basin, cooling, rice production, or flood control;

(b) Section 1221 shall not apply to a loan described in section 1221 made before the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) The Secretary may exempt a person from section 1221 for any action associated with the production of an agricultural commodity on converted wetland if the effect of such action, individually and in connection with all other similar actions authorized by the Secretary in the area, on the hydrological and biological aspect of wetland is minimal.

CONSULTATION WITH SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

SEC. 1223. The Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Interior on such determinations and actions as are necessary to carry out this subtitle, including—

(1) the identification of wetland;

(2) the determination of exemptions under section 1222; and

(3) the issuance of regulations under section 1244 to carry out this subtitle.

SUBTITLE D—CONSERVATION RESERVE

CONSERVATION RESERVE

SEC. 1231. (a) During the 1986 through 1990 crop years, the Secretary shall formulate and carry out a conservation acreage reserve program, in accordance with this subtitle, through contracts to assist owners and operators of highly erodible cropland in conserving and improving the soil and water resources of their farms or ranches.

(b) The Secretary shall enter into contracts with owners and operators of farms and ranches containing highly erodible cropland to place in the conservation reserve—

(1) during the 1986 crop year, not less than 5, nor more than 45, million acres;

(2) during the 1986 through 1987 crop years, a total of not less than 15, nor more than 45, million acres;

(3) during the 1986 through 1988 crop years, a total of not less than 25, nor more than 45, million acres;

(4) during the 1986 through 1989 crop years, a total of not less than 35, nor more than 45, million acres; and

(5) during the 1986 through 1990 crop years, a total of not less than 40, nor more than 45, million acres.

(c)(1)(A) Notwithstanding subsection (b), effective for each of the fiscal years 1986 through 1989, the Secretary may reduce by up to 25 percent the number of acres of highly erodible land required to be placed under contract during each fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the rental payments to be made under section 1233(b) on such acres are likely to be significantly lower in the succeeding year.

(B) Paragraph (A) shall not affect the requirements of paragraph (5) of subsection (b).

(2) The Secretary may include in the program established under this subtitle lands that are not highly erodible lands but that pose an off-farm environmental threat or, if permitted to remain in production, pose a threat of continued degradation of productivity due to soil salinity.

(d) Under the program established under this subtitle, the Secretary shall not place under contract more than 25 percent of the cropland in any one county, except that the Secretary may exceed the limitation established by this subsection in a county to the extent that the Secretary determines that such action would not adversely affect the local economy of such county.

(e) For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Secretary shall enter into contracts of not less than 10, nor more than 15, years.

DUTIES OF OWNERS AND OPERATORS

SEC. 1232. (a) Under the terms of a contract entered into under this subtitle, during the term of such contract, an owner or operator of a farm or ranch must agree—

(1) to implement a plan approved by the local conservation district (or in an area not located within a conservation district, a plan approved by the Secretary) for converting highly erodible cropland normally devoted to the production of an agricultural commodity on the farm or ranch to a less intensive use (as defined by the Secretary), such as pasture, permanent grass, legumes, forbs, shrubs, or trees, substantially in accordance with a schedule outlined in the plan;

(2) to place highly erodible cropland subject to the contract in the conservation acreage reserve established under this subtitle;

(3) not to use such land for agricultural purposes, except as permitted by the Secretary;

(4) to establish approved vegetative cover on such land;

(5) on the violation of a term or condition of the contract at any time the owner or operator has control of such land—

(A) to forfeit all rights to receive rental payments and cost sharing payments under the contract and to refund to the Secretary any rental payments and cost sharing payments received by the owner or operator under the contract, together with interest thereon as determined by the Secretary, if the Secretary, after considering the recommendations of the soil conservation district and the Soil Conservation Service, determines that such violation is of such nature as to warrant termination of the contract; or

(B) to refund to the Secretary, or accept adjustments to, the rental payments and cost sharing payments provided to the owner or operator, as the Secretary considers appropriate, if the Secretary determines that such violation does not warrant termination of the contract;

(6) on the transfer of the right and interest of the owner or operator in land subject to the contract—

(A) to forfeit all rights to rental payments and cost sharing payments under the contract; and

(B) to refund to the United States all rental payments and cost sharing payments received by the owner or operator, or accept such payment adjustments or make such refunds as the Secretary considers appropriate and consistent with the objectives of this subtitle, unless the transferee of such land agrees with the Secretary to assume all obligations of the contract;

(7) not to conduct any harvesting or grazing, nor otherwise make commercial use of the forage, on land that is subject to the contract, nor adopt any similar practice specified in the contract by the Secretary as a practice that would tend to defeat the purposes of the contract, except that the Secretary may permit harvesting or grazing or other commercial use of the forage on land that is subject to the contract in response to a drought or other similar emergency;

(8) not to conduct any planting of trees on land that is subject to the contract unless the contract specifies that the harvesting and commercial sale of trees such as Christmas trees are prohibited, nor otherwise make commercial use of trees on land that is subject to the contract unless it is expressly permitted in the contract, nor adopt any similar practice specified in the contract by the Secretary as a practice that would tend to defeat the purposes of the contract, except that no contract shall prohibit activities consistent with customary forestry practice, such as pruning, thinning, or stand improvement of trees, on lands converted to forestry use;

(9) not to adopt any practice specified by the Secretary in the contract as a practice that would tend to defeat the purposes of this subtitle; and

(10) to comply with such additional provisions as the Secretary determines are desirable and are included in the contract to carry out this subtitle or to facilitate the practical administration thereof.

(b) The plan referred to in subsection (a)(1)—

(1) shall set forth—

(A) the conservation measures and practices to be carried out by the owner or operator during the term of the contract; and

(B) the commercial use, if any, to be permitted on the land during such term; and

(2) may provide for the permanent retirement of any existing cropland base and allotment history for the land.

(c) To the extent practicable, not less than one eighth of the number of acres of land that is placed in the conservation reserve under this subtitle in each of the 1986 through 1990 crop years shall be devoted to trees.

DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY

SEC. 1233. In return for a contract entered into by an owner or operator under section 1232, the Secretary shall—

(1) share the cost of carrying out the conservation measures and practices set forth in the contract for which the Secretary determines that cost sharing is appropriate and in the public interest;

(2) for a period of years not in excess of the term of the contract, pay an annual rental payment in an amount necessary to compensate for—

(A) the conversion of highly erodible cropland normally devoted to the production of an agricultural commodity on a farm or ranch to a less intensive use; and

(B) the retirement of any cropland base and allotment history that the owner or operator agrees to retire permanently; and

(3) provide conservation technical assistance to assist the owner or operator in carrying out the contract.

PAYMENTS

SEC. 1234. (a) The Secretary shall provide payment for obligations incurred by the Secretary under a contract entered into under this subtitle—

(1) with respect to any cost-sharing payment obligation incurred by the Secretary, as soon as possible after the obligation is incurred; and

(2) with respect to any annual rental payment obligation incurred by the Secretary—

(A) as soon as practicable after October 1 of each calendar year; or

(B) at the discretion of the Secretary, at any time prior to such date during the year that the obligation is incurred.

(b) In making conservation payments to owners and operators under contracts entered into under this subtitle, the Secretary shall pay 50 percent of the cost of establishing conservation measures and practices set forth in such contracts for which the Secretary determines that cost-sharing is appropriate and in the public interest.

(c)(1) In determining the amount of annual rental payments to be paid to owners and operators for converting highly erodible cropland normally devoted to the production of an agricultural commodity to less intensive use, the Secretary may consider, among other things, the amount necessary to encourage owners or operators of highly erodible cropland to participate in the program established by this subtitle.

(2) The amounts payable to owners or operators in the form of rental payments under contracts entered into under this subtitle may be determined through—

(A) the submission of bids for such contracts by owners and operators in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe; or

(B) such other means as the Secretary determines are appropriate.

(3) In determining the acceptability of contract offers, the Secretary may—

(A) take into consideration the extent of erosion on the land that is the subject of the contract and the productivity of the acreage diverted;

(B) where appropriate, accept contract offers that provide for the establishment of—

(i) shelterbelts and windbreaks; or

(ii) permanently vegetated stream borders, filter strips of permanent grass, forbs, shrubs, and trees that will reduce sedimentation substantially;

(C) establish different criteria in various States and regions of the United States to determine the extent to which erosion may be abated; and

(D) give priority to offers made by owners and operators who are subject to the highest degree of economic stress, such as a general tightening of agricultural credit or an unfavorable relationship between production costs and prices received for agricultural commodities.

(d)(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, payments under this subtitle—

(A) shall be made in cash or in commodities in such amount and on such time schedule as is agreed on and specified in the contract; and

(B) may be made in advance of determination of performance.

(2) If such payment is made with in-kind commodities, such payment shall be made by the Commodity Credit Corporation—

(A) by delivery of the commodity involved to the owner or operator at a warehouse or other similar facility located in the county in which the highly erodible cropland is located or at such other location as is agreed to by the Secretary and the owner or operator;

(B) by the transfer of negotiable warehouse receipts; or

(C) by such other method, including the sale of the commodity in commercial markets, as is determined by the Secretary to be appropriate to enable the owner or operator to receive efficient and expeditious possession of the commodity.

(3) If stocks of a commodity acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation are not readily available to make full payment in kind to the owner or operator, the Secretary may substitute full or partial payment in cash for payment in kind.

(e) If an owner or operator who is entitled to a payment under a contract entered into under this subtitle dies, becomes incompetent, is otherwise unable to receive such payment, or is succeeded by another person who renders or completes the required performance, the Secretary shall make such payment, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary and without regard to any other provision of law, in such manner as the Secretary determines is fair and reasonable in light of all of the circumstances.

(f)(1) The total amount of rental payments, including rental payments made in the form of in-kind commodities, made to an owner or operator under this subtitle for any fiscal year may not exceed $50,000.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall issue regulations—

(i) defining the term "person" as used in this subsection; and

(ii) prescribing such rules as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure a fair and reasonable application of the limitation contained in this subsection.

(B) The regulations issued by the Secretary on December 18, 1970, under section 101 of the Agricultural Act of 1970 (7 U.S.C. 1307), shall be used to determine whether corporations and their stockholders may be considered as separate persons under this subsection.

(3) Rental payments received by an owner or operator shall be in addition to, and not affect, the total amount of payments that such owner or operator is otherwise eligible to receive under this Act or the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.).

CONTRACTS

SEC. 1235. (a)(1) No contract shall be entered into under this subtitle concerning land with respect to which the ownership has changed in the 3-year period preceding the first year of the contract period unless—

(A) the new ownership was acquired by will or succession as a result of the death of the previous owner;

(B) the new ownership was acquired before January 1, 1985; or

(C) the Secretary determines that the land was acquired under circumstances that give adequate assurance that such land was not acquired for the purpose of placing it in the program established by this subtitle.

(2) Paragraph (1) shall not—

(A) prohibit the continuation of an agreement by a new owner after an agreement has been entered into under this subtitle; or

(B) require a person to own the land as a condition of eligibility for entering into the contract if the person—

(i) has operated the land to be covered by a contract under this section for at least 3 years preceding the date of the contract or since January 1, 1985, whichever is later; and

(ii) controls the land for the contract period.

(b) If during the term of a contract entered into under this subtitle an owner or operator of land subject to such contract sells or otherwise transfers the ownership or right of occupancy of such land, the new owner or operator of such land may—

(1) continue such contract under the same terms or conditions;

(2) enter into a new contract in accordance with this subtitle; or

(3) elect not to participate in the program established by this subtitle.

(c)(1) The Secretary may modify a contract entered into with an owner or operator under this subtitle if—

(A) the owner or operator agrees to such modification; and

(B) the Secretary determines that such modification is desirable—

(i) to carry out this subtitle;

(ii) to facilitate the practical administration of this subtitle; or

(iii) to achieve such other goals as the Secretary determines are appropriate, consistent with this subtitle.

(2) The Secretary may modify or waive a term or condition of a contract entered into under this subtitle in order to permit all or part of the land subject to such contract to be devoted to the production of an agricultural commodity during a crop year, subject to such conditions as the Secretary determines are appropriate.

(d)(1) The Secretary may terminate a contract entered into with an owner or operator under this subtitle if—

(A) the owner or operator agrees to such termination; and

(B) the Secretary determines that such termination would be in the public interest.

(2) At least 90 days before taking any action to terminate under paragraph (1) all conservation reserve contracts entered into under this subtitle, the Secretary shall provide written notice of such action to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

BASE HISTORY

SEC. 1236. (a) A reduction, based on a ratio between the total cropland acreage on the farm and the acreage placed in the conservation reserve authorized by this subtitle, as determined by the Secretary, shall be made during the period of the contract, in the aggregate, in crop bases, quotas, and allotments on the farm with respect to crops for which there is a production adjustment program.

(b) Notwithstanding sections 1211 and 1221, the Secretary, by appropriate regulation, may provide for preservation of cropland base and allotment history applicable to acreage converted from the production of agricultural commodities under this section, for the purpose of any Federal program under which the history is used as a basis for participation in the program or for an allotment or other limitation in the program, unless the owner and operator agree under the contract to retire permanently that cropland base and allotment history.

(b) Ineligibility under section 1211 or 1212 of a tenant or sharecropper for benefits shall not cause a landlord to be ineligible for benefits for which the landlord would otherwise be eligible with respect to commodities produced on lands other than those operated by the tenant or sharecropper.

(c) In carrying out subtitles B through E, the Secretary shall provide adequate safeguards to protect the interests of tenants and sharecroppers, including provision for sharing, on a fair and equitable basis, in payments under the program established by subtitle D.

"SEC. 349. (a) For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'governmental entity' means any agency of the United States, a State, or a unit of local government of a State.

"(2) The terms 'highly erodible land' and 'wetland' have the meanings, respectively, that such terms are given in section 1201 of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(3) The term 'wildlife' means fish or wildlife as defined in section 2(a) of the Lacey Act Amendments of 1981 (16 U.S.C. 3371(a)).

"(5) The term 'recreational purposes' includes hunting.

"(b) Subject to subsection (c), the Secretary may acquire and retain an easement in real property, for a term of not less than 50 years, for conservation, recreational, and wildlife purposes.

"(c) Such easement may be acquired or retained for real property if such property—

"(1) is wetland, upland, or highly erodible land;

"(2) is determined by the Secretary to be suitable for the purposes involved;

"(ii) the borrower of such loan is unable, as determined by the Secretary, to repay such loan in a timely manner; or

"(B) is administered under this title by the Secretary; and

"(4) was (except in the case of wetland) row cropped each year of the 3-year period ending on the date of the enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985.

"(d) The terms and conditions specified in each such easement shall—

"(1) specify the purposes for which such real property may be used;

"(2) identify the conservation measures to be taken, and the recreational and wildlife uses to be allowed, with respect to such real property; and

"(3) require such owner to permit the Secretary, and any person or governmental entity designated by the Secretary, to have access to such real property for the purpose of monitoring compliance with such easement.

"(e) Any such easement acquired by the Secretary shall be purchased from the borrower involved by canceling that part of the aggregate amount of such outstanding loans of the borrower held by the Secretary under laws administered by the Farmers Home Administration that bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of the outstanding loans of such borrower held by the Secretary under all such laws as the number of acres of the real property of such borrower that are subject to such easement bears to the aggregate number of acres securing such loans. In no case shall the amount so cancelled exceed the value of the land on which the easement is acquired.

"(f) If the Secretary elects to use the authority provided by this section, the Secretary shall consult with the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service for purposes of—

"(1) selecting real property in which the Secretary may acquire easements under this section;

"(C) has a total estimated cash income during the 12-month period beginning on the date such contract is entered into (including all farm and nonfarm income) that will equal or exceed the total estimated cash expenses to be incurred by the borrower during such period (including all farm and nonfarm expenses); and

"(c) In return for a contract entered into by a lender under subsection (b) for the reduction of the interest rate paid on a loan, the Secretary shall make payments to the lender in an amount equal to not more than 50 percent of the cost of reducing the annual rate of interest payable on such loan, except that such payments may not exceed the cost of reducing such rate by more than 2 percent.

"(d) The term of a contract entered into under this section to reduce the interest rate on a guaranteed loan may not exceed the outstanding term of such loan, or 3 years, whichever is less.

"(2) The value of the homestead property shall be determined insofar as possible by an independent appraisal made within six months from the date of the borrower's application to retain possession and occupancy of the homestead property.

PROTECTION FOR PURCHASERS OF FARM PRODUCTS

SEC. 1324. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) certain State laws permit a secured lender to enforce liens against a purchaser of farm products even if the purchaser does not know that the sale of the products violates the lender's security interest in the products, lacks any practical method for discovering the existence of the security interest, and has no reasonable means to ensure that the seller uses the sales proceeds to repay the lender;

(2) these laws subject the purchaser of farm products to double payment for the products, once at the time of purchase, and again when the seller fails to repay the lender;

(3) the exposure of purchasers of farm products to double payment inhibits free competition in the market for farm products; and

(4) this exposure constitutes a burden on and an obstruction to interstate commerce in farm products.

(b) The purpose of this section is to remove such burden on and obstruction to interstate commerce in farm products.

(c) For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "buyer in the ordinary course of business" means a person who, in the ordinary course of business, buys farm products from a person engaged in farming operations who is in the business of selling farm products.

(2) the term "central filing system" means a system for filing effective financing statements or notice of such financing statements on a statewide basis and which has been certified by the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture; the Secretary shall certify such system if the system complies with the requirements of this section; specifically under such system—

(A) effective financing statements or notice of such financing statements are filed with the office of the Secretary of State of a State.

(B) the Secretary of State records the date and hour of the filing of such statements;

(C) the Secretary of State compiles all such statements into a master list—

(i) organized according to farm products;

(ii) arranged within each such product—

(I) in alphabetical order according to the last name of the individual debtors, or, in the case of debtors doing business other than as individuals, the first word in the name of such debtors; and

(II) in numerical order according to the social security number of the individual debtors or, in the case of debtors doing business other than as individuals, the Internal Revenue Service taxpayer identification number of such debtors; and

(III) geographically by county or parish; and

(IV) by crop year;

(iii) containing the information referred to in paragraph (4)(D);

(D) the Secretary of State maintains a list of all buyers of farm products, commission merchants, and selling agents who register with the Secretary of State, on a form indicating—

(i) the name and address of each buyer, commission merchant and selling agent;

(ii) the interest of each buyer, commission merchant, and selling agent in receiving the lists described in subparagraph (E); and

(iii) the farm products in which each buyer, commission merchant, and selling agent has an interest;

(E) the Secretary of State distributes regularly as prescribed by the State to each buyer, commission merchant, and selling agent on the list described in subparagraph (D) a copy in written or printed form of those portions of the master list described in paragraph (C) that cover the farm products in which such buyer, commission merchant, or selling agent has registered an interest;

(F) the Secretary of State furnishes to those who are not registered pursuant to (2)(D) of this section oral confirmation within 24 hours of any effective financing statement on request followed by written confirmation to any buyer of farm products buying from a debtor, or commission merchant or selling agent selling for a seller covered by such statement.

(3) The term "commission merchant" means any person engaged in the business of receiving any farm product for sale, on commission, or for or on behalf of another person.

(4) The term "effective financing statement" means a statement that—

(B) is signed and filed with the Secretary of State of a State by the secured party;

(C) is signed by the debtor;

(D) contains,

(i) the name and address of the secured party;

(ii) the name and address of the person indebted to the secured party;

(iii) the social security number of the debtor or, in the case of a debtor doing business other than as an individual, the Internal Revenue Service taxpayer identification number of such debtor;

(iv) a description of the farm products subject to the security interest created by the debtor, including the amount of such products where applicable; and a reasonable description of the property, including county or parish in which the property is located;

(E) must be amended in writing, within 3 months, similarly signed and filed, to reflect material changes;

(F) remains effective for a period of 5 years from the date of filing, subject to extensions for additional periods of 5 years each by refiling or filing a continuation statement within 6 months before the expiration of the initial 5 year period;

(G) lapses on either the expiration of the effective period of the statement or the filing of a notice signed by the secured party that the statement has lapsed, whichever occurs first;

(H) is accompanied by the requisite filing fee set by the Secretary of State; and

(I) substantially complies with the requirements of this subparagraph even though it contains minor errors that are not seriously misleading.

(5) The term "farm product" means an agricultural commodity such as wheat, corn, soybeans, or a species of livestock such as cattle, hogs, sheep, horses, or poultry used or produced in farming operations, or a product of such crop or livestock in its unmanufactured state (such as ginned cotton, wool-clip, maple syrup, milk, and eggs), that is in the possession of a person engaged in farming operations.

(6) The term "knows" or "knowledge" means actual knowledge.

(7) The term "security interest" means an interest in farm products that secures payment or performance of an obligation.

(10) The term "person" means any individual, partnership, corporation, trust, or any other business entity.

(11) The term "Secretary of State" means the Secretary of State or the designee of the State.

(d) Except as provided in subsection (e) and notwithstanding any other provision of Federal, State, or local law, a buyer who in the ordinary course of business buys a farm product from a seller engaged in farming operations shall take free of a security interest created by the seller, even though the security interest is perfected; and the buyer knows of the existence of such interest.

(e) A buyer of farm products takes subject to a security interest created by the seller if—

(1)(A) within 1 year before the sale of the farm products, the buyer has received from the secured party or the seller written notice of the security interest organized according to farm products that—

(i) is an original or reproduced copy thereof;

(ii) contains,

(I) the name and address of the secured party;

(II) the name and address of the person indebted to the secured party;

(iii) must be amended in writing, within 3 months, similarly signed and transmitted, to reflect material changes;

(iv) will lapse on either the expiration period of the statement or the transmission of a notice signed by the secured party that the statement has lapsed, whichever occurs first; and

(v) any payment obligations imposed on the buyer by the secured party as conditions for waiver or release of the security interest; and

(B) the buyer has failed to perform the payment obligations, or

(2) in the case of a farm product produced in a State that has established a central filing system—

(A) the buyer has failed to register with the Secretary of State of such State prior to the purchase of farm products; and

(B) the secured party has filed an effective financing statement or notice that covers the farm products being sold; or

(3) in the case of a farm product produced in a State that has established a central filing system, the buyer—

(A) receives from the Secretary of State of such State written notice as provided in subparagraph (c)(2)(E) or (c)(2)(F) that specifies both the seller and the farm product being sold by such seller as being subject to an effective financing statement or notice; and

(B) does not secure a waiver or release of the security interest specified in such effective financing statement or notice from the secured party by performing any payment obligation or otherwise; and

(f) What constitutes receipt, as used in this section, shall be determined by the law of the State in which the buyer resides.

(g)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) and notwithstanding any other provision of Federal, State, or local law, a commission merchant or selling agent who sells, in the ordinary course of business, a farm product for others, shall not be subject to a security interest created by the seller in such farm product even though the security interest is perfected and even though the commission merchant or selling agent knows of the existence of such interest.

(2) A commission merchant or selling agent who sells a farm product for others shall be subject to a security interest created by the seller in such farm product if—

(2) If a security agreement contains a provision described in paragraph (1) and such person engaged in farming operations sells the farm product collateral to a buyer or through a commission merchant or selling agent not included on such list, the person engaged in farming operations shall be subject to paragraph (3) unless the person—

(A) has notified the secured party in writing of the identity of the buyer, commission merchant, or selling agent at least 7 days prior to such sale; or

(B) has accounted to the secured party for the proceeds of such sale not later than 10 days after such sale.

(3) A person violating paragraph (2) shall be fined $5,000 or 15 per centum of the value or benefit received for such farm product described in the security agreement, whichever is greater.

(i) The Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe regulations not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act to aid States in the implementation and management of a central filing system.

(j) This section shall become effective 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

PROHIBITING COORDINATED FINANCIAL STATEMENT

SEC. 1325. The Secretary of Agriculture shall not use or require the submission of the coordinated financial statement referred to in the proposed regulations of the Farmers Home Administration published in the Federal Register of November 8, 1983 (48 F.R. 51312-51317) in connection with an application submitted on or after the date of the enactment of this Act for any loan under any program of the Department of Agriculture carried out by the Farmers Home Administration.

REGULATORY RESTRAINT

SEC. 1326. (a) Congress finds and declares that—

(1) high production costs and low commodity prices have combined to reduce farm income to the lowest levels since the depths of the Depression in the 1930's, to subject many agricultural producers, through no fault of their own, to severe economic hardship, and in many cases temporarily but seriously to impair producers' ability to meet loan repayment schedules in a timely fashion; and

(2) a policy of adverse classification of agricultural loans by bank examiners under these circumstances will trigger a wave of foreclosures and similar actions on the part of banks, thereby depressing land values and prices for agricultural facilities and equipment and having a devastating effect on farmers and the banking industry, and upon rural areas of the United States in general.

(b) It is therefore the sense of Congress that the Federal bank regulatory agencies should ensure, in their examination procedures, that examiners exercise caution and restraint and give due consideration not only to the current cash flow of agricultural borrowers under financial stress, but to factors such as their loan collateral and ultimate ability to repay as well, for so long as the adverse economic effects of the cost-price squeeze of recent years continue to impair the ability of these borrowers to meet scheduled repayments on their loans.

STUDY OF FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

SEC. 1327. (a) The Farm Credit Administration shall conduct a study of the need for the establishment of a fund to be used—

(1) to insure institutions of the Farm Credit System against losses on loans made by such institutions; or

(2) for any other purpose that would—

(A) assist in stabilizing the financial condition of such System; and

(B) provide for the protection of the capital that borrowers of such loans have invested in such System.

(b) In conducting the study required under subsection (a), the Farm Credit Administration shall—

(1) consider the advisability of using the revolving funds provided for under section 4.1 of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2152) to provide initial capital for the fund referred to in subsection (a); and

(2) estimate the amount and level of future assessments levied on institutions of the Farm Credit System that would be necessary to ensure the long-term liquidity of such fund.

(c) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Farm Credit Administration shall submit a report containing the results of the study required under subsection (a) to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

CONTINUATION OF SMALL FARMER TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

SEC. 1328. The Secretary of Agriculture shall, during the period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act and ending on September 30, 1988, maintain at substantially current levels the small farmer training and technical assistance program in the office of the Administrator of the Farmers Home Administration.

STUDY OF FARM AND HOME PLAN

SEC. 1329. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct a study of the appropriateness of the Farm and Home Plan (Form FmHA 431-2) used by the Farmers Home Administration in connection with loans made or insured under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.).

TITLE XIV—AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH, EXTENSION, AND TEACHING

SUBTITLE A—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 1401. This title may be cited as the "National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act Amendments of 1985".

FINDINGS

SEC. 1402. Section 1402 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3101) is amended by—

(1) in paragraph (8)—

(A) striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (N);

(B) inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (O); and

(C) adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(P) research on new or improved food processing (such as food irradiation) or value-added food technologies;";

(2) in paragraph (10)—

(A) striking out "The research" and all that follows through the colon in the matter preceding the subparagraphs and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The research, extension, and teaching programs must be maintained and constantly adjusted to meet ever-changing challenges. National support of cooperative research, extension, and teaching efforts must be reaffirmed and strengthened to meet major needs and challenges in the following areas:";

(B) redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), and (G) as subparagraphs (C), (D), (F), (G), (H), and (I), respectively;

(C) inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) AGRICULTURAL POLICY.—The effects of technological, economic, sociological, and environmental developments on the agricultural structure of the United States are strong and continuous. It is critical that emerging agricultural-related technologies, economic changes, and sociological and environmental developments, both national and international, be analyzed on a continuing basis in an interdisciplinary fashion to determine the effect of those forces on the structure of agriculture and to improve agricultural policy decisionmaking.";

(D) inserting after subparagraph (D) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B)) the following new subparagraph:

"(E) COORDINATION OF BIOTECHNOLOGY RESPONSIBILITIES OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—Biotechnology guidelines and regulations must be made consistent throughout the Federal Government so they may promote scientific development and protect the public. The biotechnology risk assessment processes used by various Federal agencies must be standardized.";

(E) striking out subparagraph (F) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B)) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) NATURAL RESOURCES.—Improved management of soil, water, forest, and range resources is vital to maintain the resource base for food, fiber, and wood production. An expanded research program in the areas of soil and water conservation and forest and range production practices is needed to develop more economical and effective management systems. Key objectives of this research are—

"(i) incorporating water and soil-saving technologies into current and evolving production practices;

"(ii) developing more cost-effective and practical conservation technologies;

"(iii) managing water in stressed environments;

"(iv) protecting the quality of the surface water and groundwater resources of the United States;

"(v) establishing integrated multidisciplinary organic farming research projects, including research on alternative farming systems, that will identify options from which individual farmers may select the production components that are most appropriate for their individual situations;

"(vi) developing better targeted pest management systems; and

"(vii) improving forest and range management technologies that meet demands more efficiently, better protect multiresource options, and enhance quality of output.";

(F) in subparagraph (G) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B))—

(i) striking out "to" before "the economy"; and

(ii) striking out "owner-operated" before "family farms"; and

(G) striking out subparagraph (I) (as redesignated by subparagraph (B)) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(I) INTERNATIONAL FOOD AND AGRICULTURE.—United States agricultural production has proven its ability to produce abundant quantities of food for an expanding world population. Despite rising expectation for improved diets in the world today, there are instances of drought, civil unrest, economic crisis, or other conditions that preclude the local production or distribution of food. There are instances where localized problems impede the ability of farmers to produce needed food products. It is also recognized that many nations have progressive and effective agricultural research programs that produce results of interest and applicability to United States agriculture. The exchange of knowledge and information between nations is essential to the well-being of all nations. A dedicated effort involving the Federal Government, the State cooperative institutions, and other colleges and universities is needed to expand international food and agricultural research, extension, and teaching programs. Improved cooperation and communication by the Department of Agriculture and the cooperators with international agricultural research centers, counterpart agencies, and universities in other nations are necessary to improve food and agricultural progress throughout the world.";

(3) striking out the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(4) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) the agricultural system of the United States—

"(A) is increasingly dependent on science and technology to maintain and improve productivity levels, manage the resource base, provide high quality products, and protect the environment; and

"(B) requires a constant source of food and agricultural scientific expertise to maintain this dynamic system.".

Funds appropriated under this paragraph for any fiscal year shall be allocated to the States on an advance basis, dividing such funds among the States in the same proportions as the commodities distributed under this title for such fiscal year are divided among the States. If a State agency is unable to use all of the funds so allocated to it, the Secretary shall reallocate such unused funds among the other States.

"(2) Each State shall make available to emergency feeding organizations in the State not less than 20 per centum of the funds provided as authorized in paragraph (1) that it has been allocated for a fiscal year, as necessary to pay for, or provide advance payments to cover, the direct expenses of the emergency feeding organizations for distributing commodities to needy persons, but only to the extent such expenses are actually so incurred by such organizations. As used in this paragraph, the term 'direct expenses' includes costs of transporting, storing, handling, and distributing commodities incurred after they are received by the organization; costs associated with determinations of eligibility, verification, and documentation; costs involved in publishing announcements of times and locations of distribution; and costs of recordkeeping, auditing, and other administrative procedures required for participation in the program under this title. No such funds may be used by States or emergency feeding organizations for costs other than those involved in covering the expenses related to the distribution of commodities by emergency feeding organizations.

"(4)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), effective January 1, 1987, to be eligible to receive funds under this subsection, a State shall provide in cash or in kind (according to procedures approved by the Secretary for certifying these in-kind contributions) from non-Federal sources a contribution equal to the difference between—

The Secretary shall periodically reconcile estimated and actual contributions and adjust allocations to the State to correct for overpayments and underpayments.

"(5) States may not charge for commodities made available to emergency feeding organizations, and may not pass on to such organizations the cost of any matching requirements, under this Act.".

GLEANING OF FIELDS

SEC. 1582. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) food banks, soup kitchens, and other emergency food providers help needy persons seeking food assistance at no cost to the Government;

(2) gleaning is a partnership between food producers and nonprofit organizations through which food producers permit members of such organizations to collect grain, vegetables, and fruit which have not been harvested and distribute such items to programs which provide food to needy individuals;

(3) support of gleaning to supply food to the poor is part of the Judeo-Christian heritage as set out in the Book of Leviticus: "When you reap the harvests of your land, do not reap to the very edges of your field or gather the gleanings of your harvest. Do not go over your vineyard a second time or pick up the grapes that have fallen. Leave them for the poor and the alien.";

(4) a 1977 General Accounting Office analysis estimated that during the 1974 harvest 60,000,000 tons of grain, vegetables, and fruit, valued at $5,000,000,000, were unharvested;

(5) the diets of millions of people in the United States could have been supplemented with such lost grain, vegetables, and fruit;

(6) a number of State and local governments have enacted "Good Samaritan" laws which limit the liability of food donors and provide an incentive for food contributions; and

(7) numerous civil, religious, charitable, and other nonprofit organizations throughout the country have begun gleaning programs to harvest such food items and channel them to the needy in the United States.

(b) It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) food producers who permit gleaning of their fields and civic, religious, charitable, and other nonprofit organizations which glean fields and distribute the resulting harvest to help the needy should be commended for their efforts; and

(2) State and local governments should be encouraged to enact tax and other incentives designed to increase the number of food producers who permit gleaning of their fields and the number of shippers who donate, or charge reduced rates for, transportation of gleaned produce.

The Secretary also shall certify that such directors are duly elected by the federation as representatives to the Committee.

The Board shall use, to the extent possible, the resources, staffs, and facilities of existing organizations.

"(5) The order shall provide that terms of appointment to the Committee shall be one year, and that no person may serve on the Committee for more than six consecutive terms. "(C) The order also shall provide that each importer of cattle, beef, or beef products shall pay an assessment, in the manner prescribed by the order, to the Board. The assessments shall be used for payment of the costs of plans and projects, as provided for in paragraph (4), and expenses in administering the order, including more administrative costs incurred by the Secretary after the order has been promulgated under this Act, and to establish a reasonable reserve. The rate of assessment prescribed by the order shall be one dollar per head of cattle, or the equivalent thereof in the case of imported beef and beef products. A producer who can establish that the producer is participating in a program of an established qualified State beef council shall receive credit, in determining the assessment due from such producer, for contributions to such program of up to 50 cents per head of cattle or the equivalent thereof. There shall be only one qualified State beef council in each State. Any person marketing from beef from cattle of the person's own production shall remit the assessment to the Board in the manner prescribed by the order.

"(9) The order shall provide that the Board, with the approval of the Secretary, may invest, pending disbursement, funds collected through assessments only in obligations of the United States or any agency thereof, in general obligations of any State or any political subdivision thereof, in any interest-bearing account or certificate of deposit of a bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve System, or in obligations fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States.

"(10) The order shall prohibit any funds collected by the Board under the order from being used in any manner for the purpose of influencing governmental action or policy, with the exception of recommending amendments to the order.

Such information shall be made available to the Secretary as is appropriate to the administration or enforcement of this Act, the order, or any regulation issued under this Act. In addition, the Secretary shall authorize the use of information regarding persons paying producers that is accumulated under a law or regulation other than this Act or regulations under this Act.

"All information so obtained shall be kept confidential by all officers and employees of the Department, and only such information so obtained as the Secretary deems relevant may be disclosed by them and then only in a suit or administrative hearing brought at the request of the Secretary, or to which the Secretary or any officer of the United States is a party, and involving the order. "REQUIREMENT OF REFERENDUM

"SEC. 7. (a) For the purpose of determining whether the initial order shall be continued, not later than 22 months after the issuance of the order (or any earlier date recommended by the Board), the Secretary shall conduct a referendum among persons who have been producers or importers during a representative period, as determined by the Secretary. The order shall be continued only if the Secretary determines that it has been approved by not less than a majority of the producers voting in the referendum who, during a representative period as determined by the Secretary, have been engaged in the production of cattle. If continuation of the order is not approved by a majority of those voting in the referendum, the Secretary shall terminate collection of assessments under the order within six months after the Secretary determines that continuation of the order is not favored by a majority voting in the referendum and shall terminate the order in an orderly manner as soon as practicable after such determination.

"(b) After the initial referendum, the Secretary may conduct a referendum on the request of a representative group comprising 10 per centum or more of the number of cattle producers to determine whether cattle producers favor the termination or suspension of the order. The Secretary shall suspend or terminate collection of assessments under the order within six months after the Secretary determines that suspension or termination of the order is favored by a majority of the producers voting in the referendum who, during a representative period as determined by the Secretary, have been engaged in the production of cattle and shall terminate or suspend the order in an orderly manner as soon as practicable after such determination.

"(c) The Department shall be reimbursed from assessments collected by the Board for any expenses incurred by the Department in connection with conducting any referendum under this section, except for the salaries of Government employees. "(3) refund assessments to persons in accordance with this section.

"(b) Subject to subsection (f), the Board shall place in such account, from assessments collected under section 7 during the period referred to in subsection (a), an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(2) the greater of—

"(A) the average rate of assessment refunds provided to producers under State beef promotion, research, and consumer information programs financed through producer assessments, as determined by the Board; or

"(1) paid the assessment for which refund is sought; and

"(2) did not collect such assessment from another producer, person, or importer.

"(f)(1) If the amount in the escrow account required to be established by subsection (a) is not sufficient to refund the total amount of assessments demanded by all eligible persons under this section and the continuation of an order is approved pursuant to the referendum required under section 10(a), the Board shall—

"(A) continue to place in such account, from assessments collected under section 5, the amount required under subsection (b), until such time as the Board is able to comply with subparagraph (B); and

"(B) provide to all eligible persons the total amount of assessments demanded by all eligible producers.

"(2) If the amount in the escrow account required to be established by subsection (a) is not sufficient to refund the total amount of assessments demanded by all eligible persons under this section and the continuation of an order is not approved pursuant to the referendum required under section 7(a), the Board shall prorate the amount of such refunds among all eligible persons who demand such refund.

"ENFORCEMENT

"SEC. 9. (a) If the Secretary believes that the administration and enforcement of this Act or an order would be adequately served by such procedure, following an opportunity for an administrative hearing on the record, the Secretary may—

For the purpose of such investigation, the Secretary may administer oaths and affirmations, subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, take evidence, and require the production of any records that are relevant to the inquiry. The attendance of witnesses and the production of records may be required from any place in the United States. In case of contumacy by, or refusal to obey a subpoena to, any person, the Secretary may invoke the aid of any court of the United States within the jurisdiction of which such investigation or proceeding is carried on, or where such person resides or carries on business, in requiring the attendance and testimony of the person and the production of records. The court may issue an order requiring such person to appear before the Secretary to produce records or to give testimony regarding the matter under investigation. Any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. Process in any such case may be served in the judicial district in which such person is an inhabitant or wherever such person may be found.
